ONE DEAD, NINE HURT, IN A GAS EXPLOSION

Theatre Lights Dimmed, Brooklyn Streets Put in Darkness by Blow-Up Under Ground.

'TWAS IN ELECTRIC CONDUIT

Main Cables Burned and Melted—Manhole Cover Blown Off While Fire Truck Was Passing Over It.

There was a muffled roar and then a loud explosion near the corner of John and Gold Streets, Brooklyn, at 7 o'clock last night, and a manhole cover over an entrance to a main conduit of the Brooklyn Edison Electric Illuminating Company was tossed fifty feet into the air, to fall and smash into dozens of pieces a few feet away. From the opening leaped a column of flame, which mounted thirty feet upward like a huge torch.

The preliminary roar had scarcely been dimmed in the crack of the explosion when men, women, and children began to appear in the streets, bareheaded and without street clothes. Two blocks away loomed the bulks of two big gas tanks, the property of the Brooklyn Union Gas Company, and terrified residents of the neighborhood rushed from their homes shouting:

"The gas tanks have gone up. Run for your lives."

The throngs fled heedless of their direction so it be away from the big tanks, so that hundreds of fugitives were close by when a second manhole cover was flung into the air not more than twenty feet away from the scene of the first explosion. There was the same roar, the same sharp crack, and once again the same leaping column of fire.

The running crowd turned back at this new danger, not knowing where to run, but running any way rather than stand still. An instant afterward a third manhole cover was blown up, this one a block away, at John and Plymouth Streets, and presently a half dozen more went flying into the air in half a dozen nearby streets.

Aside from the death and injuries which it caused, the leaking gas main which started the series of explosions, occasioned inconvenience to residents throughout lower Brooklyn, the Borough Hall, and the Heights sections, the Hill and Park Slope neighborhoods, South Brooklyn, lower Williamsburg, and parts of the Bedford locality of Brooklyn. So far as could be learned last night the escaping gas collected in one of the principal conduits of the Brooklyn Edison Electric Illuminating Company, which runs through Gold Street and which carries several big feed wires from which the current is diverted to smaller wires at various points.

From most of them flames rose, and as though these fires afforded an outlet for the accumulated gas beneath the surfaces of the streets, the explosions suddenly ceased. The explosions caused the death of a small boy and injured nine persons. The dead boy was Joseph Kaiser, 13 years old, of 93 Bridge Street.

The injured were:

BRADLEY, JOSEPH, 14 years old, of 89 Jay Street; burned face and hands.
COLE, ARTHUR T., tillerman on Truck 68; badly burned about the face and hands.
KENNY, JOSEPH 50 years old, 234 Front Street; burned about face
KIRK, Battalion Chief; burned hands and face.
LALLY, Deputy Chief; badly burned face.
MANFREDO, ATTILA, 13 years old, 87 John Street; burned face and hands.
MURRAY, Battalion Chief; burned face and hands.
TETTERTON, MARGARET, 4 years old, 17 Green Lane; bruised by being hurled to sidewalk by third explosion.
WARD, Lieut. WILLIAM, Truck 68; burned and bruised.

The explosion of the gas and the subsequent fires burned and melted the main cables so that the supply of electric current for lighting and power use throughout a large part of Brooklyn was shortened far below the normal supply. In many instances lights went out altogether, while in all other parts of the affected districts they burned dimly and with much flickering until nearly 10:30 o'clock. Then the system was reorganized and the lights were on again.

In the theatres, clubs, hotels, restaurants, and moving-picture shows the dimness of the lights caused considerable trouble and threatened in several instances to occasion panics in the audiences. That these were averted was due probably to the forethought of Deputy Fire Chief Lally, who sent word to every theatre and place of public gathering in Brooklyn that trouble might be expected with the lights and that their sudden failure or unusual dimness must not be regarded with alarm.

He explained what had caused the trouble, and in most theatres the management caused announcements to be made from the stage cautioning the audience of what might happen. James Bryce, the British Ambassador, was addressing a gathering under the auspices of the Brooklyn Institute at the Academy of Music when the lights there almost went out.

Chief Lally's warning was issued by him when the explosions were at their height, one of his first acts after reaching Gold Street being to dispatch a messenger to spread this warning. He reached the scene on the first alarm of fire, which was turned in by a policeman as soon as the first manhole cover blew up.

He sent his men to work throwing sand into the manhole and had hurried from the scene of the first explosion to that of the second, when a manhole cover blew up almost under his feet at Plymouth and John Sts. The rush of flames swept up past the Chief, scorching the left side of his face badly. Chiefs Kirk and Murray were beside him at the time and received their injuries at the same time. It was here, too, that the little Kaiser boy was killed.

The youngster had been to the store and was returning home when the explosion came. It tore up the pavement for fifteen feet on all sides of the manhole, and a paving stone struck the boy on the head. His body was carried to the police station, where his mother, looking for her son afterward, identified it. Most of the others who were burned received their injuries at this explosion, probably the largest of them all.

Cole and Ward received their injuries at a fourth explosion in Plymouth Street. Ward is Lieutenant of Truck 68, which is quartered in Fire Headquarters, in Jay Street. Cole is the tillerman.

The truck responded to the fire alarm, but its services were not needed, and Chief Lally ordered it back to quarters. The truck was in Plymotuh Street and directly over a manhole when there was an explosion. The cover was smashed up against the bottom of the machine, and was followed by the usual sheet of flame. The three horses were flung down, all the crew except the driver and Cole, who were strapped to their seats, were tossed off on to the pavement, and Cole and Ward were both burned.

The sequence of the explosions, each one getting nearer and nearer to the big tanks at Water Street, caused the Superintendent there to shut off all gas from the mains of the neighborhood. It was this action probably as much as the fires which started, which allowed the accumulated gas to be consumed so quickly. The explosions did not extend over a period of more than five minutes.

What caused the explosions was not determined last night. Gas had been escaping in Gold Street throughout the afternoon, though how it could have entered the electric conduit is not known. It was suggested that a crossed wire might have supplied a spark which ignited the gas.

ARCHDUKE SHORN OF TITLES.

Austrian Ruler Grants Heir's Wish Following Unauthorized Marriage.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Nov. 17.—This evening's official gazette, the Wiener Abendpost, announces that whereas the Archduke Ferdinand Charles married without the imperial assent in a foreign country some time ago, the Emperor now grants his request to be allowed to resign all his honors and titles as Archduke and his post in the army.

The Archduke will henceforth bear the name of Burg, and he and his wife will reside in the Castle of Rottenstein, at Meran.

The Archduke is the nephew of the Emperor Francis Joseph, and a cousin of the ex-Crown Princess of Saxony. He is 43 years of age, and ten years have passed since he met and fell in love with Fräulein Rosa Cseuber, daughter of a Vienna university professor, whom he married in Switzerland.

He first attempted to gain the Emperor's consent to his marriage with her in 1903. A year later a marriage with a lady of royal blood was arranged for him, but he refused to hear of the project, and retired from the Court in disgrace.

MADERO SCOUTS PLOT.

Doubts if Reyes Is Concerned In Alleged Plan to Kill Him.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 17.—La Nueva Era, a semi-official organ, states that President Madero attaches no importance to the alleged plot to assassinate him for which the Spaniard Juan Fernandez has been arrested, and that Fernandez seems half-witted.

It adds that there is no ground for connecting Gen. Reyes's name with the affair. On the other hand, La Nueva Era accuses Gen. Reyes of fomenting the strike troubles at Torreon.

That Zapata does not take the Federal pursuit of him very seriously is shown by the fact that he took part last Thursday in one of the Morelos villages in an amateur bullfight and roping contest.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Danger of another well-organized and formidable revolutionary movement in Mexico has caused the suspension of the return to their home stations of the American troops sent into the border country during the Madero revolution. The attitude of the United States is one of apprehension of further trouble, against which every precaution is to be taken to insure the strictest neutrality.

Altogether, there are about 5,000 troops in the vicinity of the Mexican border. At San Antonio, there is the Third Cavalry, Twenty-second Infantry, and a battalion of Field Artillery; the Twenty-third Infantry is along the Rio Grande, and the Fourth Cavalry is at El Paso. A portion of the Twelfth Cavalry is at Fort Huachica.

JUDGE GIVES PACKERS HOPE.

Lawyers Say Court's Comment Means a Decision In Their Favor.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—Indicted Chicago meat packers who are seeking a ruling from the United States Supreme Court on the validity of the Sherman Anti-Trust act expressed themselves as much encouraged late to-day when United States Circuit Judge C. C. Kohlsaat said he saw little reason to question the effectiveness of the custody of the defendants under the habeas corpus proceedings now before the court.

The Government contended that the packers were not legally surrendered to Judge Kohlsaat's court under the writ, and that the Circuit Court therefore did not have jurisdiction.

Although Judge Kohlsaat announced that he would not hand down his decision on the Government's motion to quash the habeas corpus writ until to-morrow, some of those interested in the defense hailed the court's remark on the point of custody as a forerunner of victory for the packers in the habeas corpus case.

Comment regarding the point of custody was made by the court while United States District Attorney James H. Wilkerson was concluding his arguments against the packers' writ.

"I don't think there is much question whether those parties were in such custody as would justify the issuance of the writ," said Judge Kohlsaat.

The remark challenged instant attention from lawyers, defendants, and spectators in the court room.

Counsel for both sides finished their arguments on the Government's motion to quash, and Judge Kohlsaat asked for a list of citations advanced in the last two days. The court then announced that his decision would be ready to-morrow morning.

BUY POSTAL BONDS AT PAR.

Government Will Take Any Which Holders Wish to Relinquish.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Conferences between the Postmaster General, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Secretary of Commerce and Labor—the trustees for the Postal Bank system—have resulted in a definite determination to hold the price of the bonds in which depositors invest their savings at par.

The Government has decided to purchase at par all Postal Bank bonds which the holder wishes to relinquish.

The Postmaster General stated that no depositor would endanger his principal by exchanging certificates of deposit for postal savings bonds. Under the Postal Savings act the Board of Trustees is authorized to withdraw at any time 30 per cent. of all postal savings funds on deposit in banks and Post Offices for investment in bonds or other securities of the United States.

In regard to the report that the market value of those bonds is 92, Mr. Hitchcock said that nothing could be more misleading. The only basis for the rumor of an actual sale at that price was an offer the other day by a New York broker to purchase $200 of the bonds below par, which was not accepted by the holder.

Mr. Hitchcock stated that postal savings bonds were not intended for speculation. The purpose of the Board of Trustees was to give to the mass of the people an opportunity for permanent investment in the securities of the National Government. By the purchase of a $20 postal savings bond any thrifty person of limited means may become the creditor of the Nation. The repayment of the investment with accrued interest is secured by the pledged faith of the United States. Of the first issue of bonds 86 per cent. was in the registered form, showing that the intention of the purchasers was to retain them as permanent investments and not to use them for speculation.

SENATORS TO BACK DEMAND ON RUSSIA

Root and O'Gorman Tell Jewish Petitioners All American Passports Must Be Recognized.

SENATE TO TAKE ACTION

Jacob H. Schiff Criticises Ambassador Rockhill and Raps John Hays Hammond, Who Retorts by Wire.

Jacob H. Schiff, the banker, sharply criticised John Hays Hammond and William Woodville Rockhill, former American Ambassador to Russia, yesterday, at a conference between United States Senators Root and O'Gorman and a number of this city's prominent Jews. Among others at the meeting were Oscar and Nathan Straus, Edward Lauterbach, Louis Marshall, Judges Lachman and Platzek, Joseph Barondess, the labor leader; Jacob Saphirstein, and I. N. Seligman.

They assembled in Senator O'Gorman's office at 37 Wall Street to enlist the support of the two United States Senators from New York in having the Senate either force Russia to live up to the terms of the Russian-American Treaty of 1832 in recognizing the passports of Jewish-American citizens and others, or to abrogate the treaty entirely, although it is one of the oldest in existence between the United States and any European Power.

Louis Marshall, first of the spokesmen, pointed out that for nearly forty years Russia had departed from the accepted interpretation of the treaty by refusing to recognize passports issued by the State Department at Washington when presented by Jews, Roman Catholic priests, and Protestant missionaries.

Senator Root, while Secretary of State, made vain attempts to have Russia observe the treaty, and Senator Root followed Mr. Marshall with brief statements to the effect that he and his colleague intended to give their support to the resolution now pending in the United States Senate to abrogate the treaty unless Russia immediately abandons her present attitude.

Mr. Schiff told of the efforts that had been made to get the President to do something. He said:

"President Taft has assured many delegations from New York and other cities that this matter of the discrimination against certain classes of American citizens in Russia would be looked into. He called the attention of Mr. Rockhill, then Ambassador, to it, and Ambassador Rockhill said he considered the matter of no importance. Mr. Rockhill said he was very busy trying to arrange certain matters of business for American manufacturers in Russia, and that he had no time to spend upon getting a direct construction of the treaty from the Russian Government.

"Here is another example of the difficulty of trying to make Russia treat our citizens as they should be treated: Mr. Wilenkin, a former agent of the Russian Government, came to this country recently. He called at my office and urged me to use my influence to obtain financial footing for Russia in this country. I answered that, for certain reasons, I did not see my way to do it. He went away somewhat crestfallen, but returned in a few weeks, rejoicing.

"'I have found a syndicate of American manufacturers who are prepared to export American manufactures in large quantities to Russia,' he said, jubilantly. 'American plants are going to be built by this syndicate in Russia. These plants will be under American management. It will be of great advantage to America. It will bring America and Russia much closer together.'

"'Who is at the head of your syndicate?' I asked him, with some curiosity.

"'John Hays Hammond,' he answered.

"'But John Hays Hammond is a mining engineer—and not a very good engineer at that,' I told him.

"'I know that,' Mr. Wilenkin answered. 'But he has been chosen because he has influence with President Taft.'

"Now you see how the Russian shows his hand," Mr. Schiff continued, with a little gesture of dissatisfaction, while the whole roomful listened intently. "Mr. Hammond subsequently did go over to Russia, and he later came back to this country proclaiming that the Czar of Russia was the best-disposed monarch on earth.

"Russia has an opinion now that it can even influence the President of the United States. Think what an insult that is to this great free country. Think of the insult to the President. These are facts which I have been speaking, not just theories.

Considerable interest was expressed among the petitioners, before the meeting, as to the stand that Senator O'Gorman would take on the abrogation of the Russian Treaty. This is what Senator O'Gorman said:

"The grievance of which you complain seems to be well founded and in my judgment calls for immediate redress. For more than thirty years Russia has disregarded the provisions of the Treaty of 1832, which requires equality of treatment of the citizens and subjects of the two Nations.

"During all of this period our Government has insisted that Russia's interpretation of the treaty is unreasonable and contrary to the intent of the contracting parties, but our remonstrances have accomplished nothing. As the treaty is being persistently violated, the only honorable course left open to us is to abrogate it. Our right to do so cannot be questioned. As a Nation we are not concerned with the internal policies of foreign Powers, but we cannot concede the right to any Government with which we have treaty relations to discriminate between American citizens because of religious belief.

"Under the genius of our institutions no such discrimination is permissible in this land and we cannot allow our citizens to be subjected to such treatment abroad. The American people will tolerate no treaty that excludes from its protection two million of our citizens.

"Entertaining these views, I shall give my support to the resolution now pending in the Senate unless Russia immediately abandons her present attitude, which is irreconcilable with our treaty rights and the rights guaranteed all citizens by the fundamental law of the Republic."

Senator Root explained to the petitioners that the subject was not a new one to him.

"One encouraging thing about our relations with the Nations of the Old World," said he, "is that, by long and patient action, this country has gradually succeeded in making them see things in our way. There is no doubt but what Russia has disregarded the treaty in the last few years. I feel honored at being requested by the distinguished citizens present to use my influence to see that Russia will change her construction of the treaty. I will certainly use my influence to do so."

Mr. Marshall called attention to the experience last Summer of the proprietor of an influential east side Jewish newspaper who wanted to go to Russia, and was unable to obtain a vise of his passport by the Russian Consul in New York, although he subsequently had no difficulty in getting such a vise from the Russian Consul in London.

EXPRESS MESSENGER KILLED BY A ROBBER

SLAYER ESCAPES WITH LOOT

Special to The New York Times.

SCRANTON, Penn., Nov. 17.—An express robbery which resulted in the murder of an unarmed messenger was brought to light to-night when Irving G. Barger was found dead in his car in a local train on the Bloomsburg Division of the Lackawanna Railroad. The messenger's pockets were empty. His skull was fractured, and there was a bullet wound behind the left ear.

When the train arrived in this city one of the doors was open, indicating that the murderer had jumped off. Merchandise in the car had been disarranged, showing there had been a struggle. The messenger lay in a pool of blood behind a pile of milk cans. His revolver was found locked in his trunk.

F. E. Best, Division Manager of the United States Express Company, says that money and valuables were taken from the messenger, but this cannot be learned definitely until to-morrow, when the waybills are checked up.

Barger was alive when the train stopped at Taylor, five miles below this city, showing that the murder took place between 8:26 and 8:30 o'clock. The train left Northumberland at 5 o'clock. It made its regular stop at Taylor, just south of Scranton, at 8:26.

Barger was seen by train hands at work in the car while the train was at Taylor. When the train arrived at Scranton four minutes later Barger was dead. The robber, it is supposed, got into the car at Taylor, and surprising Barger at work, killed and robbed him, and then dropped off the train as it slowed up on entering the Scranton yards.

The theory on which the police are working is that the robber hid in the expressage at the end of the car until approaching Scranton. Barger put his revolver into the safe and then shot him. The messenger's revolver was in the safe, which was locked, the key being in the dead man's pocket.

Nothing was taken from the safe as at first reported. The blanks found on the desk indicated that Barger was checking up money packages at the desk when he was shot down. The money packages are carried from the car by the messenger in a satchel and deposited in the Scranton office.

It is believed that most of the booty was in checks consigned by banks down the country to the First National Bank in this city and that the robber will not profit to any considerable extent from his crime.

Railroad detectives believe the man who did the shooting was familiar with the conditions under which Barger worked.

Barger was 45 years old and lived in South Scranton.

ROBBED BY WOMEN, HE SAYS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—That women card sharps are robbing rich men in the fashionable hotels of this city became known to-day when a man told the police he had been fleeced of nearly $1,000. He said they were refined, well gowned, and handsome, and that they kept him well supplied with wine during the play.

The victim said he was married and feared the humiliation which publicity would bring him, hence he refused to give his name. He said he and others have learned their lesson and prefer to be silent.

The women he said vied with each other for the privilege of being hostess when it became necessary for them to transfer operations from hotels to their homes. The hostess, he said, received $10 to $100 in addition to her share of the money which the ring extracts from its victim.

"There are two hotels in Chicago," he said, "where these women are doing business every afternoon. With them I have seen notorious card and dice sharpers."

At the head of another gang which has its headquarters, he said, in another hotel is a well-known professional man. He has surrounded himself with pretty women to facilitate the robbing of rich men. Among the victims of the women, he said, were several men prominent in the city. One, a meat market owner, not long ago lost $700 at dice in one afternoon, and a coal dealer, he said, lost $1,400 in a half-hour sitting.

MILLIONAIRE JURY STIRRED.

Hears Forty-one Insanity Cases—James A. Patten Weeps.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 17.—Jurors whose aggregate wealth totals more than $200,000,000 listened to forty-one insanity cases at the detention hospital to-day. Responding to the call of the law, the millionaire jury sat for hours transfixed by the parade of wrecked manhood and womanhood that appeared.

Among the wealthier of the jurors were Harold McCormick, treasurer of the International Harvester Company; James A. Patten, the cotton speculator; Fred A. Bullen, the brewer; Eames MacVeagh, son of the Secretary of the Treasury, and Honore Palmer, brother of Mrs. Potter Palmer.

A pathetic incident was a visit to the ward of incurables. After hearing the evidence, the court ruled that the jury should be taken to the ward where an unfortunate man was professing his sanity. When the jurymen turned away from the cell smiles had faded, and they walked back to the council chamber in silence. Mr. Patten was visibly affected. Tears ran down his cheeks and he made no effort to conceal his emotion.

One possible result of having insane cases heard by the millionaires is a large endowment for better housing of the State's insane wards. It was rumored that the members of the jury would confer in the near future with the object of bettering the care of patients.

DUEL TO THE DEATH OVER A BIT OF ROPE

WOUNDED SURVIVOR FLEES

Then Walks Into Police Station and Tells of the Fight While Detectives Are Out Hunting for Him.

Over the telephone to Lieut. Ross at the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station at 6 o'clock last night came a message from Patrolman McKnight, stationed at the foot of West Forty-eighth Street, telling of a revolver duel between two men on the water front. The men had faced each other and deliberately exchanged at least a dozen shots until one of them, William Scott, a river junkman, who lives in the basement of 1,466 St. Nicholas Avenue, toppled over. Dr. Miller of Flower Hospital had declared that a bullet striking just over the heart had caused instant death. Scott's slayer, so witnesses said, had tossed his revolver into the river and made his escape.

Lieut. Ross sent detectives out to help McKnight get the slayer and went on about his business. Not more than ten minutes later a well-dressed young man walked into the station house, and, waiting quietly until Lieut. Ross had a leisure moment, stepped up to the desk.

"Officer," he said, "a fellow comes up to me at the foot of Forty-eighth Street and he said I knowed something about some rope that was stolen. He said he'd croak me if I didn't tell him where it was. I said I didn't know nothing about it, and then he shot me. He shot me here and here," pointing to two bullet holes in his coat, one on the left shoulder, and one on the right hip. The Lieutenant noticed for the first time that the coat was soaked with blood.

"Here's a case for you, McGee, a man shot," the Lieutenant called to Detective McGee. "I'll call an ambulance. You see what he has to say."

"I don't want an ambulance, and I won't go to the hospital," the young man, who had been wrapping a handkerchief about his wounded shoulder, broke in. "He shot me and then I shot him, and I left him there. That's all there is to this."

"You shot him, did you?" exclaimed the Lieutenant, "is he dead?"

"I don't know. I left him on the dock," answered the young man, and he bent over to stop the flow of blood from his hip. "His name's Scott."

Lieut. Ross recalled the message that had come a few minutes before.

"Well, he's dead, all right," he said.

Detective McGee took the young man into the rear room and then said that he was Walter T. Scott, a former chauffeur, now employed as a watchman on the dock at the foot of West Forty-eighth Street. Dr. Miller, who had come from the scene of the shooting to the station house, looked him over and said that while his condition was not serious there was a bullet in his left shoulder, which might cause trouble. He wanted the young man to go to the hospital so that the arm could be operated on, but this he absolutely refused to do, and after his wounds had been dressed was locked up.

The prisoner said that he was 29 years old and lived at 415 West Forty-eighth Street. Although their names were the same, he was not related to the dead man, he said.

Assistant District Attorney Hammill, who is in charge of the Homocide Bureau, and Assistant District Attorney McDonald hurried to the West Forty-seventh Street Station. With Detective McGee they closely questioned the prisoner, but he stuck to his first version of the shooting.

In a signed statement he said that William Scott had come to the shanty which he as watchman occupied at Forty-eighth Street and the North River, and had accused him of knowing about the stolen rope. When he denied that he was mixed up in the theft, William Scott, he said, drew a revolver and began to shoot at him. The first shot struck the shanty and then they ran out into the street, and the duel which ended in William Scott's death began. The revolver he used, the prisoner said, he had found in the shanty, and he was unable to tell what he did with it after the shooting. He concluded his statement with the words:

"I suppose I shot him."

A .32-calibre revolver, with the cartridges in all its six chambers discharged, was found by the body of the dead man, and there were more cartridges in his pocket.

Three men, who said they saw the shooting, and that William Scott, the dead man, fired the first shot, were held at the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station late last night as material witnesses. They are Thomas Lennon of 561 West Fiftieth Street, Joseph Lennon of 561 West Fiftieth Street, and William O'Brien of 450 West Forty-eighth Street. O'Brien said he had been in partnership with the dead man.

TROLLEY LOANS BREAK BANK.

The National of Washington, N. J., Closes Its Doors.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, N. J., Nov. 17.—Excessive loans made to trolley companies have drawn so heavily on the resources of the Washington National Bank that its doors were closed to-day and the Controller of the Currency took charge. The trolley loans are given as the cause of the bank's failure by Robert M. Petty, the President, who is President of the Easton and Washington Traction Company, now known as the Northampton, Easton and Washington Traction Company. The line was built four years ago.

The President said he did not think any depositors would lose any money. He is at the head of a number of industrial enterprises, but it is not known if such interests will suffer. The notice that the bank was insolvent and that the Controller had taken charge greeted early comers when the hour for opening came.

The officers besides the President are: Vice President—Thomas A. Hay, and Cashier—R. M. Ellenberger. The Directors are J. C. Hill, Frank Brugler, William Miller, Edward S. Marlatt, William Cowell, and the officers.

The bank was organized in 1898 and is capitalized at $50,000. The statement of Sept. 1, the last issued, showed total resources of $406,882.77, surplus and undivided profits of $56,247, individual deposits of $183,353.80, and notes and bills rediscounted, $80,594. Petty is owner of 178 of the 500 shares of the bank's stock.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—M. C. Elliott, National Bank Examiner, was appointed receiver for the Washington National Bank of Washington, N. J. Mr. Elliott is now in Pittsburgh, and pending his arrival in Washington, N. J., the bank will be in charge of National Bank Examiner Richard W. Goodharp.

KAISER NOT PUNISHING HEIR.

Report That Prince Was to Undergo a Month's Detention Is Denied.

DANTZIC, Germany, Nov. 17.—There is no truth in the report widely circulated to-day that Crown Prince Frederick William has been ordered to undergo a month's detention for his recent public display of opposition to the Government's settlement of the Franco-German controversy over Morocco.

The Court Marshal of the Crown Prince was loath to dignify such a report with a formal denial. He did, however, call particular attention to the fact that the Crown Prince, far from undergoing detention, was attending to his military duties, and he pointed out that this would be impossible if he was under arrest. The Marshal further declared that the Crown Prince was appearing daily in public.

THREATENS BIG GAS STRIKE.

Ultimatum Sent to All the Companies Warning Against Discharges.

President Henry Kane of the Gas Workers' Union announced at a secret meeting of the union at the Manhattan Labor Temple, East Eighty-fourth Street, last night, that he had sent to the Presidents of each of the thirteen gas companies in the city a general strike ultimatum, to the effect that if three members of the union were discharged by any of the companies a general strike of the gas workers, who now number 32,000 in Manhattan and Brooklyn, would be called.

The union does not plan to make any aggressive move, he said, but if such a move is made by the employers the men will be called out.

Mr. Kane reported to the union that there is a small strike on at the Union Gas Works at 138th Street and Locust Avenue, where the fire cleaners quit work yesterday because they were kept on a twelve-hour shift.

DISMISS NIOBE LIEUTENANT.

Officer of Stranded Canadian Cruiser Also Reprimanded by Court.

HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 17.—Lieut. Charles White, who was on duty when the Canadian cruiser Niobe stranded near Cape Sable last July, was to-day ordered dismissed from the ship and severely reprimanded by the British naval court martial in session in this city.

CRYSTAL PALACE SOLD.

Lord Plymouth Buys It for $1,050,000—Will Hold It for Nation's Offer.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Earl of Plymouth has purchased the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, one of the great amusement places of England, for $1,050,000.

BRITISH PROPOSAL TO CUBA.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The British Government has suggested to the Government of Cuba that claims arising from the destruction of the property of British subjects during the Cuban war for independence against Spain, be submitted to arbitration.

Recently the diplomatic representatives of Great Britain, France, and Germany at Havana presented a joint note to the Cuban Government asking what was to be done in reference to the war claims of their respective Governments. No reply from the Cuban State Department has been made public.

CAPTAIN ILL, SHIP RUSHED IN.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 17.—Capt. William Rode of the German steamer Schonfels, from Calcutta, having been stricken with cerebral hemorrhage eleven days ago, the vessel, under command of Chief Mate John Muller, was pushed to her highest speed, and while passing Highland Light early to-day signals were hoisted calling for immediate medical assistance.

A tug with Port Physician Francis K. Crawford on board met the steamer below Highland to-night and Capt. Rode was given medical attention. He will be brought ashore and taken to one of the city hospitals. It is believed that he will recover. Capt. Rode lives in Hamburg, where he has a wife and family.

CARDINAL GETS $50,000 GIFT.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 17.—Cardinal Gibbons was surprised and pleased yesterday by the gift of $50,000 for the Catholic University at Washington. The method of presentation was as unusual as its size.

Coming unheralded, a man, whose name the Cardinal withheld in the absence of permission to reveal it, but who, he said, was from Philadelphia and a Catholic, called upon the Cardinal and placed in his hands $50,000 in first-class securities for the establishment of a chair in the new Gibbons Memorial Hall at the Washington Institution.

While the Cardinal said to-night he would not announce the name of the donor for several days, as he had been requested not to do so, it was learned that the donor is John J. Ryan, a prominent master builder of Philadelphia, and that the money is to be used for the establishment of a chair in Catholic History, to be known as the Gibbons professorship.

HUNT FOR SERVICE REFORM.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 17.—Mayor-elect Hunt announced on his return to-day from the Municipal Convention in Richmond, Va., that he will ask the Civil Service Reform Association to investigate the present City Civil Service Commission, and that the Commissioners will be asked on Jan. 1 to announce examinations for every office in the list except those of Service and Safety Director and one or two other heads of departments.

"I am influenced to do this for my own protection," he said. "Every applicant will be referred to the examination lists. If I appointed all myself it would be a temptation to build up a political machine. If I followed the suggestion of some one else in making of appointments it would be equally bad.

"We don't want to have to ask for another increase in the tax rate next year, and to avod that the city must be run with the greatest possible economy. That means every office employe must hold his place because of efficiency, and the greatest efficiency will be secured when each employe knows he is under Civil Service. I will be glad to be relieved of the burden and responsibility of selection."

ALL SAFE IN WRECK OF STEEL CAR TRAIN

PENNSYLVANIA LINE BLOCKED

Tracks Twisted Near Monmouth Junction—L. Lea, Once Football Star, Rescues Crew from Under Engine.

The Pennsylvania Railroad's Philadelphia-New York Express Train 132, which left Philadelphia at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon and was scheduled to make the run into the Pennsylvania Station here practically without stops in two hours, left the rails last evening an hour out from Philadelphia while making a "crossover" from Track 1 to Track 2 to pass around an eastbound train, which was standing on Track 1 in the Monmouth Junction Station.

The wreck tore both tracks from their ties for a distance of 150 feet, and tied up all traffic over the New York Division for four hours. Yet no lives were lost among the passengers, not a window pane was broken in any of the seven cars, and no passenger received so much as a scratch.

The locomotive, one of the newest and largest types in the Pennsylvania's service, turned completely over, and the sand box, smoke stack, and whistle were torn away from the top of the boiler. Henry Martindale, a veteran engineer of the Pennsylvania Road, who had operated this train for two years, was probably mortally scalded, while J. J. Ramsey, the fireman who was in the cab with him, was severely injured.

Officials of the railroad, after an investigation, blamed Engineer Martindale for the wreck. They declared that he failed to obey signals flashed to him from two towers telling of the train on the track ahead and warning him to slow down to fifteen miles per hour to take the crossover switch. They say that he actualy took the switch at fifty miles an hour and that the locomotive refused to follow the rails at that great speed.

Saved by the Steel Cars.

As the locomotive left the track, taking a baggage car and two parlor cars with it, and went crunching and grinding over the ties and road ballast, it began to reel after making 100 feet, and in another fifty feet turned turtle. The first car behind it, the baggage car, also partly overturned, but the next two cars remained upright, although they were off the track.

A coupling pin between the fourth and fifth cars parted, leaving the rear three cars on the tracks, which twisted under their weight, as they refused to telescope or buckle, into a serpentine shape, which was the greatest tribute, the railroad men said, ever paid to the efficiency as life savers of the new steel railroad coaches.

There were 200 passengers in the train. Except that a few women became hysterical they emerged through the front and rear doors of their coaches smiling and wondering what all the trouble was about.

Passengers in describing their experiences at the moment of the crash as the locomotive overturned declared almost without exception that they were not hurled forward, and were not even compelled to grasp the seat in front of them. They said the only motion noticeable was a sereve sidewise lurch.

This the railroad officials said was to be explained through the fact that when it came to a situation in which the weakest point had to give, the rails and ties gave instead of the cars, and what the people felt was the wholesale shifting of the roadbed in a quick jump to one side instead of the usual forward lurching of old-style cars, as in wrecks they piled up in a heap or telescoped together.

There was no wood in the train, every car from the baggage coach to the rear day coach being of equally strong steel construction, with cement floors and steel window frames.

The passengers watched the engineer and fireman being dragged from a cloud of steam that enveloped the engine, and then went to the Monmouth Junction Hotel, 100 feet away, where they waited while an accommodation train was made up to bring them on to New York.

Many of them sent telegrams to relatives, assuring them that they had been in a wreck but were safe. The telegrams alarmed the recipients, several hundred of whom rushed to the Pennsylvania Station here. The station master, who allowed them to enter the train platform on which the Monmouth Junction special was coming in, remarked afterward that hey were much more disturbed than those who had been through the wreck.

The passengers from the wrecked train arrived here at 8 P. M., having been brought in on an electric shuttle train service from Manhattan Transfer, to which the Monmouth Junction special, a steam train, carried them. They chuckled as they told of the steel-car safety that saved them from the wreck's possible horrors.

Old Football Hero to the Rescue.

That Martindale, the engineer, and Ramsey, the fireman, were not more severely scalded was due to the quick emergency work of Langdon Lea, a famous athlete of Princeton University, who in his junior year was Captain and tackle of the 1905 football team.

Lea, who since graduating in 1906, has been a business man in Philadelphia, was on his way to New Haven to witness the Yale-Princeton football game, scheduled for to-day. As he is an advisory coach of the Princeton team he was anxious to arrive in New Haven early. With him in the rear coach of the Philadelphia express were Dr. Macey Brooks of Philadelphia, and James Spear, a Philadelphia business man, both of whom were classmates of Lea's in the Princeton class of 1906, and were accompanying him to the football game.

As the crunch came Lea was just remarking upon the football training of "Big Bill" Edwards, and the way this training enabled him to "hit the line hard" when the sudden emergency occured aboard the ship on which Mayor Gaynor was shot as he was about to start upon his vacation in 1910.

"Seems like we're smashing up," remarked Dr. Brooks as the car shifted suddenly to the left and he was thrown against Lea. Both men rushed out the rear door of their car, and as they did so they heard a loud explosion in front. They saw a cloud of steam arising from the overturned locomotive, and Lea started at full speed down the line of cars.

There were dozens who might have preceded him to the locomotive, but in the moment of excitement they were standing about in a helpless condition.

Lea, as he reached the locomotive, plunged down underneath it in the cloud of steam and shouted that he had found two men. He noticed that a steel footplate connecting the locomotive to its tender had been overturned and that this was pinning the men in. A jet of steam was rushing directly against the footplate and Lea had much difficulty in getting it loose.

He is a powerful man, weighing over 200 pounds, and he has not abandoned his athletic training since leaving college. He pried the footplate loose, removed it from the locomotive and then pulled out Martindale.

The engineer's clothes were drenched with hot steam, and the flesh was falling from his right arm where the heat had been most intense. After laying Martindale down on the roadbed Lea went under the locomotive again and this time brought out Ramsey, who was unconscious. He was bleeding profusely from gashes in his head, which had been jammed into the sharp rocks of the roadbed ballast. The scalding steam had not affected his body as much as it had that of Martindale, and it seemed that there was some chance for him.

Dr. Brooks, Lea's classmate, who had come running behind him toward the locomotive, was without his instrument kit, but he started to work with a pocketknife to cut loose Martindale's clothing, as he said the steam-drenched cloth was keeping the head imprisoned against the body and making the pain of the wounds more intense.

To his assistance came Miss Catherine Stryker, a granddaughter of Dr. Stryker, who was for many years on the Faculty of Princeton University. She had just been graduated as a trained nurse from the Plainfield Hospital, and was in Monmouth Junction as a visitor. The cloud of steam arising from the locomotive and the noise of the wreck had brought her running to the railroad tracks with her hands filled with bandages and a bedsheet brought to supply an extra amount.

As soon as Miss Stryker saw the two scalded men she called out to Mrs. Max Philisky, wife of the manager of the Monmouth Junction Hotel, asking her to bring all the sweet oil she could find or buy in the neighborhood. The two injured men were carried under her direction and that of Dr. Brooks into a railroad signal tower house governing the switch that the train had failed to take. There Miss Stryker wrapped their wounds after liberally applying olive oil obtained from an Italian grocery store. In order to provide more comfortable quarters they were taken to the Monmouth Junction Hotel, and there they rested for an hour before regular medical attention could be given them by surgeons summoned from St. Peters's Hospital in New Brunswick.

Both men were taken on a special train to the New Brunswick hospital, where it was said last night that there was little hope that Martindale would recover.

Stephen Corbosa, flagman, was so close to the locomotive when the steam burst forth from it that he was scalded about the hands and face. He was treated by Dr. Edgar Carrol, County Physician of Middlesex County.

The train in front was clearly visible from the scene of the wreck. A preliminary signal to slow down had been given to the express train half a mile west of the accident, and another was flashing to the train from a tower house just beside the wreck. How the engineer could have failed to obey the signals puzzled the railroad officials, especially in view of the fact that he was thoroughly familiar with the particular train on which he was running and of the usual necessity of crossing to Track 2 at Monmouth Junction in order to go around a local train.

Trainmaster M. S. Tomilson of the New York Division had charge of the work of clearing up the wreckage. He found that the serpentine form the track had taken was something not previously encountered in railroad wrecks and was harder to deal with than even a car off the track, as the cars could not be moved on account of the bends in the rails, even though they had not overturned or left the track.

By 9 o'clock Tomilson had Track No. 4 open for traffice and by 11 o'clock reported that Track No. 1 was open. Tracks 2 and 3, across which the locomotive and first baggage car fell, were still obstructed at midnight.

"I hope to have them open," said the trainmaster, "in time to handle the crowds of Princeton students who will start to-morrow for the Yale-Princeton game. I have seen many railroad wrecks in my day, but I never saw one like this before in which there were no passengers killed. If wooden cars had figured in that smash we'd have had two score of killed and injured, at least."

While the Pennsylvania's tracks were closed between 5 o'clock and 9 o'clock, passengers westbound over the Pennsylvania lines were transferred at Elizabeth to trains of the Reading Railroad, by which they continued to Philadelphia.

While the Reading and other railroads helped in caring for through traffic local traffic from Monmouth Junction westward was hopelessly stalled. A local train which makes up in Monmouth Junction for Philadelphia way stations, and is scheduled out of Monmouth Junction at 7:05 o'clock, did not leave last night until 9:45 o'clock. In the meantime a large number of people employed in factories along the Pennsylvania lines waited on station platforms as there was no other way of reaching their home towns.

The train schedule out of the Pennsylvania Station here was thrown out through the entire evening, although the railroad announced that it was running trains "on a detour over the Amboy Division by way of Perth Amboy and Morris Junction." One conductor, scheduled to leave the Pennsylvania Station on an express train at 6:04 o'clock, found himself after leaving under orders to run as a local over the Amboy Division.

Mrs. Anna Kelly, who lives in Osage Avenue, Philadelphia, described her experiences on arriving at the Pennsylvania Station. She was in the fourth coach, the first of those which remained on the rails.

"I sat in my seat," she said, "knowing something awful had happened, but at a loss to know what it was. I was thrown sidewise in my seat, and I wondered why the windows didn't fall out. Then I started to laugh—I suppose I was hysterical, but everybody seemed so orderly it was hard to scream or get frightened."

"I was in the third coach from the rear," he said. "No one seemed to be particularly frightened, however, until our coach and those behind us began a jerky sidewise movement. The coaches remained on the rails, but the whole roadbed was suddenly swerved to the right, tearing other roadbeds with it as if they were so much paper.

"When we came to a stop we all got out. Not only was no one injured, but there wasn't a spar of steel in the coach which was in any way distorted. If the train had consisted of wooden coaches one of two things would have happened. The front part of each coach would have reared up in the air or it would have telescoped with the rear of the coach ahead. Steel coaches don't do this, it seems, and because of that several hundred lives were undoubtedly saved."

It was suggested to Trainmaster Tomlinson, the railroad's senior officer at the scene of the wreck, that it much resembled, as to cause, the wreck of the Federal Express, on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad near Bridgeport, Conn., last Spring, in which twelve people lost their lives.

"Yes it does resemble that wreck," he replied, "and I don't see any human way the railroads can free their trains from the danger of such wrecks. They cannot force their engineers by any invention of which I have ever heard to look at the signals set for them and fix their airbrakes in response to the signals."

HELD UP PHILADELPHIA OPERA.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 16.—Just when a lovely fairy godmother at the Metropolitan Opera House here to-night had rescued Cinderella from her chimney corner, had robed her gayly, and was on the point of starting her off to the wondrous ball, to the meeting with her Prince and all the other beautiful things that happen to her, there came a setback in her fortunes, and the audience shivered for an hour in apprehension that Cinderella would remain Cinderella after all—rags, chimney corner, cinders, and all.

Miss Mary Garden is the Prince. He—or, that is to say, she—was called to New York this afternoon to see a member of her family, who is ill. Her train was delayed by the Pennsylvania wreck at Monmouth Junction. It was necessary for Miss Garden to return from the scene of the wreck to Elizabeth and there resume her journey to Philadelphia over the Jersey Central and the Reading. All of this took time, so that the second act of "Cendrillon," in which, for the first time, the Prince appears, could not start at all. Hence the wait.

The wait stretched to a long half hour, and then Mr. Dippel came to the rescue of Cinderella, the fairy godmother, and the audience—more particularly the audience. Announcement of the predicament of the Prince was made from the stage, along with the assurance that Mr. Dippel was arranging an "international song-service" to fill the gap.

Into the great hall where the Prince's ball should have been under way, and where the naughty sisters should have been enjoying their short-lived triumph, a piano was wheeled, and volunteer singers, costumed for the deferred second act, thereupon proceeded to win adherents for concert against opera. Miss Teyte, in the fairy fabrics of Cendrillon, sang four songs. Hector Defranne sang an aria from "Lakme." Miss Reigelman an arietto from "Die Freischutz" and an American song, "The Brass Band," by a fellow-townsman of hers from Oakland, and Miss Dufrau, the fairy godmother, sang "The King of Thule" and "Jewel Song" from "Faust."

This brought the clock to 10:10. Then it was announced that Miss Garden had arrived. A few minutes later the curtain was up for the second act, the imperturbable prima donna swept into the opening aria, and Massenet's tuneful opera went on.

DIFFER WITH JUDGES ON FINING SMUGGLERS

Jewelers Arraign Crooked Importers as Dangerous Enemies of the Social Fabric.

WOULD JAIL ALL OF THEM

Fines Won't Stop the Rich as Long as There's 50 Per Cent. Profit in Crime—Honest Trade Suffers.

The opinions of United States Court Judges Martin and Holt that smugglers ought not to be imprisoned if the lighter punishment of a fine would serve the cause of justice, which were printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday, aroused strong opposition last night from Meyer D. Rothschild, President of the National Jewelers' Board of Trade. It was to this board that United States District Attorney Wise made the speech that led the Judges to declare their position concerning the punishment that ought to be dealt out to convicted smugglers.

"I do not want to appear in the position of criticising our Judges," said Mr. Rothschild, "but I am strongly of the opinion that a smuggler is a dangerous criminal and that he ought to be dealt with accordingly. It seems to be that when the Judges again consider the evils that these men do that fines will not be deemed adequate punishment for them.

"A poor Syrian, convicted of smuggling a harp into this country, was sent to prison for seven months, not because of the fact that he attempted to evade paying duty on the instrument, but because he committed perjury. Why, every smuggler commits perjury. If he didn't he couldn't smuggle, because he would have to declare the articles he was bringing over, but he takes a false oath to make his smuggling effective. I suppose that the elder Duveen committed perjury a hundred times, but he escaped with a fine. If he was really ill, perhaps, the fine served the ends of justice. We are not after vengeance, but we do want all men treated alike.

"The men who have made a practice of smuggling have been engaged in tearing apart the social fabric. The crimes they have been guilty of have had an effect that has reached further and done more permanent evil than any thief that robs you or any thug that assaults you in the public highway. They set a bad example to every clerk in their employ and to every one engaged in any trade or calling who knows that the law had been violated and that the violator has grown rich and has gone free.

"The practice often tempts weak men to resort to the same evil courses, and worse than all, perhaps, the smuggler is able to sell the smuggled goods at a price that an honest man would have to pay for the same articles, with the result that business men who refused to be crooked are often ruined.

"District Attorney Wise told us that there has not been a single case of smuggling among women since Mrs. Hill was fined $2,000 and sent to prison for three days. The imprisonment was effective in that case, and it would be similarly effective in every case. But what does a man care for a fine when he has made a million by theft and perjury, and his fine for making it in this way is only $10,000. But if any one of the Directors or any other big official of these lawbreaking companies was sent to jail the evil would stop at once. Many men consider it a good business proposition to pay a fine of half as much as the amount they can make by violating the law.

"Every trade and every reputable business man has suffered by the extensive smuggling that has been going on, and it will not stop if only fines are to be imposed. That seems to me to be certain. Harking back to the case of the Duveens, just think of the extensive methods of their smuggling. A valuable tapestry would be sent over in the drawer of a piece of furniture. Following it would come a letter from the shipper on the other side of the ocean that by mistake the tapestry was placed in the drawer and asking that it be returned. If the smuggling was detected the letter was supposed to act as a protection against punishment, but if it was not discovered nothing more was said about it. If these Duveens had been permitted to go on with their crooked work the effect would have been the breaking down of business.

"Every man ought to be treated alike. If the poor man deserves imprisonment for smuggling, the rich man deserves it. Even-handed justice should prevail. There should not be one way of punishment for one class and another way of punishing another class for the same offense. The smuggler commits a double wrong; he steals from the Government and injures innocent merchants. A man who successfully brings silks into this country without paying the duty of 60 per cent. would be able to sell the smuggled goods at 50 per cent. less than the honest importer could sell the same goods and get rich in the bargain."

Ludwig Nissen, a member of the Jeweler's Board of Trade, said:

"The evident determination of the Judges to look upon smuggling as a minor crime that is adequately punished by a fine is altogether wrong. If a poor steward brings over a box of cigars for the purpose of adding a trifle to his meager wages he is sent to jail. But the rich scoundrels, who have been for years and years engaged in the systematic evasion of the law, get off with a fine. And they are by far the meanest lawbreakers of all. I believe the address made by Mr. Wise at our meeting was to the point and that everything he said was absolutely true. Everybody at the meeting indorsed it.

"I do not think the speech cast any reflection on the Judges, and it certainly did not in words. We have been trying for a long time to bring jail sentences to convicted smugglers. They should certainly be imprisoned. A fine does not fit the offense. As long as men can swindle the Government and make millions by it and get off with fines they will continue to swindle. Put them in jail, that is where they belong."

Typographical Union, No. 6's, Ball.

Typographical Union No. 6 will hold its annual reception and ball at the Harlem River Casino, Second Avenue and 127th Street, on Thanksgiving Eve. Hundreds of members, with their wives, sisters, and sweethearts are expected to be present. The proceeds of the affair will go to the hospital fund of the union, which maintains beds in St. Vincent's and in St. Mary's Hospitals in Manhattan and in St. Mary's Hospital in Brooklyn.

SETS BANKRUPT FREE.

Judge Martin Stops a Trial for Fraud and Rebukes Prosecutor.

Judge Martin brought the trial of Solomon Lippman, a bankrupt glass merchant of 226 Wooster Street, to a sudden end yesterday. Lippman was being tried in the United States Circuit Court on the charge of having given false testimony by filing before Referee Smith defective schedules of assets in the bankruptcy proceedings.

The trial had been proceeding since Monday, but the court directed the jury yesterday to find the defendant not guilty. The evidence concerning the life insurance policy, on which the indictment was based, was, the Judge declared, documentary and unsupported, and he expressed wonder that Assistant District Attorney Isaac Levy could conscientiously ask for a conviction on it.

Mr. Levy replied he had a duty to perform as well as the court, and, as there was an indictment, he had to prosecute it.

SENATORS TO BACK DEMAND ON RUSSIA

to influence President Taft in his attitude on the Jewish passport question I would emphatically say that Mr. Schiff utters an unqualified falsehood—a cowardly lie.

My connection with Russian affairs began in 1898, when I was invited by Mr. Witte, who at that time was Minister of Finance of Russia, to visit Russia with a view of making suggestions to the Russian Government which might result in attracting English capital to the department of Russian industries. It was at that time that I met Gregory Welenkin, who was Mr. Witte's financial agent. I spent some weeks in Russia and Siberia, but declined to advise the investment of English capital, owing to certain political complications that had arisen between England and Russia in the Orient.

About a year and a half ago, Mr. Gregory Welenkin, who was then the financial agent of Mr. Witte's successor, Mr. Kokotzoff, extended me an invitation on behalf of Mr. Kokotzoff to visit Russia with a view of making suggestions looking to increasing American trade with Russia, and also as to the lines of industrial development in Russia.

I went to Russia last Winter and the result of my visit was to remove certain prejudices that I found existed against the United States by the Russian Government officials. I explained to them why the sympathy of the American people was for Japan, in the recent Russo-Japanese war, giving as a reason that we believed that the war had been precipitated by Russia without just cause, and that our sympathy, under these circumstances, was with the small Japanese nation in her struggle for existence against the great Russian Empire. I, however, convinced them that there was no lack of friendliness toward Russians on the part of Americans, who remembered Russia's friendship to us at the time of our civil war. This visit did much, I am sure, to re-establish good relations between America and Russia.

The Russian passport question had not arisen during my stay in Russia, and was never discussed with any Russian officials. Indeed, the question did not come up for the consideration of President Taft until after I had left Russia, and, I believe, while on my way back. In any event, I never, directly or indirectly, made any recommendations on this subject to President Taft, to any member of his Administration, or any member of Congress, and have exerted no influence whatever in the matter.

While in London I did see Leopold de Rothschild and Lord Rothschild, and told them that my Russian-Jewish friends believed that the best way to promote the interest of their coreligionists in Russia was by becoming interested in the industrial development of that country.

Mr. Jacob H. Schiff has done more to accentuate the troubles of his coreligionists in Russia than any other one man, because of his boastful statement that the money of Jewish bankers had made it possible for Japan to wage a successful war against Russia. Mr. Gregory Wilenkin, who is himself a Jew and belongs to one of the leading Jewish families in Russia, has frequently criticized the mistaken attitude of Mr. Schiff toward Russia, and has told me that he was doing incalculable harm to the cause of the Russian Jews in that country. I have no interests in Russia, and if I should acquire any there in the future they will be insignificant compared with interests I have in this country, Mexico and elsewhere. My chief desire has been to open up a field for American initiative, enterprise and trade in Russia, which I regard as a land of remarkable opportunities. I wish to reiterate my statement, that any allegations by Mr. Schiff or anyone else, that I have in any way sought to influence President Taft's opinion on Russian questions, is absolutely false.

JOHN HAYS HAMMOND.

YALE NOT AGAINST JEWS.

Alumni Official Denies It Has Refused to Rent Property to Them.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—Replying to a report that the Corporation of Yale University had passed a rule prohibiting the renting to Jews of property owned by the University this statement was made today by Edward J. Phelps, Secretary of the Alumni Advisory Board of Yale University.

"The Yale Corporation has not now, and never has had, any such rule. The facts in this especial case are these: The university obtained by foreclosure an apartment building upon the south side in Chicago. The previous owners had adopted for some time a policy of not renting to Hebrews. Leases with some time to run had previously been made. In this particular case, therefore, the Treasurer of the University felt it wise to continue the policy of the former owners.

"Speaking for the 700 and more Yale graduates in Chicago, I believe they have a high regard for those of their number who are Hebrews. These latter have always been willing to help financially in very generous fashion every good work which Yale men in Chicago have undertaken.

"But perhaps the best notion of the attitude of Yale toward the Hebrews is shown by this fact: The Chicago Yale Club every year gives a prize of $600 annually for four years, with which to go through Yale. For the past two years the man in Chicago who has been carrying six such boys through the university, and one of these boys is a Jew."

SAYS MAN SHE SHOT TOOK PAY TO WED HER

HER WEDDING A HUMILIATION

Patterson Wanted Her to Blackmail the Man Who Provided for Her Education, She Says.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 17.—Mrs. Gertrude G. Patterson, who goes on trial Monday for the murder of her husband, to-day gave out this story of her life, from the time she first met Emil Strouss up to the day she shot Charles Patterson, her husband, in Montclair:

"When I was 16 years old I went with my sister, Mrs. Farnham, and her husband, to Chicago. We stopped at a hotel where a friend of my sister introduced me to Strouss. He was much older than I, for at this time my hair hung in a braid down my back, but he was very kind. He asked me to marry him, but said that first I must go to school and study.

"After many conferences with my people he finally took me to Paris, where he provided me with a tutor, arranged for my taking music lessons, and departed almost immediately. I was very happy and worked hard at my studies, as I wanted him to be proud of his future wife."

Mrs. Patterson said they corresponded for five months, and at the end of this time, in response to a cable from Strouss, she returned to New York, and, with her benefactor, went to Chicago. There, Mrs. Patterson declares, Strouss began to renew his promise of marriage, but always postponed the wedding day.

"I was so miserable and unhappy, although he gave me everything," she says, "for when I thought I had persuaded him to marry me he would put me off again, until one day he sent me back to Paris.

"The Fall of the same year he came for me again. This time he told me that he had given out the information that we were married, and that every one believed it. So we came again to Chicago, where we stopped at a hotel in which Mr. Strouss was financially interested.

"For five years he introduced me as Mrs. Strouss wherever we went, and to his friends. No one ever questioned that I was married to him, and all that time I begged and pleaded and coaxed him to marry me. I wanted so much to be like the other women I knew."

"Here I met Charles Patterson. He was very attractive. We became great friends, and I told him my story. One day he asked me to marry him; he said, whatever had happened to me, he loved me. He expressed the wish to meet Mr. Strouss, so I introduced him after telling Mr. Strouss that Mr. Patterson wished to marry me.

"After his talk with Mr. Patterson Mr. Strouss came to me and said that he was glad that the great event in life had come to me, and he wanted me to be happily married.

"It wasn't till some little time afterward that I learned one day that I had been made the dupe of two men. Imagine my feelings. I was crazed with sorrow. My husband said to me one day: 'Gertie, have you any money?' I said, 'No,' because we had no money except the $1,500 which Mr. Strouss had given us as a wedding present.

"'Well, perhaps you'll be surprised when I tell you we haven't a cent,' he said, and sneered and quarreled with me.

"It was during this quarrel that I learned that Patterson had offered to marry me for this sum, and that it was not a wedding gift, as I had supposed. My rage knew no bounds, and I upbraided him and Strouss. I was so humiliated I wept, and hurt my hands wringing them, begging him not to speak to me so. He just laughed."

Mrs. Patterson says that in the quarrel when she called him a beast he knocked her down and that she stayed in bed as a result of the blow for three days.

Then, she says, he suggested that she help him to compromise and blackmail Strouss.

The narrative continues:

"The day before New Year's I met Mr. Strouss on the street. I told him all about my horrible life. He said: 'I'm sorry for you, Gertrude. Next month I am going to Europe. Come on along.' I refused, but foolishly went home and told my husband. He was delighted, and for the first time in days he was kind to me. He insisted upon my going and threatened to kill me if I didn't.

"The next day I met Strouss, lunched with him, told him that Patterson had told me I must go and that he must have $1,500 again or he would make Strouss rue it. Strouss gave me the $1,500. I telephoned my husband as we took lunch, and later met him at the bank, gave him the money, and asked him for a paper to protect Strouss."

This she said he refused to do, and urged her to continue the blackmailing.

Mrs. Patterson receives many letters of sympathy and encouragement. Her mother is expected here to-morrow, to remain with her during the trial. The accused woman's attorney says he has found Patterson's bank book, showing that he deposited $1,500 on the day he was married.

HALL'S LOAD OF DIAMONDS.

Mrs. Hall Describes Them in Suing Toothpaste Maker for Divorce.

Mrs. Emma L. Hall has filed a suit for divorce against her husband, Augustus H. Hall, in which she names Miss Gene Vance as corespondent. The Halls had a town house at 316 West Ninety-eighth Street and a Summer home at Asbury Park. Mrs. Hall accuses her husband of misconduct during 1909 and 1910 at the Oregon, Seventh Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street; at 310 West Seventy-ninth Street, and other addresses.

Hall, his wife says, is a member of the firm of Hall & Ruckel, tooth paste manufacturers. She says he has $250,000 in bonds and owns $200,000 worth of diamonds. One of these, she says, is a 43-carat stone, worth $25,000. He has diamond garters and garter buckles, diamond sleeve buckles and tie clasps, two pairs of diamond sleeve butons worth $7,500, and a ring with three diamonds worth $7,000. She says the West Ninety-eighth Street house where they lived is worth $30,000.

In his answer to her application for alimony, Hall says he gave his wife $75,000 worth of jewelry during their twelve years of married life, as well as $20,000 in cash and securities, and states that she has an equity of $10,000 in a $16,000 house in this city.

BIDE-A-WEE HOME BENEFIT.

The Comedy, "The Drone," Acted—Society Girls Sell Flowers.

There was a large attendance yesterday afternoon at the benefit given at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre for the Bide-a-Wee Home for Friendless Animals. The attraction was a three-act comedy entitled "The Drone," written by Douglas J. Wood and Guy Bolton.

Many flowers were donated and sold by society girls, including the Misses Thelma Violett, Katherine Force, Mildred Poor, Susannne Carroll, Marjorie Dodd, Dolly La Montagne, and Dorothy Hancock. Several clusters of chrysanthemums were auctioned off, one bunch going for $10.

Between the acts Mrs. Harry Ulysses Kibbe, President of the association, held an informal reception in the lobby of the theatre, assisted by Mrs. William Saeke Hofstra, one of the four Vice Presidents, the others being Mrs. George H. Gould, Mrs. Ulysses Grant, who was also present, and Miss C. Foster. Miss Ethel R. Champion is Secretary, and F. G. Bevill Champion, Treasurer of the association.

A considerable sum was realized by the matinee. Those who took part in the new comedy, besides Mr. Wood, were Mrs. Ida Jeffreys-Goodfriend, Edna Phillips, Christine Norman, Eleanor Hicks, Harold Howard, L. Rogers Lytton, Herbert Yost, and Harry Dornton.

JURY CONVICTS HIM AS A REAL RAFFLES

Gentleman Burglar Protests in Court That Trial Was Unfair and His Lawyer Incompetent.

WIFE PLEADS FOR HIM, TOO

"Bunny" Jumps His Bail, and a Third Pal in Hotel Hold-Up "Peaches" on the Chief.

Standing before Judge Swann in General Sessions yesterday, clad in the latest fashion and wearing a diamond stickpin in his spotless tie, Robert A. Tourbillion, alias Thomas Watson, alias "the Real Raffles," placed his arm about the waist of a pretty little woman, who said she was his wife, and bitterly denounced his counsel, Alexander Karlin, as incompetent when a jury, which had been trying him for robbery in the first degree, brought in a verdict of guilty.

The police have suspected Tourbillion of many crimes in the last four years, but he has always managed to evade punishment. Assistant District Attorney Wasservogel believes Tourbillion would have escaped this time if he and Louis Bauman, whom the police call "Bunny," had not taken into their confidence Joseph Russo, who turned State's evidence.

The three men were charged with entering the Roy Hotel at 154 West Thirty-fifth Street on June 15, holding a revolver at the head of Charles Simmons, the clerk, and taking $160 from the cash register. "Bunny" skipped his bail bond of $5,000, but Russo pleaded guilty to a lesser degree of crime and confessed.

After conviction yesterday, Tourbillion gave his pedigree to Clerk Gallager, saying he was 26 years old and a native of Atlanta, Ga. He said he was now a salesman, but had formerly been a lion tamer, and was the only man who ever did the "circle of death" by riding on a bicycle into a den occupied by twelve lions. After this he held a whispered conversation with his counsel, and Mr. Karlin stepped aside in disgust, after which the prisoner said:

"Your Honor, I would like to say a few words. First I want a new trial on the ground that Assistant District Attorney Wasservogel was speaking to the jury while I was outside the courtroom yesterday."

Mr. Wasservogel denied this, and Tourbillion then said:

"I make a motion for a new trial on the ground that my attorney did not defend me properly. He failed to put on all my witnesses, and I have witnesses to contradict the statements made by Russo."

"Why, I thought Mr. Karlin tried your case remarkably well," said Judge Swann. "If you have any witnesses let me hear them now."

Mr. Karlin then withdrew from the case, and the prisoner called George A. Bush, a stage hand, who testified that Russo told him that Tourbillion was not guilty, and that he was going to turn State's evidence in order to get a light sentence.

William Butler, a clerk in an automobile store, said he had always known the prisoner to be an honest and truthful man.

"Did't you ever hear his name among the police and crooks?" questioned Judge Swann, who upon receiving a negative answer said:

"Well, here's a fine list. This man is known as the Real Raffles, John Collins, Rats, Stephen Daly, and Gus Larson, not to mention the name he posed under in this case."

The witness retreated and then the prisoner's wife spoke up:

"Your Honor, there is a mistake. My husband is not guilty. Russo did not tell the truth."

"Well, what have you to say?" demanded Judge Swann turning to the defendant.

"Only this, your Honor: Russo has lied, and I mean to appeal my case and prove it. I have been the victim of police persecution and they have hounded me. I am not 'The Real Raffles' and Russo testified that I was, to save himself. Why, Your Honor, he was going around here with $1,500 in his pocket trying to buy off the witnesses against him, and, failing, he took a plea and got on the stand to prove me guilty."

"I offered you a plea to assault in the first degree, but you didn't take it," remarked Judge Swann.

"Begging Your Honor's pardon, you did not," replied the defendant. "I was never offered a plea all during the five months I was in the Tombs, and even if you had I would not have accepted it, because I am an innocent man and a victim of the police."

"When did you become a victim to the police, as you say?" questioned Judge Swann.

"Four years ago, when I was assaulted by one and struck him back in order to protect myself from his club," said Tourbillion. "He charged me with assault, and the Magistrate was so disgusted that he withdrew the charge and fined me $5 for disorderly conduct."

"Well, I can't see any ground for a new trial," said Judge Swan, and the prisoner bent over, kissed his wife, and was led away to the Tombs to await sentence.

After he had left the courtroom Judge Swan said:

"Gentlemen of the jury, you need not worry about your splendid verdict at all. I don't believe you convicted an innocent man. He is the most dangerous type of criminal we have to contend with, the kind of man who wears dress suits at night when robbing houses—'a real Raffles,' as Mr. Wasservogel told you. He is the cleverest scoundrel in the city, according to the police, who have been watching him for four years, not to persecute him, as he says, but to bring him to justice.

"I know that none of you gentlemen would ever say that splendid-looking man, with his strong but handsome face and good clothes, was a crook if you met him on the street."

In his summing up Mr. Wasservogel briefly outlined the case and said:

"Gentleman, sitting here before you is 'the Real Raffles,' 'the Gentleman Raffles,' and the most dangerous man in New York. In the daytime he parades Fifth Avenue, a man to attract the attention of all by his clever ways, but at night he dons his dress suit, and, instead of taking his wife out, he enters the homes of innocent people and takes their valuables, by trickery if possible, but by force, as in this case, if he can get them no other way. Do not be led astray by his good looks."

Tourbillion has been charged with stealing gold plate from stores, and watches and jewelry from numerous homes of the well-to-do, but only once before were the police able to make a case against him. That was four years ago, when he was indicted for stealing $500 in a saloon. He was discharged on this indictment, the complainant witness disappearing when the case was called to trial. It is a fact that none of his social acquaintances ever suspected that he was a burglar.

POMERENE COMES TO HARMON'S RESCUE

Corrects Senator Oliver, Who Said Ohio Governor Did Not Enforce Sherman Law.

CUMMINS ON ROOSEVELT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Senator Cummins made the sittings of the Senate Inter-State Commerce Committee interesting to-day by reading a portion of the La Follette inter-state commerce bill introduced last year. He asked H. B. Martin, representative of the Anti-Trust League, if his association had any objection to it. It is understood that the Iowa Senator will question all witnesses on the La Follette bill.

The section read declared that when a court had found that any combination was operating in violation of the act it should be held to be an unreasonable and undue restraint of trade of which it had been found guilty.

Mr. Martin replied that he could not on the spur of the moment give an answer for the Anti-Trust League, but he could say that his association did not want any attempt made to secure legislation that would give the trusts delay.

"In other words," said the Iowa Senator, "you are acting on the rule of Napoleon to find out what the enemy wants and then do the other thing?"

Mr. Cummins said that he did not want to be understood as giving his approval to the La Follette law as he had not yet had time to give it the study that was necessary for a judgment, but he frankly asserted that he believed that Congress should legislate to supplement and strengthen the law.

"I do not believe," said he, "that it should be left to the discretion of a Judge to say that any restraint of trade is or is not unreasonable or undue. One Judge trained in a certain environment will think one way and another brought up in another way will hold a different view.

"Take, if you please, the late President of the United States. If he were on the Supreme bench and the pending suit against the Steel Trust were to come before him he would say that the restraint of trade that may be proved to be maintained by that corporation was entirely reasonable. He would say that because he is on record with that opinion, while others and those who have prepared the pending suit hold the directly opposite view."

Senator Oliver could not refrain from making a drive into the political field, and the incident turned out disastrously for the purpose he had in mind. He asked Mr. Martin which he thought the more reprehensible—Gov. Harmon, who as Attorney General, said the anti-trust law was a dead letter, or Attorney General Wickersham, who had tried and succeeded in putting it into effect.

Mr. Martin was evasive, saying his league would stand for any Attorney General who would carry out the law.

Senator Pomerene of Ohio said he desired for the sake of historic accuracy to say that it was not Judson Harmon who pronounced the anti-trust law a dead letter, but Richard Olney. Then he went on to say that when Harmon became Attorney General there had been but one decision by the Supreme Court under the Sherman act, and that was the Knight case.

The trans-Missouri case had been tried in the lower court and the decision was adverse to the Government. On appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals the Government lost again, one Judge dissenting. Gov. Harmon, on entering on his duties in the Department of Justice, went into this case, but was urged by all his assistants there not to make the effort to take it to the Supreme Court. But he took a different view and himself worked up the case, wrote the brief, and in person argued the case before the Supreme Court and won it.

The next witness before the committee will be Samuel Untermyer of New York.

LAWYER VACHERON ARRESTED

Clients Accuse Him of Misappropriating Investment Funds.

Eugene F. Vacheron, a lawyer of Piershire Pass, N. Y., who owns and operates the Bashbish Inn at Copake Falls, N. Y., and who, according to the police, was formerly a law partner of ex-Police Commissioner Mathot and a former Assemblyman, was arrested at Copake Falls last night on warrants issued here, charging him with grand larceny. He was brought from Copake Falls and locked up at Police Headquarters by Detective Russo, attached to the District Attorney's office.

One of the two warrants on which the arrest was made charges Vacheron with grand larceny in the first degree on an indictment found on Nov. 15. It alleges that on Jan. 21, 1908, he took and appropriated to his own use 100 shares of Southern Railway stock, valued at $1,050. This complaint was made in the name of Henry Bodin, a client of the arrested lawyer.

The second warrant, issued on an indictment found on Nov. 14, charges him with grand larceny in the second degree in that he took and appropriated to his own use $450 which had been given to him for investment by Alice G. Spehner of 338 West Nineteenth Street, who appears as the complainant.

Vacheron denied both charges.

Brokaw Must Pay $15,000 Alimony.

The Appellate Division in Brooklyn rendered a decision yesterday affirming an alimony award of $15,000 a year made to Mrs. Mary Blair Brokaw, who is legally separated from her husband, William Gould Brokaw. Justice Putnam, who gave Mrs. Brokaw a decree of separation, at first fixed the alimony at $7,800 a year. On her application it was later increased to $15,000 by Justice Putnam. Mr. Brokaw appealed from this ruling, claiming that the award was exorbitant and that the separation should not have been granted on the case presented by Mrs. Brokaw. In affirming the award the Appellate Division handed down no opinion.

STEEL INQUIRY WILL CONSIDER ORE RATES

Independents Say They Have Paid Cost of Transporting Entire Output of Corporation.

ROAD OFFICIALS SUMMONED

Stanley Doubts Whether Frick and Gary Made Roosevelt Their Father Confessor.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The Stanley Committee will resume its sessions next Monday and continue the inquiry into the operations of the Steel Trust. No definite time has yet been fixed for the appearance before the committee of Andrew Carnegie or J. Pierpont Morgan.

The first witnesses to be heard will be the officials of the ore roads in Minnesota, where the Steel Trust has been charging such excessive freight rates that the independent companies practically pay the cost of transportating the United States Steel Corporation's entire output of ore. With the Steel Corporation, it is simply a matter of paying out of one pocket into another, and it does not matter to the corporation how high the rates may be, but to the independent companies the rates have been exceedingly burdensome.

During the Summer Chairman Stanley visited the Minnesota iron region and made a personal examination of the conditions, and his conduct of the investigation in that particular is expected to be more than ordinarily interesting.

Mr. Stanley was at the White House to-day and talked with the President about Steel Trust matters and the programme of his committee for the coming session. After the interview Mr. Stanley was asked what he thought of ex-President Roosevelt's Outlook editorial on the trust situation.

"I doubt very much if those cautious gentlemen, Messrs. Frick and Gary, made Col. Roosevelt their father confessor with perfect candor," said Mr. Stanley.

"Also, I am morally certain that no one man can make up the mind of the American people as to the good or evil of the United States Steel Corporation. I believe that the Sherman Anti-Trust act is a great law and should be enforced. I know that it can be, and that its enforcement would protect the people from a great many evils of monopoly."

Mr. Stanley was asked point blank if he believed the Steel officials would deliberately mislead Col. Roosevelt.

"Don't ask me that," he replied laughing.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 17.—Norman E. Mack of Buffalo, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said in an interview here to-day:

"Roosevelt is now an avowed candidate for the Republican nomination for President. It will be a neck and neck race between him and Taft in the convention.

"The recent article by Roosevelt in the Outlook is subject to but one interpretation."

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 17.—Theodore Roosevelt's policy on trust prosecutions was warmly indorsed by the American Manufacturers' Association, representing two and a half billions of invested capital, at the final session of its convention here to-day. Especial condolence to the United States Steel Corporation was contained in the address of President G. H. Jantz of New York. The convention sympathized with his words. It then adopted a resolution in opposition to the expressed intention of President Taft of recommending the establishment of a parcels post and his declaration that its inception would "do away with the high cost of living by the elimination of the middle man."

KEENE'S TERMS ACCEPTED.

Creditors of Two Failed Firms Agree on a Hocking Settlement.

Creditors of J. M. Fiske & Co., with the exception of only the Mechanics and Metals Bank and of Lathrop, Haskins & Co., voted yesterday to accept the offer of settlement of claims arising out of James R. Keene's management of the Hocking Coal and Iron pool, collapse of which resulted in the failure of three Stock Exchange firms.

Under the terms of the offer Mr. Keene will pay $400,000 in cash. Of this the trustees of Fiske & Co. will receive $41,379, less expenses. Trustees of Lathrop Haskins will receive $90,000. This settlement also releases Popper & Sternbach from any claims.

Creditors of Roberts, Hall & Criss, the third firm which failed when the pool collapsed, will not have to vote on the matter of accepting the settlement offered. Trustees of this firm will receive $150,000, which will be turned over to creditors of the firm in full payment of claims aggregating $270,000.

TO DIVORCE ELOPING WIFE.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 17.—The latest chapter in the eventful history of Lucy Banning Bradbury Greenleaf will soon be complete. Mace Greenleaf, her husband, now of New York, by filing suit for divorce against his beautiful wife on the ground of desertion, is writing the closing lines of a page that has furnished Los Angeles society with an abundance of gossip.

When Mrs. Greenleaf and Robert Ross, son of United States Circuit Judge E. M. Ross, eloped to Tijuana, Mexico, on Oct. 27, 1910, and later sailed from a Mexican port for Japan, where they are now living, it was expected that the deserted husband, then an actor at the Burbank Theatre, would take steps for a divorce. He is now in New York and will act through his lawyer, Ward Chapman.

Mrs. Greenleaf is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Banning and her family is one of the oldest in Los Angeles with great wealth and assured social position. Her first marriage was to John Bradbury, from whom she got a divorce and eloped with an Englishman, who committed suicide. Then she eloped with Greenleaf.

Ross also had great social prominence, being a popular clubman, the son of a Federal Judge, and a member of a distinguished family.

Ross and Lucy Banning, it is said, had been friends from childhood, and through all her troubles stood by her. When Mrs. Greenleaf had trouble with her actor husband she sought the advice of Ross, and they unraveled the domestic entanglement by eloping to Tijuana.

According to last reports, Ross and Mrs. Greenleaf are living in Yokonama.

Smoke from French Envoy's Residence Brings Firemen on Time.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—For a time to-day it was feared that the American Ambassador, Robert Bacon, whose country house at Westbury, L. I., was burned recently, would again suffer a fire loss.

Smoke issuing through the coping of the ground floor wall of his Paris residence attracted the attention of persons in the street, and firemen were summoned. No flames appeared, and no damage was done. It is thought that a defective electric wire was responsible.

SENATE TO LOOK UP BAKER'S CANAL LINE

Committee Asks Him to Appear and Tell About Panama Promotion That Failed.

LITTLE THOUGHT OF IT HERE

Shipping Men Laugh at Suggestion That Either "Money Trust" or Railroads Killed the Project.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Alleged opposition of transcontinental railroads to the financing of an independent steamship line to operate through the Panama Canal between Atlantic and Pacific coast terminals is to be the subject of an inquiry by the Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce, now sitting in Washington.

Bernard N. Baker of Baltimore was requested to-night to appear before the committee. Senator Clapp, Chairman, asked him to appear early next week with all the data in his possession, and said the committee would consider the Panama situation in connection with its present trust legislation investigation.

Senator Newlands, a member of the Senate committee, told that body this afternoon that he had heard from other sources that such opposition was being developed against independent steamship projects.

"If by the influence of the transcontinental railway systems the free development of commerce between American ports through the Panama Canal is being blocked, the Senate should ascertain the facts at once," he said.

Shipping men familiar with trade between the Atlantic and Pacific spoke scornfully yesterday of Bernard N. Baker's complaint to the President that "the money trust" had attempted to block his proposed Atlantic and Pacific Transport Company, which was to take advantage of the opening of the Panama Canal. Few people outside of shippers realize that there is already in existence at least one large steamship company carrying freight from Atlantic to Pacific ports in competition with the Trans-Continental railroads. This is the American-Hawaiian Company, which makes use of the Mexican rail route across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec from Coatzacoalcos to Salina Cruz, connecting New York with Pacific Coast ports and the islands.

This company cannot be accused of any alliance either with New York banking interests or the trans-continental road, for it is an outgrowth of an old clipper ship firm which had been using the long route around South America for nearly two generations.

G. S. Dearborn, President of the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company, was reluctant yesterday to criticise Mr. Baker, who is himself an old shipping man, but he derided the theory Mr. Baker advanced to President Taft for the failure of his scheme. He explained that no competition between water and rail freights would really be possible when the canal was opened, unless tolls proved exorbitant, and pointed out the enormous growth of his own line's business as proof of the practicability of open competition with the rail routes even under present conditions.

Mr. Dearborn and his associates first began to use steamships to carry freight from Atlantic to Pacific ports through the Straits of Magellan in competition with the transatlantic railroads eleven years ago from 35,000 tons carried in the first year their operations in competition with all-rail routes have jumped to 750,000 tons this year. The company now has a fleet of eighteen steamers and is building five more in anticipation of the opening of the canal. These steamers have a capacity of about 10,000 tons each, and the line expects to build one or more passenger steamers in the belief that there will be a tourist traffic developed through the canal. The company has been using the Tehuamtepec route since 1907.

"Talk of a conspiracy on the part of big interests to prevent the success of Mr. Baker's project is all bosh," said Mr. Dearborn. "Such an enterprise has to stand on its own bottom. As I understood it from the first published accounts, the Atlantic and Pacific Transport Company was to be organized by popular subscription, entirely independent of the big banking interests. If Mr. Baker was unsuccessful in getting money it might occur to a practical man that it was because his project did not look good to business men.

"We are asking no favors of the Government. We get along without any subsidy, and our business has grown from 350,000 tons in 1908 to 750,000 tons this year. We expect to carry 2,000,000 tons a year after the canal is opened. The railroads couldn't suppress independent carriers through the canal if they wanted to. The ocean is a free highway, and all attempts to suppress competition on it have failed and will fail.

"Another point might be made in explanation of Mr. Baker's difficulties, and that is the uncertainty of the subsidy from the Post Office Department on which his scheme was based. His first idea was to use his $15,000,000 capital in building fifteen small ships. Such ships would have a capacity of only 1,500 tons, against ours of 10,000 each. A ship built to get the benefit of the subsidy would be only useful as a money-maker while the subsidy lasted. If he built big ships that were talked of later they would cost $2,000,000 apiece, and I don't see how they could be money-makers. These objections might easily have occurred to practical men to whom the project was broached. Then about the subsidy. It seems to me that such a subsidy paid for dumping a few mail bags off at Colon would be stretching the authority of the Post Office Department to such a point that it could be upset at any moment by an antagonistic Congress. Why, for the $750,000 which it is proposed to pay, all the letters to Colon might be telegraphed at a saving. If it were rescinded, the ships built to profit by it would be useless."

No one could be found in Wall Street who would admit that there was any foundation for the statements credited to Mr. Baker. On the contrary, several bankers said frankly that as far as their connection with the matter went, Mr. Baker had either been badly misquoted or he had made statements which he should have known were untrue. A member of the firm of J. & W. Seligman said that neither he nor any of his partners had seen Mr. Baker for several months, and that they had not communicated with him.

"We are interested in the William Cramp & Sons Ship and Engine Building Company and would be very glad to get an opportunity to construct ships for the new line," he said. "I won't say that for this reason we would have joined in financing the undertaking, but we would have investigated it, and if the proposition appeared sound it is probable that we would have lent it our support."

William Salomon of Salomon & Co. said that he had talked the mater over with Mr. Baker and had refused to entertain a proposition solely on the ground that his firm never went into steamship linos. Otto H. Kahn of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., which firm, like Seligman & Co. and Salomon & Co., was accused by Mr. Baker of having shown itself unfriendly to his proposed company, said that not only had the firm never taken the matter under consideration, but it had never even been approached on the subject.

A Barton Hepburn, Chairman of the Chase National Bank, was quoted as saying that the railroads had not offered any opposition to the new steamship line, and that Mr. Baker was evidently trying to find an excuse for the failure of his plans "We have evidence to warrant the belief that the scheme would have proved inpracticable," he said.

HARVARD-SORBONNE COURSE

French Students Hear Prof. Davis's Lecture on Physical Geography.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—Official relations between Harvard University and the Sorbonne, an outgrowth of several years of the professorship exchange inaugurated by James Hazen Hyde of New York, opened at the Sorbonne this afternoon, when Prof William Davis of Harvard delivered his first lecture on physical geography.

Unlike the Hyde lectures, the course begun to-day will be open to students only, Dr. Davis being a professor regularly enrolled at the Sorbonne, and confining his lectures to technical subjects.

Pacific Fleet Not Going to China.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Events in China have so far caused no change in the plans long ago projected for the Winter exercises of the Pacific fleet. It would be impossible to get any of the big ships across the Pacific within a month, by which time it is expected the situation in China will have cleared.

SAYS REBELS HAVE CALLED SUN YAT SEN

A. R. Colquhoun Declares He Will Shortly Arrive in Shanghai to Direct Chinese Affairs.

MILITARY REGIME PLANNED

Yuan's Cabinet Unlikely to Last—Nankind Fighting Reported — Foreign Troops Demonstrate in Tien-Tsin.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Archibald Ross Colquhoun, well known as a journalist and explorer, in an article in to-day's Daily Graphic professes to outline the programme of the Chinese rebels on the authority of the leaders of the rebellion, says the Revolutionary Committee has summoned Dr. Sun Yat Sen, one of the instigators of the present revolt, and that he shortly will arrive in Shanghai to take up the direction of affairs.

The intention is, according to the article, to institute a military Government under the direction of Gen. Homer Lea. There will be a period of three or less years of martial law, during which administrative reforms will be undertaken, to be followed by another period of three years, in which the military Government will be assisted by certain elected bodies. At the expiration of this time it is expected that the country will be prepared for a constitutional republican Government, with a President and two elective chambers. Mr. Colquhoun says that it is believed Dr. Sun will be the first President.

The Daily Telegraph's Shanghai correspondent says that hostilities have commenced at Nanking.

PEKING, Nov. 17.—China's first experiment with a constitutional Cabinet dominated by Chinese does not promise much except as a stepping stone to something more permanent. The local newspapers are not enthusiastic and express the opinion that the administration of Premier Yuan Shi-Kai will be of brief duration.

Some of those selected as Ministers have already declined to serve. It is believed that few of the members were even consulted before thir names were announcd in the Imperial edict yesterday.

The membership is a strange mixture of Manchus and Chinese supporters and defenders of the throne and out-and-out reformers. The ostensible purpose was to reconcile all factions, but the suspicion exists in some quarters that Yuan deliberately constituted a Government, a continuation of which he knew to be impossible.

Foreign Troops Demonstrate.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—A news dispatch from Tien-Tsin says that British, French, and Russian troops made separate demonstrations there to-day by parading in the streets.

The extent of the military forces of France, Russia, and other foreign powers at Tien-Tsin and other points in North China has not been fully disclosed.

On Nov. 7 a dispatch from Tien-Tsin said that 200 Russian troops would arrive there the following day, and that 500 German troops at Tsing-tao had been ordered to be in readiness to proceed to Tien-Tsin. A French gunboat was already there.

Considerable bodies of British troops are maintained in North China, with headquarters at Wei-hai-Wei, and a branch at Tien-Tsin under Brig. Gen. Cooper.

A dispatch from Tien-Tsin on Nov. 14 said that 1,500 Russian Cossacks had left Vladivostok for Peking the day before. The German military headquarters are at Kiau-chau, about 250 miles south of Tien-Tsin. There are also foreign marine guards maintained at Peking and along the line of the railway from Tien-Tsin to the capital. The United States guard at Peking has been increased recently from 100 to 200 men, and a regiment at Manila is held ready to proceed to Chin-wang-tao, about 150 miles northeast of Tien-Tsin.

Rebels Behead Many.

VICTORIA, B. C., Nov. 17.—The steamer Canada Maru which arrived here from the Orient yesterday was at Shanghai on Oct. 21 and 22, when thousands of refugees were flocking to that port from Hankow. The steamer brought the story of many eyewitnesses who told of many executions.

L. Suzora of Yokohama, who went with a deputation from Hankow to Wu-Chang to rescue the missionaries and other foreigners, clamored for admittance. The gates were suddenly opened and a large number of captured Manchus were dragged out by their hair, beheaded, and their heads hurled at the feet of the delegates. The gates were then closed and the foreigners went back to tell what they had seen.

On the city walls a number of rebel soldiers stood to watch for Manchus trying to escape with ropes. Those attempting to escape were riddled with bullets as they lowered themselves. Suzora saw a Manchu official who had paid a coolie $18,000 for a sampan dragged ashore and beheaded.

At a place near Hankow, when foreign firms left their premises, the rebels caught a gang of looters, beheaded them, and nailed their heads to the doors of stores and dwellings with signs telling of the fate other robbers would meet.

One Manchu, who had boarded a Japanese river boat, was making his way to the cabin when rebels came aboard, seized him, and led him back to the city gates, where he was beheaded. His head was stuck on a pole. A policeman who failed to stop looters was decapitated and his head put in a basket, over which a placard was placed saying that the head was that of a policeman.

The Han-Yang arsenal was captured by a clever ruse. Several hundred insurgents crossed the river in sampans and rushed to the gates of the arsenal, shouting that they were loyal troops and were escaping from Wu-Chang. The gates of the arsenal were thrown open, and once in the rebels put back their white bandages. There was no resistance, and the arsenal fell without a shot having been fired.

DIES AT AGE OF 117 YEARS.

Abraham Kalinsky Was at Waterloo and the Burning of Moscow.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 17.—Removed eight days ago from a squalid room at 106 Albemarle Street, Abraham Kalinsky, 117 years old, died to-day in the Hebrew Friendly Inn. Kalinsky was the oldest man in Baltimore, if not in America. His son, aged 65, was with him at death.

Not until he was 105 years old and had buried his second wife did Kalinsky leave the farm and come to Baltimore. Soon after his arrival he took his third wife, who is now 84 years old.

Kalinsky, it is said, served in the German Army under Bluecher at the Battle of Waterloo and helped burn the City of Moscow to prevent its falling into the hands of Napoleon. He had fourteen children, three of whom are alive; twenty grandchildren, twenty-eight great-grandchildren, five great-great-grandchildren, and six great-great-great-grandchildren.

When the Hebrew Benevolent Society sent two men to remove the aged man from the room in which he was nearly starving, he fought them, and after being placed in a good bed and surrounded with every comfort began to fail.

MAYOR LUNN SPENT $30.

Campaign Expenses of Socialists Were Very Low—Some Spent Nothing.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 17.—The present Socialist administration has been ushered into office with the least expense of any in the history of the city. All candidates have filed statements. Dr. George R. Lunn, the Mayor, spent only $30, whereas the defeated Democratic Mayor spent $608.91, and the Republican candidate $356.75.

Herbert M. Merrill goes into the State Legislature with a record for economy. His seat cost him only $6. His Democratic opponent, Simon Schermerhorn, spent $525. James W. Veeder, the Republican candidate, spent $450.

Charles H. Lambert, Superintendent of the Poor, did not spend a cent. The two men drawing four-year offices, Richard J. Verhagen and Stephen W. Schwartz, went lightly on expenses. Verhagen spent $3.50, and Schwartz not a cent. For the next four years they will receive $1,800 a year.

EARTHQUAKE SCARES SWISS AND GERMANS

HOHENZOLLERN CASTLE HIT

Statue of Germania Crashes in Baden —Wurtemberg Is Badly Shaken— Big Cracks in Frankfort Buildings.

BERNE, Switzerland, Nov. 17.—A violent earthshock was felt throughout Switzerland at 10:27 o'clock last night. This was followed by lesser tremors. The movement was especially strong in the cantons of Berne and Zurich, in the district of Interlaken, and throughout the regions of the Alps. So far as known there were no casualties.

In Geneva street cars were derailed. In this city and in Zurich theatre patrons were thrown into a panic and the audiences rushed into the streets. Many women fainted from fear. In the towns along the mountain slopes the inhabitants fled from their homes and did not reenter them until they were satisfied that the foundations of the houses were not seriously damaged.

Reports indicate that the shock was the most severe that Switzerland has experienced in fifty years. It traversed the country from Geneva to Constance, and was most violent in the Central Alps. Several towns were plunged into darkness by the disarranging of the electric lighting systems, and in some places the people spent the night outdoors, fearing that the mountains would fall upon them. Observatory instruments were damaged. Many houses were partially wrecked. At St. Gall several persons were slightly injured by falling chimneys.

At Chamonix enormous avalanches rushed down Mont Blanc. Glass ornaments were broken in homes throughout the disturbed area. The seismic motion was from north to south.

BERLIN, Nov. 17.—The earthquake of last night, which was felt in a wide area of Central Europe, severely damaged the Castle of Hohenzollern on the steep Zollerberg, near Hechingen, Prussia. Statues on the beautiful structure were disfigured and great cracks appeared in the towers.

At Constance, in the Grand Ducy of Baden, the spire and cross of the cathedral, the most imposing building in the city, fell. A colossal statue of Germania, which crowned the Post Office Building, tumbled into the street.

The Kingdom of Würtemberg was shaken badly. At Ebingen 500 frightened persons spent the night around fires in an open field. Railway communication with that place has been interrupted.

Earth shocks are unusual in the districts affected, and the alarm of the people generally was greater than would have been the case in countries where seismic disturbances are a more common occurrence. At Frankfort, where several houses were rudely shaken, the populace rushed into the streets panic-stricken. Great cracks were made in the walls of several buildings.

Stuttgart, the capital of Würtemberg, felt the movement strongly. Houses rocked, pictures fell from the walls, and furniture was tumbled about. Reports from Munich, Strasburg, and Mayence tell of similar experiences.

There was a panic in the theatre at Heidelberg. Near Lautlingen a railway viaduct fell in.

Several buildings, including St. Stephen's Church, were damaged at Mulhousen, Alsace-Lorraine. A large stone was shaken from the church steeple. Bricks and tiles from disturbed buildings littered the streets. A theatre audience, stampeded from the playhouse. The shock was felt less severely at Vienna, Austria, according to reports received here.

SUFFRAGETTES REOPEN WAR.

Threaten Demonstration After Asquith's Refusal to Support Them.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Forty Suffragettes interviewed Premier Asquith in Downing Street to-day, and attempted, by threats of a renewal of hostilities, to obtain a pledge that the Government would undertake at the next session of Parliament to pass a bill giving equal suffrage to the sexes. They received scant satisfaction.

Mr. Asquith told the women that he stood, as always, against woman suffrage, because he thought it would not be for the good of the State. He added that the women, nevertheless, had a remedy in their own hands. The Government would leave the House of Commons free to amend the proposed manhood franchise bill so as to extend the franchise to women, if the latter were able to persuade a mojority of Parliament to support their cause.

At a subsequent meeting the Suffragettes declared war upon the Government. In an announcement setting this forth the Suffragettes say that the attitude of the Government, as outlined by Premier Asquith, is one of direct hostility to the claims of the women. They purpose to inaugurate a "war of demonstration" in Parliament Square on Nov. 21, and the militant members promise that women will be there in thousands to fight for their rights.

Mocha Gloves—at Saks'

Gentlemen, give us your hand!

Value 1.50........today at 1.15

¶ The Mocha glove is a much wanted glove this season. Particularly for dress affairs. Its popularity is such, however, that many men are side-tracking the tan glove in its favor. Considered dressy enough for evening, it naturally looks dressy by day. But you want to be careful when you select a Mocha glove. It has chameleonic tendencies. There are whitish, pinkish, grayish, and blue-grayish Mochas. But put your hand on the last one, for the blue-grayish Mocha is the Mocha for you, and it is blue-grayish Mochas that are offered in this sale. Only fifty dozen of them, but they are blue-grayish to a digit. Soft, warm, comfortable, well-made, stylish. Regular or cadet fingers. A dollar fifty as a rule—but today, at Saks', 1.15.

Hand-frame Knitted Scarfs
values 2.50 and 3.00..today at 1.35

900 of them. In accordion and English crochets, and in a large range of patterns. The colorings, too, are fine, in solids and combinations. These are the self-same knitted scarfs that retail anywhere at 2.50 and 3.00 each. Phenomenal value and that's all there is to it.

Crochet Knitted Scarfs value 1.00........today at 55c

2,400 of these crochet knitted scarfs, and that won't be too many when their value has circulated a little. Made in college stripes, and in effective four-color combinations. The best knitted dollar scarf ever sold.

Hemstitched Crossbar Handkerchiefs value 75c. the half dozen......today at 55c

There are 6,000 of these handkerchiefs, in hemstitched crossbar effects. They are especially good value.

Superior Hemstitched Crossbar Handkerchiefs value 1.50 the half dozen......today at 95c

6,000 of these also. But they are made with embroidered initials, and better quality, of course.

OTHER SUBWAY AIDS FOR REA'S COMPANY

Underground Station at 4th Ave. and a 34th Street Moving Platform Suggested.

FORMER ALREADY PLANNED

It Would Tap Both the Present Line and Lexington Ave.—Conferences Affecting Interborough Not Closed.

Whatever may eventually come out of the subway conferences called by Samuel Rea, Vice President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, is not likely to come to a head for some little time. Controller Prendergast left town yesterday afternoon for a week, and no further conferences have been set. A representative of Mr. Rea saw both President McAneny and the Controller after yesterday's Board of Estimate meeting.

No one seemed able to express any opinion yesterday as to when the next step will be taken. Some definite offer must be made to the Board of Estimate in order to induce it to rescind its action of last Summer, and as the Interborough still refuses to show any disposition to come forward again the situation remains one of expectancy, without any hints of the source from which the solution of the Pennsylvania's difficulties will come. Meanwhile the Public Service Commission took yesterday another step toward carrying out the plan at present before the city by signing contracts for two more sections of the Lexington Avenue line.

Borough President McAneny expressed the opinion yesterday that no change in the situation is likely for some time.

"It is true," he said, "that under the present plan the situation of the Pennsylvania is unfortunate. I think that there will be more conferences, although I do not know when they will be held."

While the Pennsylvania has been urging on the city the necessity of providing proper facilities for its station the Board of Estimate officials and Chairman Willcox of the Public Service Commission have been trying to hit on some plan of meeting the just claims of the railroad company without a radical change in the arrangement already decided upon. Two plans have been proposed—one the construction of a moving platform under Thirty-fourth Street, preferentially by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, to be operated in connection with its Broadway and Lexington Avenue lines, and the other the establishment of a station on the tunnel of the Pennsylvania at Fourth Avenue, which would give connection with both the present Subway and the new Lexington Avenue tube.

Chairman Willcox discussed yesterday the moving platform idea. It was suggested to the Pennsylvania at the conference, and it was urged that if the B. R. T. operated it there would be free transfers from it north and south at both the Broadway and Lexington Avenue tubes. The moving platform idea for certain crosstown routes has been before the commission for some time, but it was decided to leave the discussion of it in abeyance until the subway problem was solved. Now, however, the idea might be taken up and would afford passengers to and from the railroad station transportation to any borough served by the new B. R. T. subways for a single five-cent fare.

The station at Thirty-third Street and Fourth Avenue on the Pennsylvania tunnel was contemplated in the original preliminary conditions in the certificate granted to the railroad company for the construction of its station. It was planned that the station should be 1,000 feet long, 600 feet of which should be to the east and 400 feet to the west of Fourth Avenue. It would, consequently, if constructed, serve both the present and the new Lexington Avenue Subways.

Objection has been raised to this new station on the ground that Section 9 of the railroad's franchise laid it down that no local passengers should be carried through its tunnels except with the approval of the local authorities. But it was pointed out that the number of persons who would ever dream of paying 5 cents to travel from Fourth to Seventh Avenue would be very few, and that these would be the only local passengers. The great bulk of those using the station would be through passengers to and from Long Island.

The engineers of the Pennsylvania are on record as declaring that the grade of the tunnel is too steep to accommodate a passenger station at this point. The Public Service Commission's engineers, however, have calculated that this grade is only 6-10 of 1 per cent., and that this is by no means prohibitive. Moreover, the level at which the railroad tunnel is constructed is quite far enough below the present and future subways to make a connection between them feasible and safe.

If, however, the Pennsylvania people are not satisfied with one of these solutions, the only step it appears at present that they can take is to induce the Interborough to act. The Interborough can either make an entirely new offer for the construction of a subway down Seventh Avenue or bid for the operation of the new lines under the contract which is now being prepared.

To get any consideration of its new plan, however, or a Seventh Avenue subway, the Interborough will be obliged to modify its demands for a guarantee. The Board of Estimate is not in the least inclined to accept this, but the Interborough takes the view that as it may have to pay 5 per cent. on the capital it raises and pay 1 per cent. for the amortization of its bonds the other 3 per cent. is a small enough return for itself. Moreover it has still to bear the burden of its connection with the Metropolitan system. Consequently, there is little hope of any further concessions being granted to the city by the Interborough.

It might bid for the operating contracts of the new lines as laid out by the Public Service Commission and the Board of Estimate, even though they are not in accordance with its own ideas. The contract will be announced in a few weeks, and already two tentative drafts, drawn up by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, have been submitted to the Public Service Commission and the city authorities. The commission has always expressed the intention of having this contract so drawn that it would be open to any bidder and not only to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, and Chairman Willcox, when he was asked yesterday if he considered that the city was under any moral obligation to grant the award to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, replied:

"I think the city and commission are morally bound, unless the Board of Estimate or the commission shall decide that some change should be made."

RELY ON TAFT DECISION.

Quoted in Matrimonial Trial—Proposal Is Privileged, Says Judge.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 17.—The attorney for Mrs. Fannie K. Morton, whose trial on a charge of using the mails to defraud in connection with a matrimonial bureau began before Federal Judge Dyer yesterday, brought forth mention of a decision by President Taft when a Federal Judge. Her attorney maintained the indictment was insufficient, in that it did not set out in detail the letter written by Mrs. Morton to the chief witness for the Government. The attorney said he would rely on a decision made by Judge Taft.

Judge Dyer ruled to-day that what a man says to a woman when he proposes marriage is a privileged conversation. Josep Nemiere of Tulsa, Okla., was on the stand. Nemiere testified he had proposed marriage to Mrs. Morton, who is charged by the Government with having corresponded with thirty-three men on the subject of matrimony.

LAWYER PASCAL DISBARRED.

Court Finds Him Guilty of Forgery and Unprofessional Conduct.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court handed down yesterday a decision finding Isidor L. Pascal, an attorney, guilty of unprofessional conduct, and disbarred him from practice. The court pronounced Pascal guilty of forging an indorsement on a note and also guilty of advising a client under bail on a criminal charge to forfeit his bail.

In the opinion, accompanying the decision, Presiding Justice Ingraham wrote:

"An inspection of the indorsement shows that Pascal intentionally indorsed Bonynge's name in a disguised handwriting, so that no one looking at the check would for a moment suppose that it was indorsed by the same person who wrote Pascal's name on it.

"He says that he changed the handwriting in which the name of the payee was written, as he thought he would have trouble to get the bank to accept the check if it was thought that he had indorsed Bonynge's name to the check, and he therefore made this indorsement with the avowed purpose of deceiving his own bank and inducing the bank to accept it for deposit by simulating the handwriting of another person on the check, so that the bank would not suppose that both names had been written by the same person.

"His only defense was that he assumed from a conversation over the telephone with his client's nephew, who had no interest in the litigation or the check itself, and no authority to give any direction with regard to it, that he had a right to indorse the payee's name on the check and collect the proceeds, a rather astonishing proposition for a lawyer to advance when defending himself from a charge such as this. There can be no serious doubt but that this was a deliberate and intentional forgery."

When Pascal was called on for an explanation by the court, he returned the money, $721, and the Grand Jury declined to indict him. Nevertheless, Justice Ingraham said:

"The whole transaction shows such a lack of common honesty and integrity that it is conclusively established that he is not a proper person to be a member of the profession."

Pascal's advice to another client to forfeit his bail was, Justice Ingraham said, "a serious professional misconduct."

ST. THOMAS'S CORNERSTONE.

Impressive services will mark the laying of the cornerstone of the new $1,000,000 St. Thomas's Church, at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-third Street, next Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Bishop David H. Greer, Bishop-Suffragan Charles Sumner Greer, and the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, rector of St. Thomas's Parish, will conduct the services.

Following the preliminary services, which will be held in the temporary church on the site of the new church, the procession of clergy will march to the southeast corner of the church property to lay the stone. The three architects of the new edifice—Ralph Adams Cram, Bertron Grosvenor Goodhue, and Frank M. Ferguson—as well as the verger of St. Thomas's, bearing the leaden box to be inclosed in the cornerstone, will also be in the line of march. The church choir will sing, Bishop Greer will make a short address, and then Dr. Stires will read a list of the contents of the box.

The cornerstone will in reality be in three different sections. It will consist, first, of the cornerstone of the original church built at Broadway and Houston Street in 1823; next that of the church built in 1853, which, in 1895, was almost wholly destroyed by fire; crowning these two stones will be the new stone, which will contain the old box.

This box, which was subjected to great heat during the fire of 1905, was opened yesterday for the first time. Part of the contents remained intact, but the current journals of Oct. 13, 1868, it was said, would be replaced by those of the date of the laying of the new cornerstone.

Niece Says Mrs. Jones, Wife of Man Who Tried to Kill Guiteau, Is Insane.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Insanity proceedings have been brought against Mrs. William Jones, wife of the man who attempted to kill Guiteau, assassin of President Garfield, by Charlotte D. Bates, a niece.

Mrs. Bates asserts that her aunt's mind has been unbalanced by worry over her husband's dissipations and that, although the aged woman is worth $50,000, she recently went to live in a squalid hovel.

Mrs. Jones will be examined in the District Supreme Court on Monday. She has retained United States Senator Raynor of Maryland and two other lawyers to resist the proceedings.

INTERBORO INSISTS IT CAN DO NO MORE

Invites McAneny to Take Shonts's Job if He Can Increase the Service 25 Per Cent.

NOT EARNING 17 PER CENT.

Between 8 and 9, Says High Official—As for McAneny, His Assertions Are Reiterated.

In his speech on the Subway situation in the Brooklyn Academy of Music on Wednesday night, Borough President McAneny said that while the present roads controlled by the Interborough system had nearly reached their full capacity it was possible to increase their carrying power 25 per cent. A TIMES reporter asked Interborough officials yesterday why this possible improvement was not made, so that there might be fewer complaints by patrons of the roads.

One high official of the Interborough wanted to know just what the complaints were. He was told that they were based on the apparent inability of the company to carry passengers without overcrowding and because the Subway locals especially were too infrequent and too crowded for comfortable traveling. He replied:

"We are constantly at work trying to improve the service, and if Mr. McAneny can increase the carrying capacity of the roads 25 per cent. he can have Mr. Shonts's job and permission to fix his own salary. Last December we added two cars to each of the express trains and one car to each of the locals, making them ten and six car trains instead of eight and five. We are still working at the comparisons to find out the difference this 20 per cent. increase makes in the total business.

"The trouble with the system is that there is no flexibility in the service. If one train is tied up for any reason while making a trip a number of other trains are similarly tied up. The whole service has therefore got to be in working order. Each one of the cars in the Subway is 50 feet long, and when you consider that the express and locals run on 108 seconds headway in the rush hours and from 2 to 2½ minutes at other hours, it would appear that the service is as good as it can be made under present conditions."

Mr. McAneny said also that the Interborough paid from 15 to 17 per cent. on its vestment of $48,000,000 and that within five years it would pay 20 per cent. The Interborough official denied this.

"We paid only between 8 and 9 per cent.," he said, "on the actual investment of $48,000,000. Figured on the capitalization of $35,000,000 it might amount to about 10 per cent. It is easy enough for any man on the street to figure out profits and business methods, but no reasonable man will think for a moment that we are doing less business than we can. It is our policy to do all the business we can, and we are doing all we can now.

"The Public Service Commission has fixed rules for the running of trains, and we are obliged to obey these rules or be proceeded against for violating them. The average number of seats in a given time must be equivalent to the number of passengers carried. The Subway road is fifteen miles long, and we are running as many trains along its whole length as we possibly can. The elevated roads run on sixty seconds headway in the rush hours, and the capacity of those roads has also been reached.

"Few persons realize how rapidly the travel in this city is increasing. The average rides per capita in 1860 were 43; in 1880, 150; in 1900, 246; and in 1910, 321. This ratio of increase is double that of the population in each decade. The total number of fares in 1910 was 1,500,000,000.

"It has been suggested that the carrying capacity of the Subway roads could be increased by extending the platforms still further and running longer trains, but the gain in this method would be lost by the necessity of running on longer headway. The trains could not in safety run so close together.

"Now if anybody has anything to suggest by which the service on any of our lines can be improved he will be welcome at this office. The men here are at work all the time on this problem, and as they are guided by many years of experience and a thorough knowledge of the situation, and are familiar with all the difficulties that beset us, I don't believe any help can come to us unless we work it out ourselves, and frankly, I don't believe the service can be improved under the present conditions."

At the office of Borough President McAneny it was said that the Interborough service surely was capable of an increase of 25 per cent. in its carrying capacity. A representative of the Borough President said:

"When the ten and six car trains were demanded in place of the eight and five car trains the statement was made then that this would not improve the service and that the lines were running at their utmost capacity. Finally the increase was made and the improvement was immediately manifest. When these trains have become thoroughly saturated with travel a new demand will be made for still longer trains, to be met with the same statements, and then, finally, the increase will be made.

"The Interborough is earning exactly 17 3-10 per cent. on its invested capital of $48,000,000. Last year a great deal of money was spent for the increase in the service, new equipment, and so forth, which was a reason for a smaller dividend than it would have paid otherwise. I understand that the travel has fallen off a little this past year, but the profits will be something more than three times that which such a conservative investment usually pays.

"The Interborough officials do their ability scant justice when they say they can go no further in their business without additional concessions, which is really what their statement amounts to. The public officials, who have made a careful study of the transit conditions, feel certain that the Interborough has not passed 80 per cent. of its carrying power, and we suspect that the Interborough officials feel as certain of this as we do."

MRS. ADAMS'S $30,000 NOTE

Given to Clairvoyant and Appellate Division Lets It Stand.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court handed down a decision yesterday overruling the demurrer of Isabella V. Adams, widow of "Al" Adams, the "Policy King," to a suit for $30,000 on a promissory note brought by Marguerite Gilbert, a clairvoyant. The note was dated Jan. 23, 1907, and read:

> I, Isabella V. Adams, hereby acknowledge my indebtedness to Marguerite Gilbert for services rendered by her, for which I promise to pay her the sum of $30,000; and in the event of my death I hereby authorize and direct the payment of the same out of the funds of my estate.

Mrs. Adams's demurrer was based on the allegation that she gave the note because Mrs. Gilbert claimed to have "supernatural power and could foretell impending dangers threatening various members of my family; that she further represented to me that she could by the exercise of some mysterious power forestall and prevent these threatened dangers to members of my family, and further stated that danger did threaten members of my family, particularly my children."

Mrs. Adams declares Mrs. Gilbert's statements were "false and made to deceive."

HOTEL NEAR GRAND CENTRAL

Rumor That One Will Be Built on Former Hospital Site.

A rumor was current yesterday that the block front on the west side of Lexington Avenue, between Forty-second and Forty-third Streets, is to be improved with a large hotel. The property is now occupied by the Hospital for the Ruptured and Crippled, but it was sold a few months ago to the New York Central Railroad, and a new hospital is now being erected on a large plot on Forty-second and Forty-third Streets, between First and Second Avenues. The New York Central Railroad acquired the property to round out its Lexington Avenue holdings in connection with the new station and track improvements.

It is stated that the hotel is to be put up by the railroad company and that it will be leased for a long term to H. C. Griswold, proprietor of the Stratfield Hotel at Bridgeport, Conn. Mr. Griswold said that there had been some talk of putting up such a structure, but nothing definite had been determined upon. The price paid by the railroad for the block front was over $1,000,000.

Another good hotel site owned by the New York Central is the block bounded by Madison and Vanderbilt Avenues, Forty-third and Forty-fourth Streets. For nearly ten years it has been stated from time to time that a big hotel was about to be erected on this block, and although the officials of the railroad admit that it may be built some day, the plan thus far has not reached definite form.

'PHONE BOND BUYERS SUE.

126 Say Independents Misrepresented Value in Prospectus.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Complaints have been served this week in 126 new actions by bondholders of the United States Independent Telephone Company against its Directors to recover the purchase price of bonds on the grounds that the Directors are responsible for the dissemination of a misleading prospectus.

Among the Directors are Adolphus Busch, William H. Page, and Hendrick Holden. In a test case brought by Frank H. Downey, a bondholder, the jury found for the plaintiff, the Appellate Division affirmed the decision, and the case is now before the Court of Appeals for argument in January.

Velveteen and Corduroy Suits and Dresses
For Young Women of 13 to 18 Years.
$25 to $45 Values at $14.98 Each.

NO NEED TO INDICATE the popularity of curduroy and velveteens for modish Suits and Dresses. Makers of these rich fabrics have been unable to keep up with the demand. But one of our chief suppliers had a number of Suits and Dresses made for samples and a number also completed too late for delivery to fill orders, and these we have purchased to sell today for $14.98 a piece.

They will average $35 values.

There are strictly man tailored two piece Suits and one piece Dresses in a wide range of popular colorings. Many are in sizes and styles suitable for small women.

Misses' $25 Full Length Winter Coats at $14.98.
Made from odd lengths of the handsome soft and warm woolens with contrasting or plaid collars and cuffs. They button close at the throat and down the side. Long revers and large gauntlet cuffs of plaid or contrasting plain color. Extra wide patch pockets with outside flap and button fastening. Sizes 14 to 18 years—or for small women.

Children's $12.98 Winter Coats at $9.98.
Of fancy boucle finished and double faced cloths; some button close at throat with velvet collars and cuffs; others with wide revers and deep cuffs. Strictly tailored. Seams all bound. Sizes 6 to 14 years.

Soldiers Permitted to Kill All ....o Had Borne Arms, Which Gave Them Too Much Latitude.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—More light is thrown upon the alleged massacre of Arabs by the Italian troops in Tripoli by a signed statement of the correspondent of The Morning Post, which appeared in that newspaper on Nov. 6. The correspondent wrote from Malta:

> This is an exact statement drawn up by me and signed by Mr. Davis, Mr. Grant, and myself, at the request of the British Consul in Tripoli, and to its absolute truthfulness we are prepared to swear. I wish, however, to make a few observations by way of preface.
>
> Prior to Oct. 23 the Italians had behaved with exemplary kindness to the Arabs, providing them with food, paying them liberal wages, and allowing them to remain in their houses and gardens in the oasis. But the gradual extension of the lines without supports of any sort naturally excited these Arabs, who had only yielded to force majeure, and with the idea of assisting their friends outside in a joint attack on the Italian lines.
>
> How many were implicated in this plot and how many were innocent it is, of course, impossible to say, but the incident which led to the massacre occurred in the oasis, on the southeast side of the position which was held by the Bersaglieri, who were resisting a vigorous attack of Turks and Arabs from outside when they were fired upon in the rear by the Arabs in the oasis, losing many men. They faced about, drove off the enemy, and shot with absolute justice all whom they found in this quarter, including a general execution on Nov. 2.
>
> As far as my investigation shows, this was the only point where the Italians were fired on from the rear, but I am quite open to admit that there may have been other instances. Be this as it may, the affair led to a general order to shoot all Arabs found with arms in their hands in the oasis, and it is only fair to Gen. Caneva to state that he ordered no Arabs to be shot unless they were caught by troops under the charge of officers.
>
> But his orders were soon disregarded. On the 24th, 25th, 26th, and 27th the troops proceeded to make a clean sweep of all that portion of the oasis of which they held possession. There is no certain proof that any Arabs in the west end of it ever took part in the rising, but even admitting that there were, there were vast numbers of men, women, and boys who were perfectly innocent, and of these nearly all the men, and even the boys above a certain age, were shot, while undoubtedly many women perished in the confusion, and in one instance I know soldiers without an officer were only restrained from shooting at a woman by the intervention of a foreigner.
>
> For four days parties of soldiers scoured every portion of the oasis, shooting indiscriminately every Arab they met. The troops engaged in this work complained to headquarters that the orders only authorizing the shooting of men found with arms could not be carried out satisfactorily, because numbers of Arabs hid their arms and resumed work in their gardens as innocent husbandmen.
>
> Thereupon Gen. Caneva modified his order, and issued another authorizing the troops to shoot all Arabs who could reasonably be suspected of having borne arms against the Italians. This unfortunate modification led to the worst abuses, because there was no possible means of ascertaining who were guilty and who were not, and it gave every officer and private a free hand.
>
> The blood of the men was up, and naturally so; they had seen their comrades shot from behind, and even, it is reported, mutilated, but of the latter fact I could not ascertain the exact truth, and, with their excitable temperament and highly developed imagination, they suspected every living soul to be guilty, and decided to punish all accordingly.
>
> Thus for four days gangs of soldiers, often without officers, shot every one. In addition to the cases I have enumerated, the employe of Mr. Riley, a well-known resident of Tripoli, was working in his garden when he was shot dead by a soldier looking over the garden wall.

In his signed statement the correspondent speaks of the marked friendship which obtained between the troops and the Arabs before the outbreak of Oct. 23. Then he describes what he saw on a ride in the desert several days after this. He says:

> On leaving the town the first object which met our eyes were the bodies of from fifty to seventy men and boys, who had been caught in the town on the previous day, or on Oct. 25, and shot without trial of any sort. The majority of them were caught without arms, and were executed under a general order issued by the Governor, Gen. Carlo Caneva, to exterminate all Arabs found in Tripoli or in the oasis. They had been led to this spot with their hands tied behind their backs and shot down indiscriminately.
>
> This mass of corpses, lying in all attitudes in a solid mass piled on one another, could not have covered a space greater than fifteen yards wide by five deep. I was not present when this batch were shot, but it was witnessed by other correspondents whose testimony is irrefutable as to the brutal manner in which it was carried out.
>
> The next object which struck our eyes was the body of a very old man lying in the centre of the road. From the attitude in which he lay he had evidently been shot while running or walking up the road. Every few yards we came across other bodies lying in every conceivable attitude just where they had been shot down, but not all had been killed in this manner, for some bore evident traces of having been bayonetted or clubbed to death with the butt ends of rifles. Many had evidently only been wounded and had crawled to the side of the road, there to die.
>
> The road from the town to the desert, which had formerly been alive with Arabs—men, women, and children—was now completely deserted, except for the dead. The houses on either side had been broken into and their occupants murdered therein or taken outside and shot. In the side tracks running off from the main road were many bodies, some lying alone, others in small groups, and in one spot lay two Jews who had shared the fate of almost all the inhabitants of the outlying gardens and houses.
>
> During our whole progress over a distance of two miles we never saw a single living Arab, man, woman, or child. Lying just outside the outpost line was another group of bodies—those of about fifty men and boys who had evidently been taken out there on the previous day and shot en masse. Several of them had been bayonetted or slashed with swords, and one man had his head completely smashed in—a wound which could only have been inflicted by the butt end of a rifle.

The statement describes the killing of a very old Arab:

> He had been sitting most of the afternoon up against the wall of the college and saw what passed. He made no effort to escape, and the soldiers went back and shot him in like manner from a considerable distance as he sat against the wall with his head bowed as if too weary of life or apathetic to survive the massacre of his friends and relatives. Then we rode past the mass of bodies lying just in front of the trenches. A party were at work digging a trench in which to bury them. Soldiers and sailors and some Italian journalists were standing round. There was talking and laughing; and photographs were being taken. Then we once more took the same road past the cavalry barracks leading to the town.

The writer further on narrates an incident which, he says, occurred in the sight of his party:

> Just as we reached this detachment they met three perfectly harmless-looking Arabs walking up the road and carrying no weapons. They were clad in clean white robes and evidently men of high class. It was obvious at a glance that they were not men of the fighting class, but peaceful and well-to-do owners of property in the oasis and the last men to risk their lives and their property in a futile insurrection.
>
> One of them looked about fifty years of age and another about thirty, and the third was a youth in his teens, I should judge. But appearances availed them nothing. They were seized by order of the officer and without a word of interrogation or explanation—for the Italians had no interpreter with them unless one of their own number could speak Arabic, an exceedingly unlikely contingency—they were taken inside a cottage and shot against the wall, not by a regular volley, but by a series of isolated shots.

The writer declares that he "must have passed the bodies of over 100 persons on this one highroad."

TURKS AND ARABS RALLY.

Prepare to Resist Italians' Advance—More Troops Landed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The Turkish and Arabian forces appear to be reuniting at Ainzara for the resistance of the Italian advance, according to cable advices from Tripoli to the Italian Embassy here.

To repulse the continued attacks of Turks and Arabs on the ports of Derna and Tobruk more troops have been landed to reinforce the Italians now holding them. A few shots were fired at those places Wednesday.

The dispatch from Tripoli, dated Nov. 15, states that the weather continues very bad. There was some canonading on the part of the Italians' eastern front on Wednesday. The health of the Italian troops is good.

RUSSIAN ATTACK ON SHUSTER

Press Calls Persian Treasurer an Adventurer—Want American Expelled.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 17.—An inspired press has begun a bitter campaign against W. Morgan Shuster, the American who is supervising the finances for the Persian Government. He is accused of overriding the authority of the Government at Teheran and of intriguing against Russia.

The semi-official Novoe Vremya possibly foreshadows the intention of the Russian Government when it says that Russia, after her troops have entered Persia, must not be satisfied with an apology to the Russian Vice Consul at Teheran, M. Petroff, but must demand the expulsion from Persia of Mr. Shuster.

It was officially announced yesterday that, as the Persian Government had made no reply to the Russian ultimatum of Nov. 11, troops had been dispatched to Persia, and for the present would be concentrated at Kasbin, 100 miles northwest of the capital.

The Novoe Vremya declares that "the expedition is directed principally against the American adventurer, Shuster."

Treasury gendarmes at the instance of the National Council seized the property of Shua-es-Sultaneh, because the latter was supporting the cause of his brother, the deposed Shah. The protest of the Russian Vice Consul was ignored, and later Russia sent an ultimatum to Teheran, stating that, unless an apology to M. Petroff was made, her troops would occupy the provinces of Ghilan and Mazanderan in North Persia.

The Premier was inclined to yield, but Mr. Shuster refused to make any concession in his policy at the demand of Russia, unless instructed to do so by the Cabinet as a whole. The Ministry recently resigned, and the Persian Government has since made no move in the matter.

ROYALISTS TO TRY AGAIN.

Obtain Warships for Another Attempt to Overthrow Portuguese Republic.

LISBON, via Frontier, Nov. 17.—It is reported that two warships, purchased by the Royalists, will leave a German port under the Austrian flag for Portugal to take part in a new attempt to overthrow the republic. The vessels are said to be manned chiefly by men from North America and Brazil.

The Royalists state that this time they will either succeed or perish in the attempt to restore the monarchy. In addition to small arms and artillery, they are supplied with dynamite bombs.

The press is agitated by reports that the Franco-German accord in Africa secretly provided that a part of Angola, the Portuguese possessions in Western Africa, which are bounded by the Belgian Congo, British Zambesia, and German Southwest Africa on the north, east and south, should go to Germany. The papers demand that Great Britain protect Portuguese rights.

TWO SHIPWRECKS; 17 DROWN

Bark Driven Ashore Off Quebec—Steamer Founders in North Sea.

QUEBEC, Ont., Nov. 17.—Fifteen of a crew of eighteen men lost their lives last night when the Norwegian bark Antigua was driven ashore at Martin River. The Antigua was loading at Martin River, below Quebec.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The British steamer St. Bride, which sailed from Hamburg on Nov. 5 for Norfolk, is reported to have foundered on the shoals off Neuwerk Island in the North Sea. A lifeboat from the vessel, containing two bodies, has been picked up.

The Great Gimbel Toy Store Will Be Presented In Full Christmas Readiness, Today

The Fourth floor of this vast new building has been transformed into such a Land of Santa Claus as cannot be found this side of The Black Forest and the boundaries of old Nuremberg.

For we have brought here such a comprehensive assemblage of the dolls and playthings of this wonderful Toyland, as has, to our knowledge, never before crossed the ocean.

What hours of joy these early November days will have for the thousands of little folks who visit Gimbels, before the big crowds begin to come, and how fine for Santa Clause to know so far ahead just what the little hearts are going to long for!

This vast exhibition of joy-day delights is planned like a great World's Fair. "Machinery Hall" is crowded with the marvels of mechanical ingenuity, for the delight of boys and girls that want "toys that do things." The "Animal House" is filled with the most amazing gathering of "jungle people" that was ever seen by little folks' eyes—life-size Bengal tigers, African lions, bears, dogs and other animals, so real that they almost frighten one—and every other size, down to those that require a dozen to make a handful. The wonderful "Walking Dogs" are the craze of the day, and there are hundreds of other animals that move their limbs, as they roll along, to the delight of their little owners.

Then the "Doll Fair" is such a marvelous exhibit that no words of ours can begin to do it justice. Surely no one, in a whole day's visit, can find all the infinite varieties that are gathered here. We must leave description to the little ones themselves, for their bright eyes will see it all and tell it to you infinitely better than a page full of words of ours. And you'll bring them, of course.

And the Doll Houses, from quaint old Nuremberg, are wonderful, and what a delight they will be in American playrooms!

The "Furniture Exhibit" will be as interesting to old eyes as it is to young ones—chairs for the little folks, made just like those for grown-ups. Doll Carriages that are wonderfully like those that mother used for her own baby, with all the dainty fittings.

And the sleds, the grocery wagons—all the thousands of wooden toys, iron toys, building blocks, Meccano building materials, skates, horns, musical playthings, Christmas tree ornaments, and the thousands of things that cannot be classified in groups—all here, in the greatest variety ever known to any Christmas store anywhere, spread over this vast Fourth floor, which is devoted to the enjoyment of little folks from now until Christmas Eve.

Come TODAY—to the most bewitching array of TOYS, DOLLS and other playthings that New York has ever seen. Give your little ones a day of pleasure before the crowds give them less chance to see things than they will have if they come at once.

A Merry Day and Cordial Welcome to All.

NO MILLIONS LEFT TO STALLO GIRLS

Alexander McDonald Never Had $50,000,000, and When He Died Had $300,000 or Less.

LOSSES IN RAILROAD DEAL

Collection of Some Outstanding Claims Expected to Save the Estate from a Deficit.

The story of the estate which the late Alexander McDonald of Cincinnati bequeathed to his granddaughters, Laura and Helena Stallo, is not so much the story of a dwindled fortune as the story of a fortune that never was. Since the death of the Standard Oil man at Long Beach, Cal., in the Spring of last year, much has been said and written of the young girls who were his wards. They were styled the richest of heiresses. Estimates of the value of their inheritance have gone as high as $50,000,000, while the more conservative have declared that the Stallo girls must have come in for at least $15,000,000.

As a matter of fact, in the day of his greatest prosperity, ten or more years ago, Alexander McDonald was worth considerably less than $5,000,000, and at the time of his death in 1910 it may easily have been a matter of unhappy uncertainty in his mind as to whether or not he was even solvent. With their inheritance from their grandmother, the Stallo girls can hardly be called destitute, but there is some truth in the statement that the papers in the hands of the Transfer Tax Appraisers suggest the possibility of a deficit as the net result of the settlement of Alexander McDonald's estate. The administrator hopes that there will be a surplus, but it is not likely that the two girls will share between them more than $200,000.

Ten years ago Alexander McDonald owned more than 4,000 shares of Standard Oil, when it was rated in the neighborhood of $815 a share. He was Vice President of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and President of the Kentucky Company, and into the building and decorating of his great home in Cincinnati he poured money until the cost of the place passed $600,000. His country home on Prince Edward Island cost a small fortune in itself.

Then McDonald became interested with his son-in-law, Edmund K. Stallo, in the building of a railroad from Mobile to Chicago, to be known as the Mobile, Jackson & Kansas City Line. Of this line 410 miles were built and this was bonded $30,000 a mile, but Mr. McDonald died with the road uncompleted. It is now in other hands.

It is said that at the time of the panic of 1907 all of McDonald's liquid assets were pledged to that road, in whose debts he had become involved. In his last years his available income went to pay interest on the railroad debts, and when he died he was not a rich man. This fact, however, was not generally known, and people continued to speak of the McDonald estate as mammoth.

A year ago Mr. Stallo, as administrator of the estate, filed an inventory in complance with an order from the Surrogate, application for which was made by Twombly, Putney & Twombly, lawyers, representing a claim of more than $2,000 against the estate. The accounts were not thoroughly balanced at the time, and Mr. Stallo explained that they had been difficult to settle, because the relations between himself and his father-in-law were so intimate that there was never any effort to keep accurate partnership accounts, both he and Mr. McDonald having made advances at various times, depending solely on who had the ready cash whenever there was a call for any.

Even though it was immediately apparent that the Stallo girls would not have anything like the fortune with which they had been popularly accredited, the substance of the filed inventory was to the effect that their inheritance was worth more than a million and a half. It appears now that the estimate was decidedly too rosy, a fact which has developed in subsequent administrative investigation.

The girls' father is no longer the administrator of the estate. Shortly after the filing of the inventory a lawyer representing four surety companies, which had bonded Mr. Stallo as administrator in $2,000,000, applied to the Surrogate to be relieved. The Surrogate gave him until Dec. 21, 1910, to obtain new bonds, and upon his failure to do so the application for his removal was made and granted.

The court appointed the Metropolitan Trust Company of 49 Wall Street as the new administrator, and the work has been going on ever since. The new inspection of the McDonald affairs resulted in the discovery that Mr. Stallo's inventory of a year ago was too hopeful. Certain claims against the estate have proved stronger than they then appeared. Certain claims of the estate have not panned out so well, so that it would not be easy to determine to-day whether the surplus will amount to much.

The hearing that was to have been held in the State Controller's office on Thursday was put over until Nov. 27 at the request of a lawyer representing Mr. Stallo. It appears from the understanding reached by the administrator that the obligations connected with the railroad venture which Mr. McDonald assumed were jointly assumed with his son-in-law, and that when the security which they put up as partners fell short by a large amount the difference was paid out of Mr. McDonald's individual assets. The present administrator has held that for a half of this difference Mr. Stallo is indebted to the estate. It is said that this amounts to something more than half a million dollars. The administrator decided that it was not a good claim, and so reported to the appraiser, whereupon, it is understood, Mr. Stallo objected. It cast reflections, he thought, upon his financial standing, and the Metropolitan Trust Company asked the appraiser to decide. If Mr. Stallo shows that the claim is good, the Metropolitan Trust Company must try to collect it.

Stories of the vastness of the McDonald estate have never been met with emphatic denial from any authoritative source. A close friend of Mr. Stallo said yesterday that, according to the story he had heard, Mr. Stallo was advised more than a year ago to issue a complete statement, setting forth the truth of the case, which would satisfactorily puncture the bubble. It was pointed out to him that only those closely associated with the estate realized that Alexander McDonald had not died an enormously wealthy man, and that the girls had unwittingly gained the reputation of being great heiresses.

Laura Stallo is 20 and Helena two years younger. Fortunately, their income is not dependent on the grandfather's estate, for while he was still a very rich man Alexander McDonald deeded to his wife their home in Cincinnati and gave her besides a thousand shares of Standard Oil, which was then selling at $800. Helena and Laura Stallo each have inherited a third of that block of securities, and they shared in the inheritance of the house which was sold in Cincinnati last Summer.

The engagement of Helena Stallo, the younger of the sisters, to Nils Florman was announced last July and subsequently broken off. Her father said she broke it off, fearing that she and Mr. Florman would be uncongenial, and not because she had discovered that, besides being the grandson of Admiral Count Bonde of Sweden, and related to the Swedish royal family, Mr. Florman was the son of a masseur who had been employed in this city.

Edmund K. Stallo is the son of John B. Stallo, once Minister to Italy. After the death of the girls' mother their father married Mrs. May Harrington Hanna, first wife of D. R. Hanna, son of the late Senator Hanna. They live at the Waldorf.

Elizabethan Comedy at Columbia.

The Philolexian Society of Columbia University presented Robert Greene's Elizabethan comedy, "Friar Bacon and Friar Bougay," in the Brinckerhoff Theatre last night before an appreciative audience. Every effort was made to reproduce the stage of Elizabethan days.

There will be two more performances, one this afternoon and another to-night, both in the Brinckerhoff Theatre.

REFUSES BIG DIVIDENDS.

Its Business "Merciless," Says President, So Tax Lien Co. Dissolves.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Nov. 17.—Declaring that the business in which it planned to reap large dividends was "too merciless," President William Jeffery, a well-known real estate man, presented his resignation at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Tax Lien Company of New Jersey here to-day. As a result the Directors passed a resolution to dissolve the corporation, and through the Secretary, Guy D. Peck, sent word to the Secretary of State that they would discontinue business. A formal statement was issued by the Directors, setting forth:

> The Tax Lien Company of New Jersey has been voluntarily dissolved by consent of all the stockholders after careful consideration of the character of the business and realizing that its success depends upon taking advantage of the misfortunes of others.

The corporation was organized to buy up at Tax Collectors' sales in New Jersey properties upon which taxes were delinquent and which were offered to the highest bidder under the Martin act for the satisfaction of taxes. The Martin act provides that the purchaser shall receive 12 per cent. interest until the lien is satisfied.

"It's too much like 'picking pennies off a dead man's eyes,'" said President Jeffery this afternoon in explaining the dissolution.

SNITKIN ASKS INQUIRY.

Justice Wants Referee Named to Hear Charges Against Him.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court reserved decision yesterday on the application of Municipal Court Justice Leonard A. Snitkin for the appointment of a referee to investigate charges against his conduct on the bench in disposesss cases. Congressman Henry M. Goldfogle and Austin G. Fox, who appeared for Justice Snitkin, also asked the Appellate Division to dismiss the general charges against their client as being too vague. Said Congressman Goldfogle:

"Justice Snitkin wants the fullest investigation of these charges against him. If these general matters are not stricken out, we ask that the court compel the complainants to furnish a bill of particulars to Justice Snitkin."

Pincus Benenson, a wealthy east side landlord, is the complainant against Justice Snitkin. He said he had been treated with great contempt when he came to apply for orders evicting tenants who were behind in their rent, and on one occasion took a stenographer with him to take down Justice Snitkin's remarks, which he characterized as insulting and abusive. For several weeks before the Benenson charges were brought lawyers who made a business of disposess proceedings had declared that Justice Snitkin was unduly friendly to poor tenants.

Next Subway Will Be Concrete.

Bricklayers and members of allied trades get little consolation from the report on the comparative merits of concrete and brickwork rendered yesterday to the Public Service Commission by Alfred Craven, its chief engineer. Representatives of the bricklayers and masons asked the commission that brickwork be used in future subway construction. Mr. Craven reports that while he sympathizes with the bricklayers, the use of bricks instead of concrete would be retrogressive engineering and would add $4,000,000 to the cost of building the Lexington Avenue Subway.

Cuts the Gas Rates in Brooklyn.

The Kings County Lighting Company will appeal, it is expected, from the order of the Public Service Commission reducing its rate for gas from $1 to 85 cents from Nov. 1 to the end of next year and to 80 cents for 1913. The commission yesterday adopted an order reaffirming its previous decision, with the exception of such part as might affect the contract of the company with the town of New Utrecht.

The company has till Nov. 25 to state whether it will accept the order or not.

New York Bid Next to Lowest.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Bids for the construction of the new Bureau of Engraving and Printing Building, which is to cost nearly $2,000,000 when completed, were opened yesterday by Supervising Architect Taylor. The lowest was submitted by J. Henry Miller, Inc., of Baltimore, who bid $1,169,477 for limestone and 1,422,226 for granite. The George A. Fuller Company of New York was next lowest, with $1,179,000 for limestone and $1,440,000 for granite.

IF YOU PAID $20, THEY MADE YOU CHAUFFEUR

NO CHARGE AGAINST ANY ONE

For four or five months Secretary of State Lazansky has been receiving complaints about graft in the automobile bureau in this city. At first the complaints were hardly more than rumors, but as they became more persistent they took more diefinite shape and two weeks ago Secretary Lazansky determined upon an investigation.

Most of the rumors and protests were found to affect the Board of Examiners, which has to pass on and approve the chauffeurs' papers before they can get licenses. This board consists of a chief and two examiners. With the quest thus narrowed down, Secretary Lazansky asked one of the prominent private detective agencies to send a man to take the examination.

This man was purposely a greenhorn so far as automobile running was concerned, and he tried just a little to look it and to spread abroad the impression that he was from some distant part of Long Island and new to New York ways. He was shrewd enough, however, not to carry the thing too far. He began the study of automobiling, but was hardly well on the way with his first lesson before a smooth-featured man with a tongue much smoother than his features approached him. This man, the detective learned, had no visible connection with the Automobile Bureau.

"You want to be a chauffeur, don't you?" blandly asked this new acquaintance.

"I certainly do," said the detective; "but it is a good deal harder than I thought. It looks as if it would be weeks before I can ever answer all these questions."

"You are very foolish to waste all that time trying," said the other. "You listen to me. If you are willing to pay a little something, not so much either, just $20, I'll see that you will get through in a week at least."

The detective demurred, and, as he expected, the man insisted that it must be $20 and not a cent less. The detective finally handed over the money. That was the last he saw of his friend, but in four days more he was a full-fledged chauffeur, having answered all his questions after his own fashion, it is true, but in a manner evidently satisfactory to those who passed on them.

When the detective chauffeur made his report to Secretary Lazansky the latter decided not to press the matter any further or to try to trace the connection, if any connection there be, between the man who took the $20 and any one in the Automobile Bureau.

"I might have done this and criminally prosecuted those found guilty," said Secretary Lazansky last night, "but all I was concerned with was the conduct of affairs in the Automobile Bureau. I had no doubt that there was some connection with the man who approached the detective, but where it was I did not find out and did not try very hard. I did come to the conclusion, however, that four days' study was too short a time for a man to pass the department examination and get a chauffeur's license.

"I decided that a reorganization of the Examining Board would be for the good of the service, consequently I dismissed two of the examiners. They were Herbert H. Patterson of 284 Seventh Avenue, Brooklyn, and Charles Reich of 541 West 142d Street. Both men are on the civil service list, but so far have made no protest over their discharge. In fact, when I spoke to Mr. Patterson about discharging him he said almost at once, 'I have already prepared my resignation.'

"Proceeding to reorganize, I have transferred an examiner from up-State to the New York office, and have yet another examiner to name."

Secretary Lazansky added that he had made no charges against the two examiners when dismissing them, and so far as he was concerned the incident was closed.

WANT A LARGER TOMBS.

760 Prisoners There Last Night and Visits from Friends Are Curtailed.

The crowded condition of the Tombs, which held 760 prisoners last night, has roused several Judges of General Sessions to attempt to make more room there. Judge Swann has invited other Judges to meet in his Chambers to discuss making the Continued Part of General Sessions run all through the Winter term of the court, instead of the few months in which some Judges desire to sit, to relieve the calendar. The meeting will be held on Monday.

As a rule only five parts of General Sessions are running and when another Judge decides to sit in the Continued Part many small cases are disposed of.

Judge Crain has offered to sit from 4 until 6 to handle cases which will not take more than an hour to try. In his opinion the trouble does not lie with either the District Atorney or the Judges, but with the city.

"An addition should be built to the Tombs, where this building stands, so that it could all be inclosed in one wall," he said, "and the Criminal Courts Building should be built in that block which is situated below the Tombs."

In the past four months Judge Mulqueen has been absent upon a vacation and Judge Malone took a month off at the close of the October term, so there is no Continued Part of General Sessions running at present. For three weeks running last month Judge Swann only sat four days out of the week, taking Fridays off.

Most of the heads of the City Government agree with Judge Crain in saying that the only way in which they can alleviate the evil of overcrowding in the Tombs is to build an additional City Prison.

In the meantime a sign has been posted up on the door leading to the Tombs to the effect that owing to the crowded condition of the Tombs only one visit a day will be allowed to the friends of the prisoners.

TAXI HITS TWO DRUGGISTS.

One May Die—Both Stepped in Front of His Machine, Says Driver.

Two druggists, Morris Ghersin of 239 West Fourth Street, and Thomas H. Titos of 209 Bleecker Street, while crossing Third Avenue at Thirty-fourth Street early this morning were knocked down by a taxicab operated by Thomas Larkin of 151 West Fifteenth Street. The wheels of the taxicab passed over both legs of Ghersin, fracturing them. His companion was thrown down, but knocked to one side.

Policeman Rooney sent in an ambulance call and Dr. Howell removed both men to Bellevue Hospital. Ghersin was found to be in a very serious condition and his recovery is doubtful. Titos sustained contusions of the right leg and left arm and after having the injuries dressed left for home.

Larkin was taken to the East Thirty-fifth Street station, where he said that the men had stepped directly in front of his machine and the accident was unavoidable. After his name and address were taken he was let go.

TRY ARMY SURGEON ON NEGLECT CHARGE

FRIENDS EXPECT ACQUITTAL

Officers of High Rank Named on Court to Sift Charges and Stop Spread of Gossip About the Case.

The court-martial of Major Frank T. Woodbury of the Medical Corps of the army was begun yesterday on Governors Island. He is accused of neglect of duty in that he did not give proper medical care to a sick soldier. The charges are brought by Lieut. Frendall, who has had trouble with Major Woodbury and frankly confesses that he does not like his fellow-officer.

One morning in last March John L. Goneau, a private in the Second Infantry, stationed at Assinniboine, Mon., did not respond at roll call. It was found that he was suffering from inflammation at the base of the spine and paralysis. Major Woodbury was called as post medical officer and the man was sent to the hospital. It is alleged that the surgeon neglected the man, and he grew worse instead of better.

The affair occasioned some talk, and gradually the gossip spread in army circles until it was decided to settle the case by a court-martial. Officers of high rank and experience were selected so that their verdict would be received by army officers as the final word. The opinion of army officers here, not officially expressed, is that the trial will exonerate Major Woodbury.

The court convened at 2 P. M. in Corbin Hall, Governors Island. Those who comprise it are:

Brig. Gen. Tasker H. Bliss of the Department of the East, Col. Cowles of the Fifth Infantry, Fort Ethan Allen; Col. Cecil, Twenty-ninth Infantry, Governors Island; Col. White, Coast Artillery, Fort Hamilton; Col. Slaker, Coast Artillery, Fort Banks, Mass.; Col. Townsley, Fort McKinley, Maine; Lieut. Col. Stephenson, Medical Corps, Governors Island; Major Reynolds, Fort Monroe; Major Devoe, General Staff, Governors Island, and Major Persons of the Medical Corps, Governors Island. Capt. S. T. Ansell of Governors Island is Judge Advocate General, and Capt. John F. Madden of the Twenty-ninth Infantry and a civilian counsel represents the accused Major.

Senator Callom's New Book of Reminiscences

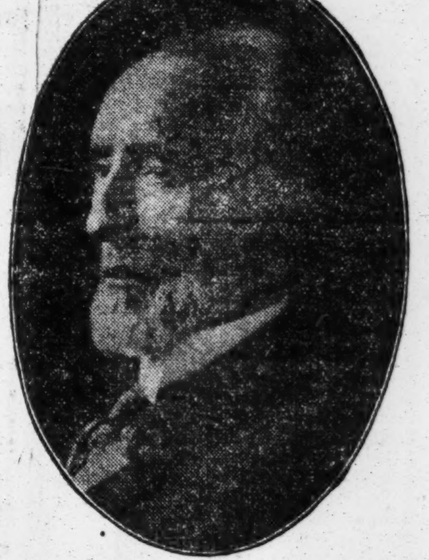
"He comes nearer to connecting the present with the days of Washington than any one I know."—PRESIDENT TAFT.

FIFTY YEARS OF PUBLIC SERVICE

BY

HON. SHELBY M. CULLOM

United States Senator from Illinois



DURING his fifty years of public service Senator Cullom has been associated with nearly every public event and with hundreds of men of national fame. The easy, flowing, discursive style of his book offers an invitation to read, aside from the interesting life story presented.

"Senator Cullom, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, author of the Interstate Commerce Law, often a candidate for president, has written a book of reminiscences far franker than those of John Sherman and others of his contemporaries. He has all his life been a national figure. He knew Lincoln and Taft—a big span for a man's life. He tells how Mr. Taft wanted to quit the presidency for the bench, how Senator Hoar rebuked Roosevelt, how Hay snubbed the Senate, and is otherwise amazingly candid."—THE BOSTON HERALD.

FREAK FERRYBOAT IS THE GENERAL OTIS

Ships Big Seas in a Dead Calm and Often Scorns to Obey Turn of the Rudder.

PIER BUMPING A SPECIALTY

Two Exhibitions Yesterday by the Erratic Government Craft—Once Ducked Gen. Wood.

The United States Army ferryboat General Otis, which runs between Governors Island and New York, when she sees fit to respond to the wheel, and which before the installation of her automatically operated fore and aft steel doors could ship huge waves in a smooth sea, made another record yesterday. She crashed head on into her slip on the Governors Island side twice, and a little later, while in midstream, she missed by less than three feet a collision with a tug and scow. Then in order to keep up the good work she canceled one of her trips to the Municipal Ferry, where she now makes her landings, for the purpose of trying a new slip that the army is building in Battery Park.

"No beat in America is making so much history as this grand old craft of ours," said an army officer with a show of pride yesterday as he stood on the sea-wall of Governors Island and watched the Otis plunge her way through the waters of New York Bay.

"Yes, Sir, she is a history maker for fair. The first day Gen. Wood, the Chief of Staff, took a trip on her he stood on the lower deck admiring the landscape. All of a sudden the Otis dug her nose deep down into the smooth water, and when she came up it was to greet a wave of her own making, that almost swamped her. 'This is not a ferryboat, but a submarine,' Gen. Wood remarked as the Otis made ready to ship another huge sea in a dead calm.

"On another occasion hurry orders came from Washington for two officers to proceed to an up-State town to witness some aeroplane tests. The officers had barely time to catch their train, provided the Otis behaved. Did this grand old ship behave? She did not. The pilot tugged at the wheel, but the Otis made up her mind she would not go near Manhattan on that particular trip, and she made good. Instead she plunged into a pier on the Brooklyn side and the officers missed their trains.

"As a result of her wave-shipping qualities in all kinds of good weather the Otis was sent away to be doctored up. They built her up a little higher and then added these nice little automatic steel doors, as we landlubbers call them, to keep the big waves out of the passenger cabins. The waves have a harder time now trying to sweep us off the boat than before, but even yet the big ones manage to crawl over every now and then and make everybody on deck hustle for shelter."

While the officer was telling this history, the Otis was nearing Governors Island. When she was 50 yards away and still going strong the pier sentinel could be seen backing off in the direction of the Governors Island coal sheds. The sentinel was taking no chances.

"She's going to make it fine," a little girl shouted gleefully as the Otis, responding to the wheel, turned gracefully in toward the slip. The little girl was mistaken. The Otis changed her course as if by magic and a moment later there was a mighty bump. The Otis had lived up to her reputation for doing the unexpected and had given Governors Island a jolt that those on board the boat will not soon forget.

The Otis recoiled from the crash and bobbed up and down for a moment. Then, as if ashamed of herself, she slid up the pier as smoothly as any ferryboat could do. The Otis was undamaged.

"That's her long suit," said the officer. "No matter what happens the Otis comes out unscratched."

The Otis left Governors Island after this bump to try her new slip. She came rolling back in half an hour. She was peeved over that extra trip, and showed it by giving the pier a second solid bump.

On the next trip to New York the Otis was feeling her way through the flock of sea gulls that feed in the waters off Governors Island, and for once in her career was not shipping any big seas. Capt. Fenton, Gen. Grant's aid, was on the forward deck holding his horse, which he was taking to Manhattan for a long exercise ride.

Suddenly, dead ahead, there loomed up a tug with a scow in tow. The Otis whistled and the siren of the tug fairly screamed her pleas to the army boat to look out. The passengers on the boat crowded over to the side away from the tug.

On came the Otis, and the tug was chugging with all its might to get the scow out of the way. It seemed impossible so close were the two boats and so bent on mixing it up, rough and tumble fashion, seemed the Otis. But the scow skimmed out of danger with a margin of less than three feet.

At present, it is said, the Otis is costing the Government about $1,000 a month, which is paid out to mud scows and other harbor craft, for damages resulting from the erratic courses of the General Otis.

LAWRENCE PERIN FINED $100.

Struck the Manager When He Was Ordered Off a Baltimore Stage.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 17.—Lawrence Perin, well known in Newport, New York, and Baltimore, and also in England, France, and Spain, was fined $100 and costs by Justice Tyson to-day for an attack upon Walter C. Vanbrunt, stage manager of the Academy of Music.

Perin and a few friends, among whom was Thomas W. Boykin, went to see the play at the Academy last night and were seated in one of the boxes. In the course of the performance, Perin and Boykin attempted to go behind the scenes to see one of the young women in the chorus. They entered through a door leading from the box to the stage.

They were talking to the young woman when the stage manager remonstrated with them, and told them visitors were not allowed on the stage. As Perin showed no inclination to obey, the manager pushed him toward the door. Perin turned and struck Vanbrunt in the face. Then, with Boykin, he returned to the box and watched the rest of the performance. Perin, in 1905, eloped with Jane Gordon Sartori, who in September, 1909, committed suicide in a London hotel by shooting herself in the temple.

DROPS BROKERS' CASE.

Rules of Evidence Behind the Times, Says Boston District Attorney.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 17.—With the assertion that the rules of evidence have not advanced to meet modern complicated business and that "the ends of justice do not require a retrial," District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier announced to-day that the case of Sederquist, Barry & Co., the Boston stockbrokers who were charged with the larceny of nearly $100,000 from their customers, would not be tried again.

The District Attorney announced that the defendants will pay $4,000 toward the expenses of the trial, which lasted thirteen weeks and resulted in the jury's disagreement as to all the defendant's except Harry F. Curtis, who was found not guilty. The others indicted were Arthur B. Sederquist, E. Eustace Bigelow, John E. Barry and Perley L. Freeman.

"I feel that the prosecution of this case and the ruling of the court that there was a case for the jury have been of distinct public benefit," said Mr. Pelletier. "Abuses which have existed for almost a century have thus been pointed out."

CABINET MEN TO LECTURE.

Will Explain to Waldorf Audiences How Uncle Sam Does Business.

Practically all of the members of President Taft's Cabinet have been induced to give lectures in this city on how the various departments of the United States Government are cnducted. There will be twelve lectures in the series, to be delivered on Monday afternoons in the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria. The series was arranged by Miss Anne Morgan and her committee, representing the women members of the New York and New Jersey branches of the National Civic Federation.

An introductory lecture will be given at 6 P. M. on Tuesday, Dec. 5, by John Bassett Moore, Professor of International Law and Diplomacy at Columbia University, who will show the relations of the various Government departments. The following meetings will be on Tuesday afternoons, beginning Dec. 11. The list of speakers includes Philander C. Knox, Secretary of State; Franklin MacVeagh, Secretary of the Treasury; Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War; George W. Wickersham, Attorney General; Walter Fisher, Secretary of the Interior; George von L. Meyer, Secretary of the Navy; Charles Nagel, Secretary of Commerce and Labor; W. W. Hays, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture; and George B. Cortelyou, ex-Secretary of the Treasury.

Mrs. Francis Bacon, J., Chairman of the Woman's Welfare Department of the Federation, said yesterday:

"We wanted to know something about our Government, and we went directly to the men who surely know all about it. The lectures will be open to the public. It is our idea to teach Democracy—that was Miss Morgan's idea. The course tickets will sell for $12, and if there will be any vacant seats remaining they can be bought, for the individual lectures, at $1.50 each. Seats are limited to 500, I lieve, and the first applicants get the seats."

Amng those associated with Miss Morgan and Mrs. Bacon in the lecture enterprise are Mrs. August Belmont, Mrs. Lindn W. Bates, Mrs. Frances Higginson Cabot, Miss Jeanette L. Gilder, Mrs. Ernest G. Fabbri, Mrs. Mary Hatch Willard, Mrs. Gilbert Mongatue, Mrs. V. Everit Macy, and Mrs. William R. Willcox.

NEW REORGANIZATION PLAN.

J. S. Bache & Co. May Finance Metropolitan Street Railway.

It was learned yesterday that the reason why the joint committee of bondholders of the Metropolitan Street Railway system requested the Public Service Commission to refrain for a time from the consideration of the reorganization plan is the withdrawal of certain bankers and financiers, who had pledged their support to the organization plan filed in 1910. Speaking of this yesterday, Guy E. Trippe, Chairman of the bondholders' committee, said:

"When our plan was filed, we felt it would be financed either by an independent syndicate or through the Interborough-Metropolitan. A year has now elapsed and conditions have so changed that the committee finds certain modifications are necessary. These will not mean necessarily that the total amount of securities are increased, indeed, they may be decreased. No decision has been arrived at as to the exact modification of these securities, but conferences are being held daily, and we expect to be able to announce them within a few days."

It was understood in all Street yesterday that J. S. Bache & Co. will probably supply the $10,000,000 neded to make the plan effective. A representative of this firm denied that they had agreed to head the syndicate to finance the reorganization, but negotiations are under way to that end. The plan under consideration is understood to be the scaling down of the bonded indebtedness by 5 per cent., the 5 per cent. bonds by 2 per cent., and the 4 per cent. bonds by 3 per cent. The extent to which the stock will be scaled down has not yet been decided, but it is not believed that it will be a drastic one.

SUICIDE IN A BATHTUB.

Mrs. C. W. Barney Gives Way to Long Suffering from Asthma.

Charles W. Barney of the form of A. W. Harris & Co., oil dealers at 400 Greenwich Street, returned yesterday afternoon from business to his home, 700 West 180th Street, wtih his son, Charles, Jr. He asked the maid for Mrs. Barney, and learning that she had gone to her room for a nap, went to awaken her. Mrs. Barney was not in her room, and father and son, somewhat worried, went through the house.

They found the bathroom door locked, and young Barney climbed to a window communicating with the bathroom from the hall. He raised this and cried out that his mother was lying in the bath tub, which was full of water.

They broke down the door and found Mrs. Barney apparently lifeless. They called Dr. Edward W. Allison, who lives in the same house, and he asid Mrs. Barney had been dead for half an hour. She had been drowned.

In Mrs. Barney's room was found a note saying that no one but herself must be blamed for her death. She said she could not stand her suffering from asthma any longer. Mr. Barney said that his wife had suffered with this trouble for five years and only recently had returned after spending several months traveling in the hope of finding relief. Mrs. Barney was 58 years old.

TO TELL STORY OF TARRING.

Miss Chamberlain Will Be Witness To-day at Trial of Men She Accuses.

LINCOLN CENTRE, Kan., Nov. 17.—The case of Sherrill Clark, a wealthy merchant; A. N. Simms, a mill worker, and John Schmitt, a farmer, was called in the District Court to-day. The three are charged with assault and battery in connection with the tarring of Miss Mary Chamberlain of Shady Bend, Kan.

Judge Grover announced that no women or children would be allowed in the courtroom, and that the court would have to exclude newspaper men if they sent sensational stories to their papers. The Judge's order was due to a petition from the Women's Civic League of Lincoln County.

The prosecution announced that Miss Chamberlain would take the stand tomorrow and tell her story. According to Miss Chamberlain, three men did the actual work of tarring, while the remainder of the mob looked on. One man held her prostrate, another held the bucket of tar, and a third smeared the black mess over Miss Chamberlain's body and limbs.

SLAIN SLINKING HOME ON TENEMENT ROOF

CAUGHT IN A BLIND ALLEY

Black Hand letters, with drawings of dagger-pierced hearts and revolvers, and demands for blackmail ranging from $500 to $1,000, began to pour in about a year ago upon Luigi Bono, proprietor of the Ronie House and keeper of a good-sized grocery at Highland Falls, N. Y. Luigi, preferring to seek a living elsewhere than to find death at home, sold out his business and moved with his wife, Gracia, to this city, taking five tenement rooms at 2 Hancock Street, and opening a small grocery at 164 West Houston Street, just a block away.

Whether or not he received further letters from the Black Hand after he came here, he did not tell his wife; but she noticed that he seemed worried and depressed, and sometimes, late at night, instead of returning home from his grocery by way of the street and his own house door, he would steal home over the roofs from neighboring tenements. He seemed very much frightened then, and would quickly shut and lock the door of his flat behind him. His grocery business meanwhile prospered nicely and he became well known in the neighborhood. On Thursday night, however, Bono did not return to his home. A customer, Rosena Piccola of 136 West Houston Street, saw him closing the door of his grocery at 9:30 o'clock. Early yesterday morning he was found dead on the roof of 8 Hancock Street by his brother-in-law, Daniel Reppetto, who is the janitor of the building where Bono lived, and who had gone to the roof in search of him at his sister's request. In the dead man's skull, just behind the left ear, was a deep gash that almost split it completely.

The dead man lay huddled against the posts of a six-foot high iron picket fence which separate the roof of No. 8 from that of 2 Hancock Street, and makes a blind alley of a narrow winding passageway between two wooden fences which lead from the scuttle of one roof to the roof of the house adjoining.

Reppetto ran to the Macdougal Street Station and soon Detectives Fitzpatrick and Gilkinson were at work on the case. On the top of the elevated scuttle shed on the roof of 8 Hancock Street, and thus out of sight to those on the roof below and only a few feet from where the dead man lay, they found a new hatchet, the head of which was covered almost to the handle itself in blood. But there was not a single finger print or bloody trace on the handle itself by which to track the man who had wielded it. Coroner's Physician Dr. Lehane, who viewed the body, said the hatchet must have been struck three or four times in the same gash in order to inflict so deep a wound.

There were no signs of a struggle in the blind alley where, as in a cattle pen, Bono met his death. In his pockets were found $27 in cash and his gold watch and chain, a fact that seemed to preclude the theory that he had been set upon by robbers.

The police last evening were unable, after a thorough investigation, to unearth anything except a theory, and were inclined to set down the case as unsolvable. They could not find a single enemy Bono might have had, or discover whether or not he had received threatening letters recently. They concluded that he had, on turning into Hancock Street after leaving the store, seen some one lurking in front of his own door, and, becoming frightened, had decided to make his way home again by way of the roofs from one of the neighboring tenements.

There, however, the police think, some of his persecutors, who had discovered his secret method of reaching home, lay in wait for him and pounced upon him. Luigi, terrified, fled over the roofs, but in his terror mistook his usual route and darted into one of the narrow alleyways instead. This, which looks so much like a wooden cattle pen, ended abruptly at the very edge of his own roof, and before he could climb over the high iron picket fence he was struck from behind and killed.

OFFICIALS WERE "EASED UP."

Chicago Gamblers Had $40,000 Fund and a Schedule for Protection Rates.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—Charges that gamblers kept a fund of $40,000 to "ease up" public officials were made to-day by Harry Brolaski to the Civil Service Commission. Brolaski said he came here last May to investigate gambling and to clear up the city. He said he found the town wide open, with gambling controlled by Mont Tennes, Tom McGinnis, and others.

"I went into a deal with Benjamin Hyman and we rented offices downtown with the intention of getting at the bottom of things and exposing them," said Brolaski. "Hyman apparently was on intimate terms with Chief of Police McWeeny and Police Inspector Hunt. I made written reports of conditions as I found them to Hyman by mailing them to a Post Office box, which, I was told, had been rented by Chief McWeeny. Hyman told me he had a fund of $40,000, which was used in 'easing up public officials.'"

Brolaski testified that these amounts were paid monthly by gamblers and resort keepers in the First Ward for protection:

All-night saloons, $50.
All-night saloons having music, $75.
Crap games, $50.
Resorts selling liquor, $25.

Thirty merchants on the west side visited Mayor Harrison to-day to urge that he temper a recent order driving illegal places off Madison Street. They said that the order had decreased their business 20 to 50 per cent.

"We are tied up there. Our pocketbooks are there," said one merchant. "Driving those folks out will mean an influx of undesirable people from a trade standpoint. We believe they ought to be allowed to stay. It means our business salvation."

Mayor Harrison told his visitors he was determined to clean up the streets. He ended by saying:

HIS DEFENSE CONVICTS HIM.

Guilty of Encouraging, If Not of Teaching, a Boy to Steal.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court dismissed yesterday the appeal of Herman Mirenburg, a lace dealer, of 1,725 Madison Avenue, from a Special Sessions conviction for corrupting the morals of a child, on which he was sentenced to serve four months on Blackwell's Island.

Mirenburg asserted that sixteen-year-old Morris Ufer, whom he was accused of teaching to steal, had been stealing before he met him, and was a confirmed thief when Mirenburg encouraged him to make certain specific thefts. The Appellate Division held:

"Surely one who discovers a young man entering upon the path of wrongdoing and encourages him to continue in that path, instead of seeking to turn him aside, is justly charged with depraving his morals."

TOMPKINS BACK IN TOMBS.

Here from Atlanta Prison to Aid in Prosecution of Other Swindlers.

W. W. Tompkins, who was convicted and sentenced to a year in the Atlanta Federal prison in connection with the United Wireless Company's frauds, has been brought back on a writ of habeas corpus to the Tombs, and is in charge of two Federal wardens, who in their off hours stay at an uptown hotel at a cost to the overnment of $4 a day and their expenses. Tompkins has been down to the Federal Building for several conferences with Assistant District Attorney Stevenson, who obtained his conviction as well as that of Col. Christopher Columbus Wilson. He has also been permitted to visit the office of John B. Stanchfield, who was Wilson's chief counsel.

It is believed that Tompkins, who owns a large tract of land on Lake Mahopac, N. Y., is seeking pardon from the Government in return for what he can tell the District Attorney to assist in the prosecution of Cameron L. Spear, chief promoter of the Continental Wireless Telephone and Telegraph Company, and other alleged mail swindlers now awaiting trial. District Attorney Wise would not discuss the reason of Tompkins's visits to his office, but it is known that on his way to prison he boasted to the Deputy Marshals that he had enough inside information with regard to fake wireless stock concerns to buy his release, and George H. Monroe, who is now in Atlanta as a result of his connection with promoting swindles, writing to his lawyer last week, stated that it is known in the prison that Tompkins intended to tell all he knew.

MONKEYS FOR LINEMEN.

Special to The New York Times.

OWENSVILLE, Ind., Nov. 17.—James A. Walker, owner of the electric light plant here, is planning to use monkeys for assistant linemen. He feels confident he can train monkeys to saw off small branches of trees that rest on electric light wires and wear through the insulation, and to be errand boys, carrying tools from the ground to the men.

A friend of Walker asked him if he intended to have his trained monkey read meters. He answered:

"I would rather have the monkey read meters than waste its time trying to prove that Darwin libeled the monkey family when he set his pet theory going about the origin of the species. I really want to buy a gray monkey and teach it to becomes a lineman and am confident that this can be accomplished with patience."

SHAKES HAMMER AT JUDGE.

Woman Threatens the Court When Her Son Is Taken from Her.

There was much excitement in the Children's Court yesterday morning when Mrs. Harriet Dohnert of 199 East Fifty-eighth Street made a hostile demonstration against Justice Russell with a hammer after he had committed her eleven-year-old son Clarence to the Juvenile Asylum. When she heard that her son was to be taken away from her the woman drew from beneath her shawl a hammer and, waving it wildly about her head, started toward the bench. She shouted that the boy could not be taken from her.

Before she got near Justice Russell she was seized by court attendants and they quieted her down. The Justice said that he did not want to enter a complaint against Mrs. Dohnert, as she was wrought up by the loss of her son. She was led out of the court.

Some days ago neighbors of the woman complained to the Children's Society that Mrs. Dohnert was abusing her son, and that he was not attending school. An investigation showed, the agents say, that Mrs. Dohnert was an improper guardian for the boy. Supt. Walsh sent Agent Frank Barkley to bring the child to court.

Mrs. Dohnert long kept a news stand at Fifty-ninth Street and Lexington Avenue, and she was known to hundreds of persons. Many wrote letters to the society, testifying to the woman's good character. The boy's father is dead.

After hearing the evidence Justice Russell decided that the boy was not under proper care and gave him over to the New York Juvenile Association. It was then that his mother drew the hammer and made a hostile demonstration.

CROKER BACK, SAYING TAMMANY DID WELL

Former Chief One of the Mauretania's Record Cargo of Notable Persons.

LADY DECIES HOME IN PURPLE

Princess San Faustina Brings Her "Two Little Dagoes" for an American Christmas—Much Seasickness Aboard.

After being delayed for mails at Queenstown and buffeted by westerly gales and head seas on the voyage, the Cunard liner Mauretania got in yesterday with 678 cabin passengers, including the largest number of notables brought into New York by any liner this year. The last delay the liner suffered was at the hands of Dr. Doty, who held the Mauretania nearly three hours at Quarantine because there were thirteeen Greeks in the steerage who had passed through the cholera districts of Italy and one of whom had been taken ill on board.

One of the first to descend the gangway was Richard Croker, who is now spending his time breeding race horses in Ireland, on his way to Florida for the Winter, which has become an annual event with him. He looked grayer and slimmer than he did on leaving this country last Spring, but his cheeks had the ruddy glow of the country life.

Mr. Croker's deafness appeared to have become more pronounced, which was especially apparent when the former Tammany Chief was asked for his opinion on local politics and the recent election.

"I am through with politics," he said tersely; "they don't interest me anymore. Why should they?"

Tammany Did Fairly Well.

Mr. Croker had heard that Tammany had carried New York City by 50,000, and when undeceived by the reporters, he replied:

"I think Tammany did well. They might have got in worse."

He went on to say that he thought Murphy had done as well as could be expected. "Look at the opposition," said Mr. Croker. "He had everybody against him, everybody against Tammany. It was a good ticket."

"But Tammany lost the Assembly," said one of his interviewers.

"Well, what else could be expected? All that is necessary to make the up-State tickets go against the Democrats is to tell them that Tammany is running them. I'm glad the Tammany ticket was elected, as it was a good one. Henry D. Hotchkiss is an old friend of mine, and will make a good Judge. Cohalan is another friend of mine, and a fine fellow, too. I am glad he was elected."

Asked for an opinion on Charles Murphy, Mr. Croker said he was a good man. He shook his head on being asked if he did not know that there was a movement on foot to have Murphy removed from the leadership of Tammany Hall. At this point Mr. Croker's deafness became painfully acute.

"Do you think that Theodore Roosevelt is trying to get back into politics?" was another query.

"He always was in politics," said Mr. Croker, and would not say more as to the former President's attack on Taft's way of dealing with the trusts.

Mr. Croker became enthusiastic on Ireland. It would have home rule for certain in the near future, said, adding:

"All that Ireland needs now is capital to develop her mineral wealth, and with the combination of her own Government you will have immigration from the United States there. Home rule will come in two years at the longest, as the Liberal Party is stronger than ever, and it stands pledged to pass the bill."

He said that there was an increase in trusts, or other matters. Ireland of agricultural products, and that farmers were competing favorably with the Danes in the butter, eggs, and other dairy produce on the English markets. All the women in Ireland were praising Nathan Straus for his pure milk depot opened recently in Dublin.

Mr. Croker was met at Quarantine by his son Richard, and will stay at the Democratic Club here for three or four days before starting for Lexington, Ky., to see some famous stud farms on his way to Florida.

Lord and Lady Decies Here.

Lord and Lady Decies came to see the Horse Show, at which Lord Decies is one of the judges, and to pay a visit to Mr. and Mrs. George Jay Gould. Lady Decies, who was Miss Vivien Gould, seemed more matronly than when she sailed away for Egypt last February on her honeymoon. She wore a royal purple tailor-made gown with a sable coat that reached to her ankles and a black picture hat with a purple plume to match her gown. She remarked that they had experienced awfully awful weather on the trip across and that New York was rather cold for this time of the year, as she remembered it.

Lord Decies, who wore a long, gray coat and gray homespun traveling suit with a bowler hat, agreed with Richard Croker that Ireland would soon have home rule and that it would be beneficial to the people. A great deal of the opposition to the bill had disappeared. Lord and Lady Decies will stay in this city until after the wedding of Lord Camoys and Miss Mildred Sherman, and then go to Georgian Court, Lakewood, for the Christmas holidays.

Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, another passenger on the big Cunarder, comes over for a short visit to attend to legal matters, which will take her to Philadelphia. She will return to London to entertain in the house she has rented from Mr. Asquith. Mrs. Drexel was accompanied by her nephew, W. Rhinelander Stewart, Jr. Mrs. James Henry Smith, Mr. Stewart's mother, was booked on the ship, but changed her mind at the last moment. When seeing her friends off at Euston Station, London, she said that her daughter Anita had gone to the frontier of Portugal to join her husband, the Duke of Braganza, who was waiting to see what turned up. He thought that the Portuguese might accept him for their King.

Another wealthy notable on board was Mrs. William B. Leeds, who said emphatically that she was not going to marry Lord Faulkner or any one else. Her visit was a business one. Mrs. Leeds was accompanied by her eight-year-old son, who, she said, would be brought up as an American.

With Mrs. Leeds, to spend Christmas in her native land, was the Princess San Faustina, formerly Miss Jean Campbell of Philadelphia, daughter of George Campbell, the wealthy linseed oil man, who brought her two children, Virginia del Monte and Ranier del Monte, to see America. As she pointed them out to the reporters the Princess said laughingly:

"These are my two little dagoes. They will be brought up in Italy, but my boy will be taught to work like an American boy, so that he will not lead a useless, idle life when he grows up."

It was seventeen years since she last visited America, the Princess said, and when asked for her opinion of the changes wrought in the City of New York as seen from the harbor, she replied, "They have ruined it."

Voyage the Worst Ever.

Lady Henry, wife of Sir Charles Henry, one of the prominent Liberals and a close friend of Mr. Asquith, came over to visit her relatives in Washington and will stay a few days in New York at the Ritz-Carlton. She said that the voyage was the worst she had ever experienced and that most of the passengers suffered from seasickness, including herself. Lady Henry said that the outlook for trade in England was much better this Winter and the demand for labor was steadily increasing.

Post Wheeler, Secretary of the United States Embassy at St. Petersburg, was accompanied by his wife, Hallie Erminie Rives, the authoress, who said that she was writing a novel dealing with the American conscience. She also intended to see her play, "Satan Sanderson," now being played somewhere in the Middle West, if it could be located.

There were also two distinguished Japanese on the Mauretania, who are on their way home. One is Count Watanabe, whose father is Minister of the Emperor's household. He had been to Rome to attend the International Peace Conference, which was interrupted by cholera and the Italian-Turkish war. The other is K. Kitashima, one of the best-known authorities on contagious diseases in the armies of the world, who went to Rome to attend a conference on the prevention of contagious diseases.

Other celebrities on board included Lady Johnstone, Mrs. Lawson Johnstone, Bishop Johnson, Sir Charles Ross, proprietor of The Montreal Star, and J. Ogden Armour, who had nothing to say on business, trusts, or other matters.

ONE DEATH BY FIRE A DAY IN NEW YORK

FACTORY CONDITIONS BAD

Henry R. Morgenthau Declares Triangle Company Disaster Has Not Brought Improvement.

Henry R. Morgenthau, President of the City Committee of Safety, named to inquire into conditions in loft and factory buildings after the Triangle waist factory fire, told the State Factory Investigating Commission yesterday afternoon that an examination made as recently as two days ago showed worse conditions existing to-day than caused the loss of 143 lives in the Triangle fire. The commission learned from William L. Beers, who until last Wednesday was Fire Marshal, that these factory conditions and the careless or incendiary use of matches, are responsible for an average of one person burned to death in the city each day.

Mr. Morgenthau declared that in one block on University Place, where 3,750 persons are employed daily, the buildings they work in are so imperfectly fitted with exits and fire escapes that he did not think more than 5 per cent. of the employes could get out in case of panic. The inspection of this block, only a short distance from the Triangle factory, discovered fire escapes leading into blind alleys and windows opening so as to block the fire escape balconies. Sweatshops had been inspected on the east side, he said, that showed nothing remotely resembling fire extinguishers, to stop a blaze that might at any time start among the crowded workers.

Mr. Beers gave the commission quite a lecture on incendiarism and incendiaries he had met. Most of the fires in the city, he said, were due to careless use of matches, cigarettes, and gasolene, and the resultant loss in 1910 alone amounted to $8,000,000 and seventy-two lives. In 1911 the loss of life was 200.

Many of these fires and much of the loss, he declared, could be prevented by a more systematic treatment of pyromaniacs, who, he said, work very systematically.

"I have here a chart," said Mr. Beers, "showing that one of these perverts has been working systematically every Friday night for the last six weeks, setting from two to four fires each Friday along a section of Amsterdam Avenue. The third week he started on Wednesday, too, and last week he was out on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday nights. He is still at large and working. We know this one because he always sets what we call 'cellar fires,' as opposed to 'hallway' or 'stairway' fires, in which other pyromaniacs specialize. We cannot catch him, because it is very easy for a pyromaniac to disappear from the scene of his operations long before the alarm is sounded."

Mr. Beers then told of one known as the "bottle man," because he always in his long career of fire starting took a soda water bottle full of kerosene and left the bottle. He was finally laid by the heels and sent to the asylum at Central Islip. Early in the year more bottle fires appeared again.

"We communicated with the asylum authorities," said Mr. Beers, "and were informed that the bottle man was still safely lodged there. As a matter of fact, as we subsequently discovered, he was then at large and gleefully setting fires.

"Another man, whom we have sent to Sing Sing for thirty years, started his operations by burning down, one after another, a row of cottages at Gloucester, Mass. It was not till he burned down the home of the District Attorney there that he was caught. He was released from prison on condition that he leave the State. He did, and turned up in Flushing. A stable and the Bayside Yacht Club burned right away to signalize his arrival."

Mr. Beers declared that much of the incendiarism was undoubtedly due to over-insuring of buildings, and that the practice of granting more insurance than the building was worth was indulged in to an undreamed of extent. He produced a chart showing that in some fifteen square blocks bounded by Ninety-eighth and 103d Streets, and Lexington Avenue and the East River, 272 fires occurred in the closing months of 1910 and January and February of this year. In one case there were four fires in one house. Only in three or four cases was there no insurance.

One of the chief witnesses at the hearing, which will be resumed this morning, will be Health Commissioner Lederle.

DROPS DEAD ON ROADWAY.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Nov. 17.—While driving along Johnston's Drive on the crest of the Watchung Mountain back of Plainfield shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon, William Lee, a Scotch Plains innkeeper, found the body of George R. Stelle of Plainfield in the roadway.

Stelle was a graduate of Yale University, class of 1871, and was 55 years old. Lee summoned Chief Marshal Lemuel Pope and Councilman W. L. Smalley of North Plainfield, who, after a hasty examination, said that death was due either to apoplexy or heart disease. Stelle was lying prone on his back with a gash in his forehead, which was probably caused by his falling on a stone.

Miss Elizabeth Shotwell of North Plainfield, Stelle's aunt, with whom he lived, said that her nephew left home early today for a long walk. Stelle was a traveling salesman.

Candidates Tell What They Spent.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Justice-elect Van Siclen filed a statement that he spent $2,521.91 in aid of his election and received $66.67 in contributions. Supreme Court Justice-elect Irving G. Hubbs of the Fifth Judicial District certified he spent $289, while Supreme Court Justice-elect Edgar C. Emerson of the same district spent $1,616.77. Frederick M. Boyer, Chairman of the Non-Partisan Judiciary Committee of Jefferson County, filed a statement showing that the committee received $2,230 and spent $2,245.

WOMEN TELL OF HATPIN HORRORS

RESOLUTIONS SMOTHERED

Rebuke to Poetess Who Grilled the Mayor Peacefully Buried — Thanks for Everyone—Directors Named.

The seventeenth annual convention of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, representing 200,000 women, which had been in session at the Hotel Astor since Tuesday morning, closed yesterday afternoon with a feeling of pride and self-satisfaction.

The only ripple ruffling the waters of its calm contentment was the pungent speech of the Mayor and the poem upon it, read unofficially the next day by a club official from the platform.

There was to have been a resolution yesterday rebuking the latter, but, while it was drawn up, it was not passed. The incident was only indirectly referred to, and in the long list of grateful acknowledgements the federation "extended its thanks and deep appreciation to the Mayor of New York City."

The resolution on the rhymes against the Mayor was to have been proposed by Mrs. John S. Crosby, President of the Woman's Democratic Club. It was drawn up as follows:

> Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that speakers who kindly consent to address its meetings should be shown the consideration and courtesy due to invited guests, and that when delegates disapprove of sentiments expressed by this or that speaker they should not forget, in voicing their dissent, to conserve that dignified respect which the convention owes to itself and to the public.

Mrs. Crosby did not propose it because she was told that one on the same subject had already been prepared. This when presented by the Resolutions Committee was simply a resolution against resolutions. It stated that as frivolous resolutions and communications were frequently sent to the platform to be read they should not in future be given out without the consent and approbation of the President.

"I was sorry about it," said Mrs. Crosby at the close of the convention, "but I did not present my resolution later because I did not want people to go away saying that Mrs. Crosby had introduced the only inharmonious note in the convention."

Two other resolutions which did not go through were upon the ten commandments and hatpins. It was proposed that the convention express itself as in favor of having the ten commandments read in the public schools daily, but it was decided that as this was a matter that might seem to interfere with people of different religions and denominations it should be put over for deliberation.

Different women told of dangerous accidents from hatpins. One had a friend whose finger had recently been amputated after the skin had been badly torn by a hatpin in a street car. Mrs. Ruth Litt said that there was danger in long hatpins when out of hats as well as in them. She told of having nearly been impaled on one with which a woman was trying to fasten her hat to a seat in front of her. It passed through the seat and Mrs. Litt's gown and drew blood. The women didn't pass the hatpin resolution, however, because they were afraid a matter so open to humorous treatment might bring ridicule upon them. Twenty different resolutions were thrown out.

The election this year was only for Directors and District Chairmen. The Directors were Mrs. J. M. Edsall, Brooklyn; Mrs. A. Z. De Long, Glens Falls; Mrs. S. W. Sherwood, Cortland, and Mrs. A. H. Hildreth, Syracuse.

Nine District Chairmen elected were Miss Sara A. Palmer, New York; Mrs. Everett F. Griffith, Rockville Centre; Mrs. Joseph McQuide, Troy; Mrs. Thomas R. Kneil, Saratoga Springs; Mrs. Edward F. Haskell, Oneida; Mrs. H. W. Dickinson, Bainbridge; Mrs. James O. Sebrig, Corning; Mrs. Martha Murrill, and Mrs. Walter S. Comly of Port Chester.

There were formal thanks for every one yesterday, for Sorosis and the Hostess Clubs, the hotel proprietor, Admiral Leutze of the Navy Yard, and the officers of the Deleware, which the women visited Thursday; the managers of the theatres, the officers of the convention doing special duties, and all other friends and generally and informally to President Miss Mary Garrett Hay. Resolutions of regret upon the deaths of Mrs. Esther Herrman and Mrs. Eastman were sent to their respective families.

The Federation Scholarship Fund was raised to $20,000, within $5,000 of compeltion, since the convention opened..

Delay in Dissolution of Powder Trust.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 17.—Judge Gray extended to-day until Dec. 15 the time for completing suggestions as to the form of the final decree to be entered in the Government's suit for the dissolution of the so-called Powder Trust. The decree will be based on the decision last June by the Circuit Court that the combination must be dissolved.

MAYORAL COMMITTEE ON PEACE CENTENARY

Prominent Citizens Named to Arrange for the Celebration Here in 1915.

ANNIVERSARY OF GHENT

Mayor Gaynor, at the request of William Curtis Demorest, Chairman of a special sub-committee of the National Committee for the celebration in 1914-1915 of the one hundredth anniversary of peace among English-speaking peoples, named yesterday a committee to arrange for the celebration in New York City. The list comprises 136 well-known New York citizens.

The National Committee has been organized in conjunction with similar movements in Great Britain, Canada, and other parts of the English-speaking world. The committee plans to commemorate the peace anniversary by the erection of permanent memorials rather than by street pageantry. For this reason it has been necessary to organize far in advance of the celebration, which will extend from Feb. 17, 1915, until some time in the Summer, coming to a close with ceremonial exercises in San Francisco.

Senator Elihu Root has suggested to the committee that for a given five minutes on Feb. 17, 1915, the anniversary of the ratification by the American and British Governments of the treaty signed at Ghent, all human activities, so far as possible, shall absolutely cease and that the 150,000,000 English-speaking people throughout the world shall engage in silent prayer and contemplation.

Border Memorials Suggested.

A number of suggestions have been made regarding the nature of the permanent memorials. One proposes a monument in the form of a water gate to be erected on the Canadian and American sides of the Detroit River at Detroit, Mich., and Windsor, Ontario, and another that an arch be placed on the Canadian frontier over the New York to Montreal Highway, now being built. Still another is that boundary monuments of artistic design be erected at local points along the American-Canadian frontier.

It has been advocated also that a building be erected here to be dedicated to the cause of peaceful progress, in which international congresses and public meetings can be held.

A committee, consisting of George F. Kunz, T. Commerford Martin, and Alfred J. Boulton of the Peoples' Institute is preparing a report with reference to a plan of celebration for this city. Ex-Justice Alton B. Parker is Chairman of the Committee on Legislation of the National Committee, and his committee has already secured passage through a number of State Legislatures of joint resolutions approving the celebration, and the Governors in those States have each appointed Committees of Five as members of the National and Executive Committees.

Delay in Harvester Dissolution.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The negotiations between the Department of Justice and the International Harvester Company have been temporarily suspended, pending action by officials of the so-called Harvester Trust upon the department's objections to the plan of dissolution submitted by the representatives of the company.

NEWS OF BOOKS

MRS. WHARTON, who is at present staying in Paris, has in preparation two novels. One of these, "The Custom of the Country," is to appear in the near future. The other is to be entitled "The Wake." Mrs. Wharton's last novel, "Ethan Frome," which was published only a few weeks ago, has already gone into a second edition of considerable size. With it she enters a new field. Although the scenes of many of her books have been laid in New England, this is the first one which has dealt with the country people of New England—the same people about whom Miss Jewitt and Mrs. Wilkins wrote.

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett writes as follows in her preface to the new holiday edition of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," illustrated by Reginald Birch, who illustrated the first edition:

"About twenty-five years ago this story was written. The children who read it first are now men and women. Many of them have children of their own, and these children it seems are reading it also—or want to read it, or their friends wish to give it to them to read. As I myself loved Fauntleroy, it is a happiness to me to know that so many others loved him. The book which told his story has been read so many thousand times that its lettering has been worn out and its pictures have faded away. As he himself has not faded away, there has been made this new book with new pictures by the same hand which years ago created the first Fauntleroy who made his cheerful little bow to the world. On my own part I feel it great good fortune that he has been recreated by the hand of a friend and not by that of a stranger. To every one who has loved this little boy of my heart I give greeting and affectionate thanks."

Maurice Leblanc, author of "813," "Arsene Lupin," and other mystery stories, spends his Summers very quietly with his family in the ancient Château de Tancarville, on the banks of the Seine, 15 miles from the Abbey of St. Wandrille, where his brother-in-law, Maurice Maeterlinck, lives. The château is one of the most ancient and most famous of the feudal fortresses of Normandy. It was built by a companion of William the Conqueror. M. Leblanc lives in the Eagle Tower, which is the scene of many legends of feudal battles.

Notable in an age of prose is the popularity of the poetry of Henry van Dyke. There has now been published a single volume which contains all his poetry revised and with many poems hitherto unpublished. Over 60,000 copies of the earlier volumes of his verse have been sold. So steady and strong is the demand for Dr. van Dyke's poetry that for a first edition of the complete single volume collection 10,000 copies were printed. That was a month ago and half the number has already been sold.

Robert Herrick has just sailed for Europe, where he will remain a number of weeks. Since Mr. Herrick turned the manuscript of "The Healer," his latest novel, over to his publishers, early in October, he has been stopping in New York in order to facilitate the publication of the story.

It would seem impossible to limit the influence which Da Vinci's "Mona Lisa" has exerted in art and literature. Various novelists have compared their heroines to the Florentine beauty, among whom Lucas Malet is the latest. "The strange recondite quality of her beauty and the challenge it offered were peculiarly in evidence," writes the author when describing Gabrielle St. Leger, loved by Adrian Savage. In the prefatory note to her new novel, which is called "Adrian Savage," after the hero, Lucas Malet remarks that the disappearance of the painting from the Salon Carré took place while the manuscript of "Adrian Savage" was in the hands of the printers, and she expresses a hope "that this most seductive of women will be safely restored to her former dwelling place before any copies of my novel are in the hands of the public."

In his monograph on "Lord Randolph Churchill," Lord Rosebery quotes a letter written by that statesman on the accession of Balfour to power. "So Arthur Balfour is really leader and Tory Democracy, the genuine article, is at an end." The cables last week told the world of Balfour's resignation, and singularly enough the resignation of Lord Randolph had something of the same pathetic note which now characterizes that of Balfour. "Well, I have had quite enough of it all. I have waited with great patience for the tide to turn, but it has not turned, and will not now turn in time. * * * More than two-thirds in all probability of my life is over, and I will not spend the remainder of my years in beating my head against a stone wall."

"Advertising is bringing all the English-speaking people—indeed, the entire world—closer together," said Herbert S. Houston recently in London while visiting there for the purpose of inviting the advertising men of Great Britain to the National Convention of Advertising Clubs, to be held next year in Dallas, Texas. It was hoped, Mr. Houston explained, to make the association international, and as proof of his first statement, he declares that already the National advertising organization has received word from a number of the biggest advertising men in England that they will go all the way to Dallas next Summer to attend the convention. Mr. Houston recently returned from abroad, and he declared that the progress of advertising in England has kept pace in nearly every particular with that in the United States, and that the British advertising men were eager to attend the American conferences and conventions for the purposes of learning more of American methods.

Frederick Townsend Martin, author of "The Passing of the Idle Rich," sailed for New York on the Mauretania on Nov. 11. Mr. Martin has been in Europe since last Spring, and varied his social activities with writing and public speaking on subjects relating to the extravagance and shallowness of the class he deals with in his book.

Bouck White, author of "The Call of the Carpenter," just off the presses of Doubleday, Page & Co., denies that there is any incongruity between the fact that he is an authority on the life of Jesus, his book being an economic interpretation of Christ as workingman, and the fact that he is delving deep in matters pugilistic. "My contention in that book right along," declared the author, who also is head resident of Trinity House of Holy Trinity Church, Brooklyn, "was that this Man of Galilee has been overmuch segregated from the thicket of affairs." Mr. White became an authority on matters pugilistic somewhat by inadvertance. Several days ago the Trinity Athletic Club of Brooklyn, of which he is Secretary, planned an entertainment at which there was to have been amateur boxing. The police stopped it, and Mr. White wrote a letter to Mayor Gaynor demanding an impartial enforcement of the Frawley boxing law, on the grounds that general enforcement would bring out the unfairness of the law and that the ensuing general discontent would cause its repeal. Therefore Mr. White is fighting for a new boxing law. He says: "Bouts rigidly limited to three rounds of three minutes each provide all that amateur boxing requires and would put professionalism practically out of the game."

Maude M. Holbach, author of "Bosnia and Herzegovina" and "Dalmatia," is planning a lecture tour, to begin the end of January, 1912, and to cover the leading cities of the United States. Her lecture will be illustrated with slides and will be devoted to Dalmatia, Bosnia, and other parts of the Austrian Empire.

Ellis Parker Butler, author of "The Adventures of a Suburbanite" and other humorous stories, recently laid aside his humor for a serious piece of work, which he declares was harder to write than anything he ever attempted. He wrote a play which will be produced Nov. 25 in the Good Citizenship League Building in Flushing, L. I., where Mr. Butler lives, and where he gathered the material for "The Adventures of a Suburbanite." The play will be given by the girls of the I. I. Club of Flushing for the benefit of the Flushing Playground Association, of which Mr. Butler is one of the most enthusiastic backers.

In spite of his knowledge of the privations and struggles of the poor, James Oppenheim, whose novel, "The Nine-Tenths," incorporates many incidents of last Winter's strikes, has a firm belief that the present social evolution—or revolution, as he prefers to call it—will better conditions, and also that it is possible to hasten this day by education—social education—to supplement that taught in the schools. "The education of the rank and file of Europe has gone further than in America," he says. "Conditions in Europe are worse and have demanded it. But the rank and file in America are waking up."

It is said that the pearl market is now no longer dependent upon the deep-sea Indian fisheries, but is largely supplied from fresh-water mussels of American rivers—the Mississippi, Wabash, Arkansas, Red River, &c. E. B. and A. A. Knipe, authors of "The Missing Pearls," a sequel to "Little Miss Fales," have made use of this fact in their story. One of the characters living in Iowa discovers several valuable pink pearls in the river, with the result that he is suspected of having stolen a costly pearly necklace.

FROM THE DUTTON LIST

Good books are those which awaken the imagination and cultivate the love for and habit of reading. An interesting list of Children's Books of this class will be found in Dutton's Annual Catalogue. Free on request.

The Sunset of the Heroes
By W. M. L. HUTCHINSON. Illustrations by Herbert Cole.
The Trojan War and the closing events of the Greek Heroic Age retold most interestingly by Miss Hutchinson, Greek Coach at Newnham. To give completeness to the story there is a Prologue which sketches briefly the Judgment of Paris, the Stealing of Helen, and the events of the war to the close of the Homeric legend. Price $2.00.

The Story of Bayard
By CHRISTOPHER HARE. Illustrations by Herbert Cole.
The good knight "without fear and without reproach" has been a favorite hero with the young people of all ages. The inspiring story of Bayard's adventures is particularly attractive in the present version with its excellent pictures. Price $2.00.

The Children's Shakespeare
An unfailing incentive to young readers to make early acquaintance with the original text. The plays dealt with are the following: Midsummer Night's Dream, The Tempest, Richard II., Hamlet, As You Like It, King Henry V., King Lear, Julius Caesar, Macbeth, King John, Romeo and Juliet, Merchant of Venice, Pericles, Taming of the Shrew, Coriolanus; Twelfth Night. Price $3.00.

Gulliver's Travels
By DEAN SWIFT. Illustrations by A. E. Jackson.
Swift's wonderful book of adventures presented in a most delightful form with six full-page colored illustrations and twelve full-page black and white drawings. The edition has been specially and successfully adapted to young readers. Price $2.50.

Sylvia's Travels
By CONSTANCE ARMFIELD. Illustrations in color by Maxwell Armfield.
Sylvia appeals to children just as Lewis Carroll's Alice continues to after two generations of readers have grown up. The illustrations are wonderfully beautiful and will delight art lovers, old and young. Price $2.50.

Pinnochio
By C. COLLIDI (Carlo Lorenzini.)
The best puppet story ever written. It comes from Italy, the home of puppet lore and puppet literature, and the Talking Cricket talks a great deal of sense along with much charming nonsense. You laugh with him and find yourself the wiser for it. Price $2.50.

The True Annals of Fairyland
THE REIGN OF KING COLE. Recorded by J. M. Gibbon.

THE CHRIST MYTH
By Arthur Drews, Ph.D.
PROFESSOR OF PHILOSOPHY AT KARLSRUHE
300 pages. Cloth, price $2.25 net, post paid.

THIS book is an able attempt to show that the origin of Christianity can be accounted for without the assumption of an historical Jesus. As a scientific and well-documented study in comparative religion the work is likely to be of much interest, even to those who are not able to accept the author's more extensive views.

Answers Every Question a Child Can Ask

How does the moon cause tides?
Why do flowers vary in color?
Why cannot fishes live on land?
Why are dark things warmer than light?
Why do we laugh?
Why does a ball bounce?
Can flies hear?
What is the sun made of?
What keeps the air round the earth?
Why do bubbles rise and fall?
Why have we lines on our hands?
Why is fire hot?

The Book of Knowledge
The Children's Encyclopedia

Pictures With a Purpose

What appeals to the eye will remain in the memory. Almost every page of this great work shows a picture which really does illustrate the text. The different stages of important industrial processes are pictured in such articles as—The World's Bread and Butter; Making Iron and Steel—Coal; How We Dig Up Sunshine; A Piece of Rope; The Story of a Fur Coat; How Pianos Are Made; and hundreds of others. Beautiful pictures of foreign lands, reproductions of famous paintings and sculpture, portraits of noted authors and statesmen, the wonders of Nature and Science. Birds, animals, plants and fishes shown in their natural colors.

Written by Specialists

The 15 Great Departments have been written and edited by specialists, English and American, who know how to write for children. The simplicity, vividness and directness of the short articles hold the child's attention from volume to volume while he is unconsciously laying up a treasure of valuable facts.

President John H. Finley of the College of the City of New York, in his introduction, says:

"Suppose a boy of ten were to spend fifteen minutes a day in reading these pages, . . . he would at thirteen know more about the earth and the life on it than the wisest men knew a few generations ago."

Creates the Reading Habit

The old idea of treating each subject in a whole volume, of which the child soon wearies, defeats instead of creating the reading habit. Few children can read about any subject longer than thirty minutes, and THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE has been skillfully planned to meet this psychological necessity. Thus every volume has a sufficient variety of reading matter and illustration to make it "interesting from cover to cover."

Let the Children Decide

They will be delighted with the beautiful illustrated booklet mailed free giving the contents of the 15 Departments of Knowledge. 6 Colored plates.

THE GIRL THAT GOES WRONG
By REGINALD WRIGHT KAUFFMAN
12mo. $1.25 net.

A SERIES OF TRUE STORIES—PATHETIC BEYOND WORDS—THE POOR UNFORTUNATES MAKE THEIR APPEAL IN A MESSAGE WHICH CANNOT BE IGNORED.

THE inexpressible conditions of human bondage of many young girls and women in our cities demand a fearless and uncompromising warfare. The terrible peril that lingers near every American home, and threatens to undermine the very foundation of civilization, must be stamped out with relentless purpose. The facts contained in this new work have been verified by the author while collecting material for his novel on White Slavery.

ROWLAND THOMAS, Critic, writes in Collier's: "The book itself we are moved to recommend to the reading of every man and woman and boy, and especially of every girl, in these United States. Such modest limit we set for the present to the carrying power of our voice."

Mr. EDWIN W. SIMS, United States District Attorney at Chicago, says: "It is one of the strongest books on the particular phase of the social evil problem which it covers that I have ever read. It typifies the situation in general and I can earnestly recommend it to fathers and mothers and others interested in the subject."

JEFFERY FARNOL and "THE ROAD"

The success of "The Broad Highway"—and it was a very great success—was due to its appeal to our sense of Romance and Adventure. There is a suggestion about the open road as of something about to happen, a suggestion which Farnol develops most happily, for something does happen.

And so his short story, "The Journey's End," is a story of this same road, or the end of such a road, and the end of a journey thereon, and of a wanderer and what he found at the journey's end. This is the first short story Jeffery Farnol has published since his book made him known. It is a good short story, one of the good short stories in the November CENTURY, but by no means the only one. "Straight Golf," "Syndicating Sarah" and "His Unquiet Ghost," the latter by Charles Egbert Craddock, help to make a most promising start for the eighty-third volume of the

The Case of Richard Meynell

By the Author of "Robert Elsmere"

London Times: "The story is told with delicacy and distinction. In this volume are fine touches and noble thoughts worthily expressed. Here and there is a subtle phrase which carries expression into the realm of music . . . none will question the truthfulness and vividness of the picture of a spiritual struggle, or be oblivious to the excellence of the workmanship and the nobility of the motives of the writer."

London Morning Post: "It reveals once more Mrs. Humphry Ward's power of reflecting contemporary life in fiction . . . the book is characteristic of the author at her best."

London Daily Chronicle: "No one has ever denied Mrs. Ward the courage of her convictions or the power to express her views. 'Richard Meynell' challenges one conviction after another. It is extraordinarily provocative of disputation, a gauntlet thrown into the arena of intellectualism."

THE NEW CRITICISM
A LECTURE
BY
J. E. SPINGARN

This lecture, originally delivered by Professor Spingarn at Columbia University, has provoked an extraordinary amount of controversy in England. Mr. A. B. Walkley devoted two columns of the London Times to demolishing its arguments, and Mr. William Archer answered it at even greater length in two articles in the London Morning Leader, beginning: "This lecture has kindled in me such a flame of indignation that I cannot bank it down, even for a single paragraph." On the other hand, Mr. J. W. Mackail, Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford, says: "I have seldom had the pleasure of reading so much important truth brought together into so compact a form as in this lecture."

"Professor Spingarn is so gay and vivacious that we are tempted to overlook his pugnacity. He has not that solemnity of utterance and prim correctness which is the note of American criticism."—Oxford Magazine, England.

"Professor Spingarn drops a shell into the critical camp by his essay on the New Criticism. It is the most sweepingly iconoclastic utterance of its kind that I have ever seen. The writer handles his theme with a stimulating brilliance."—Prof. Richard Burton in The Bellman.

"A little thinking after the close of this blood-stirring lecture leads one to suspect that what our critical apparatus needs is readaption rather than destruction. But it is good to have it all challenged. Such wood-chopping is a refreshing sign of vigorous intellectual life in an American university, and one may hope that it is only a coincidence that the author is no longer a college professor."—Chicago Evening Post.

The Mansion

By Henry van Dyke

Here is the van Dyke book—and whoever has read "The Story of the Other Wise Man" can guess some of the new beauty and spiritual charm here revealed. "The Mansion" tells the story of a prosperous man who, in the Heavenly City seeks the mansion prepared for him. A story—yes, a good story and one in which the lamp of spiritual truth burns brightly, stirring the reader and his conscience at the same time.

Surface Japan

By Don C. Seitz

Like the chat—informal and enthusiastic—of a friend, just returned, who sits down to tell only of the most interesting things. A book of rare beauty it is, with 20 full-page colored Japanese photogravures. The price is $5, because it is the most artistic book published in a long while.

Padre Ignacio

By Owen Wister

On the Californian coast Padre Ignacio, once a member of the gai world, has found contentment in renunciation. Temptation comes when for the first time in twenty years he enjoys the polished contact with a stranger—a man of the world, and he determines to sail away but—A rare charm pervades this little story.

The Jaunts of Junior

A marvelous book for children and grown-ups. It shows what wonders can be done with photographs. It is first of all a book of photographs of a real boy—who is made to appear no taller than a lead-pencil. The pictures show him bathing in a canary's bathtub, fishing in the gold-fish bowl, much taller than himself, racing over the keyboard of the piano, playing leapfrog over the salt-cellars—and many other marvels, made by Arthur B. Phalen. Delightful verses by Lillian B. Hunt explain the adventures.

Comrades

By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps

A veteran who has outlived all his companions, goes forth alone on Memorial Day to decorate their graves. His wife's devotion makes him realize that the title of comrade belongs to her even more than to the men who fell by his side in the ranks. This beautiful tale is the only book by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps published since her death last January.

FIND THE WOMAN

Find the Woman is in the form of a sort of Arabian Nights' Entertainment comprising adventures in every section of New York from Wall Street to Harlem with widely varying types of metropolitan character. The whole comprises the story of a single night.

Mr. Burgess is known for his satire and wit and in these qualities of writing he has never appeared to better advantage than here. The gaiety, mystery, and adventure of the romance, too, will add greatly to his reputation.

MR. BRYCE'S MESSAGE.

Forty years ago Mr. Bryce came to the United States, as de Tocqueville had come some forty years earlier, to study the working of the greatest democratic experiment the world had seen. He came in a spirit of entire sympathy with the best motives of democracy, but with the impartial temperament and the sense of responsibility of the true student. The result was his "American Commonwealth," a work even more acute, broad, and informing than that of his eminent predecessor. Speaking before the Chamber of Commerce on Thursday evening, he made a very significant comparison of the present situation and that of twoscore years ago.

It was an expression of sturdy, well-considered, and candid optimism. The most obvious difference between the present and the past to which he referred was the fact that in 1870 the people of the United States were struggling with an immense national problem, the adjustment of the conditions of life to the results of the strenuous civil strife from which we were but just emerging. This was not merely a political problem, not alone the question of the relations of the late rebellious States and their people to the National Government and to the Nation. It was also an economic and social problem, more vast and complex than any nation, modern or ancient, had had to deal with. It was thickly beset with difficulties and dangers, and its progress toward solution was marked within a few years by a panic that shook the foundations of the business world and by a disputed election big with the threat of renewed armed strife. As Mr. Bryce pointed out, the problems of that day no longer weigh on the minds of the people of this day. For most of us they are not even matters of memory, but of history, so completely have they been settled and so unchangeably has their settlement been accepted and absorbed in the National consciousness.

To-day we have a new set of problems. They are engrossing, and to those who are wrestling with them they seem not only grave but almost desperate. But really, compared with those that remain vividly in the mind of the philosophic observer of forty years ago, they need give us no serious apprehension. And it was his message to us, that while the seriousness exists there is no occasion for apprehension, since the qualities that enabled the Nation to cope with the earlier troubles may be relied on to cope with the later. Mr. Bryce remarked especially the fact that we do not really take into account the tremendous changes that have gone on in the last forty years. The simple concrete statement that twice as many people are doing four times as much business in our land—that is, that the average product of the energy and skill of the individual American has literally doubled in a single generation—carries with it significance that it is hard to grasp in the midst of the tense activity that the change involves. It is well to have its lesson enforced for us by an observer of the authority of Mr. Bryce.

There was one passage in the speech of Mr. Bryce that we all, optimists or pessimists, would do well to consider. It brings out very clearly the fact that we cannot excuse ourselves for either extravagant hope or extravagant fear because of the changes going on about us and with us. We like sometimes to think that we are relieved from some responsibility since we live in a "period of transition." Of course we do. So has every human being since the stone age. It may be for the better or for the worse, but transition there always is, and we share in it. It is our business to deal with it as best we can. Mr. Bryce said:

> Popular government is always on its trial. Every form of government is always on its trial. And you here in the United States are trying all those experiments which belong to popular government on the greatest scale, and more in the eyes of the world than any other country, because the world feels that the experiments that you try here, with your gigantic population and your wonderful future, are experiments tried for the world, and experiments of significance for the world's future.

Fortunately for our Nation, we have so far done wonderfully well, all things considered, with the task set for us. We certainly have not accomplished that task completely, far from it. Even our great momentum will not carry us through it without effort. But we have every reason for confidence. As Mr. Bryce points out, there has been a marked advance in the intelligence as well as in the honesty of the most troublesome of all our administrative agencies, those of our cities. We are becoming more scientific in the best sense, as well as more respectable. Our rate of progress may vary, but our general direction seems to this keen and kindly critic plain and sound. It is an encouraging judgment to receive from such a source. There is no danger, we think, that it will make us too self-complacent, and just now it may help to make us more plucky and sensible.

THE PASSPORT QUESTION.

There is reason to accept as well founded and worthy of credence the report that M. Bakhmetieff, the newly appointed Russian Ambassador, will bring to Washington instructions to open negotiations for a settlement of the passport question. The Washington dispatches give the impression that the subject of the negotiations will be "a revision of the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation of 1832." It is not a revision of the treaty that has been sought, but an abandonment of the construction hitherto put upon it by Russia. The language of the treaty makes no discrimination whatever between American citizens, yet, as Senator O'Gorman pointed out yesterday, Russia for more than thirty years has made such a discrimination by refusing to recognize passports issued by our Government to Americans of Jewish faith. To put an end to this discrimination has been the object sought in this country, and there is now a very hopeful prospect that that end will be attained.

The resentment which Russia's construction of the treaty has aroused in the United States has risen to such a volume that the denunciation by us of the treaty would have been the probable result of Russia's persistence in refusing to honor our passports without discrimination. Our position in the matter has from the legal and international point of view been strictly correct and right, since it involved, practically, our connivance in its own policy of intolerance, and our assent to distinction which it is of the essence of our institutions not to make or permit to be made. It is a cause for great satisfaction that she has finally reached the conclusion that the discrimination she has hitherto practiced must cease.

THE ILLS OF THE DOCTORS.

Let Dr. Ewing be comforted. His address before the physicians and surgeons at the Academy of Medicine on Thursday night detailed the grave defects in the standards of medical education and in public thinking and sentiment as touching the medical profession; it adverted to the crude and halting attitude toward the doctors taken by distinguished men of other professions; it pointed at delinquencies in the adoption of measures which science has demonstrated as necessary for the protection of public health, and to the ignorance and distrust manifested by the people toward doctors, and their resort to the cults of healing, which he likened to the old religions of medicinal relics and amulets. The press, Dr. Ewing complained, discusses only the sensational, the personal, the wonderful, and the absurd on medical subjects, conveying no real information to the public.

Dr. Ewing has at least diagnosed his case. That, if it is done properly, is a great and important step toward a cure. The medical profession has lately become more conscious of its relation to the public than ever before. It has divested itself of its robes of mystery, which it inherited from past ages, and has stepped forth into view. Dr. Ewing's address to the physicians was one that they could understand, that the public could understand, and it was prominently printed. Many of our best physicians have condescended to speak, and in the common tongue, of the brilliant modern conquests of preventive medicine and of the rapid advances in the general knowledge of biology, physiology, and pathology. The public is listening, and the forces of the Government and of private benefaction and endowment are rallying to the support of the doctors.

The medical profession is not alone in its troubles. The fraternity of lawyers has suffered from ingrowing ills, and has become entangled in its own technicalities. For twenty years it has struggled with the definitions of the Sherman law; it has but just learned that that law means what it says, that it is to be understood according to its simple language. Clergymen might tell Dr. Ewing that theology and the Church have their own peculiar difficulties in becoming revealed to themselves and to the public. But in all the professions the more accurate diagnosing of the public ills to which they are severally subject points a most hopeful way toward recovery.

PRESIDENT MADERO'S TROUBLES.

The condition of public affairs in Mexico since the inauguration of President Madero has not been particularly encouraging to his most earnest supporters. But there is no obvious reason why any one of them should withdraw his support or blame him too severely for the continuance of the disturbances. There are no clear signs anywhere of an organized revolution. But there have been armed uprisings in Oaxaca and other southern States, while in the neighborhood of the Federal District, Zapata and his band are still under arms. The newly formed Government has already adopted a policy of secrecy, which has been one of the worst defects of former Mexican Governments, and the Minister of War has proclaimed his intention to give no information to the press.

Meanwhile others than the discontented who have taken up arms are anxious about the rewards President Madero may have in view for his supporters in the revolution. There are many demands for provisional State Governorships in States where no Governor has lately been elected, and for diplomatic positions. If Madero is to provide Governors for States, practically by appointment, in the old Diaz manner, and to award important positions to persons whose only claim to them is their support of his cause in the field, there is small likelihood that his administration will be permanently successful. But amid all the excitement the new President pursues his course quietly and keeps his counsel. Investors and the foreigners engaged in mercantile and industrial pursuits in Mexico have not lost faith in him. The Americans resident in the capital will give a large banquet in his honor next Saturday.

That the new Government should have a stormy beginning was inevitable. That its enemies should strive to exaggerate the dangers that surround it, and condemn it for practices of which it has not yet been proved guilty, was also to be expected. Madero has not lost the confidence of the soberminded and patriotic inhabitants of the sister republic, but he has not yet restored order.

PUNISHMENT OF SMUGGLERS.

There is a hint of sophistry in the explanation by United States District Judge Martin to a reporter of The Times of the seeming disparity of the punishments of the rich and the poor for smuggling. One cannot help feeling that influences have been at work in certain noteworthy cases which have led to the seemingly lenient treatment of some offenders. Both Judge Martin and Judge Holt when they contend that smuggling is a crime only because it is made so by statute seem to beg the question. It is a crime for which Mrs. Roberta Hill, Lichtenstein, the milliner, and a poor and ignorant Syrian musician can be sent to prison, while much more conspicuous offenders are merely fined. Judge Holt says:

> It is better to err on the side of leniency than on the side of severity. It is the intention of the law to be just, and if this intention can be achieved by a fine it is better to fine than to imprison.

It is perfectly true that the law, in many cases, recognizes a fine as an alternative to imprisonment. That, as we understand it, is not the point of issue in these cases. The United States District Attorney, Mr. Wise, has intimated that the dignity and authority of the law in smuggling cases have not been upheld by the rigid application of its penalties to all alike. He declares that the only effective way to stop smuggling and undervaluation is to send those convicted of such crimes to jail. For the crime of smuggling and the immoral influence of smugglers he has only the harshest words. Whether or not public opinion condemns smuggling so harshly, it is indisputable that the public mind has been unfavorably impressed by the fining of certain rich smugglers, while poor, or comparatively poor, ones have been sent to jail. There is also a strong feeling in this community that District Attorney Wise has worked with great courage, energy, and skill to bring smugglers to punishment, and that he deserves the most effective support he can receive from the Treasury Department, the courts, and the public. As for perjury, of which Sabasta, the Syrian, was adjudged guilty, nobody can smuggle merchandise into this port, or attest to undervaluations of imports, without committing perjury. That crime is inseparable from the crime of smuggling.

The large sum of money turned over to the Federal Government by members of a firm of importers convicted of undervaluation and smuggling, under the most reprehensible conditions, is believed to be no more than, if as much as, that firm's indebtedness to the Government. If the Treasury Department is responsible for the release of these men, and others, for money considerations, for reasons which have not been publicly explained, it is to be hoped that the department will not interfere with the course of justice hereafter for any reasons whatever. So vigorous and effective a public prosecutor as District Attorney Wise is not likely to be discouraged, of course, but when he secures the conviction of offenders they should be duly punished according to the terms of the law. Finally, if the public, or any large part of it, regards smuggling as an offense the commission of which does not decrease its respect for the offender, or affect his social position, there is no surer way to enlighten the common mind as to its error in this matter than by according to every convicted smuggler the full penalty of the law.

TO MAKE THE LAW POPULAR.

Representative Henry of Texas has found the combination which will unlock the complexities of the trust problem. The desideratum is a law with teeth which shall tear the unpopular trusts and yet not grind upon the popular trusts. The unpopular trusts, it is hardly necessary to say, are those which have their lair in Wall Street. The popular trusts are those of the farmers and laborers. Could anything be simpler than to exempt these benevolent bodies by name, and forbid all other trusts to draw a breath, whether or not they do good or harm? Representative Henry accordingly adds to his bill legislating the rule or reason out of the anti-trust law and providing a felon's cell for wealthy malefactors this admirable section:

> Nothing in this act is intended nor shall any provision thereof hereafter be enforced so as to apply to members of organizations not for profit and without capital, or to agricultural products or live stock in the hands of the producer or raiser.

The idea is so admirable that it shines through the trifling defects of the phraseology. But it is sad to remark that the Representative's enthusiasm is such that he permits himself to support his idea by a baseless assertion. He said in explaining his bill: "The exemption as to labor was intended in the original legislation." On the contrary, labor was included in the bill's first draft, and on March 25, 1890, Senator Sherman introduced an amendment exempting labor, which was adopted. But on April 2, 1890, the bill was reported without the labor amendment. In the Fifty-second, Fifty-fifth, Fifty-sixth, and Fifty-seventh Congresses bills exempting labor—thereby proving that labor thought itself included—were introduced, and failed. The attempt to exempt labor has persisted until this day, and has not yet succeeded. But what Congress has declined to do has been done by common consent. It is agreed that combinations of labor to benefit labor by common action are not obnoxious to the law when viewed in the light of reason. It is only when labor oppresses labor by unfair competition, to speak politely, that the law is applied to labor, and then more considerately than in the case of capitalistic combinations. Representative Henry therefore is right in not claiming novelty for his idea of how to make a law applicable only to unpopular trusts, but he is in error in claiming that the original legislation intended the exemption of labor.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

New Yorkers Afraid of Landlords.

We have received of late many letters, and printed several, from correspondents living in apartment houses who complain with bitterness about the way their mail is delivered—and about the not infrequent failure to deliver it at all. These communications, coming, as they do, from people troubled and unhappy, excite our deep and sincere sympathy, of course, but they are also distinctly amusing because they illustrate so well the remarkable success with which the New York landlords, as a class, have brought their tenants, as a class, into a subjection which, if not contented, knows no thought of revolt or protest.

For never a one of these letter-writers sees any possibility of relief for his woes except in a change in Post Office methods of delivery! Not to one of them has it occurred that pleadings, persuasions, or compulsions brought to bear on their landlords might result in the prompt and careful distribution of their mail after the carriers have handed it over to the employés whom the landlords authorize to receive it. Yet there is the simple, obvious, and inexpensive remedy for the very real and serious grievance from which these apartment-house dwellers suffer, while if the Post Office were to do what they ask—send the carriers to the door of every apartment—either the number of daily deliveries would have to be much decreased or that of the carriers as much increased.

Under the postal regulations, as they stand, carriers are not required to deliver letters above the second story of office buildings not equipped with elevators, or to the different rooms or suites on any floor in an apartment house, whether it has an elevator or not. Unless boxes are provided on the lower floor of an apartment house, arrangement must be made for some responsible person to take the mail for that building and to distribute it to the occupants. These regulations are entirely reasonable. The making of the arrangement for the responsible person necessarily falls on the landlord or his representative, and the failure of either to do it efficiently is not the fault of the Post Office.

However, since the poor, terrorized tenants do not dare approach their immediate overlords with complaint, and are still more afraid to announce and maintain tenant rights, perhaps it would be well if the Post Office itself made clearer than it does to these Great Ones that even they, when they assume a responsibility, both incur obligations and risk penalties.

It Was Not Really Very Funny.

Veterans of the Seventh Regiment who went to the Yorkville Court to see what happened to the regimental steward, charged with taking several kegs of beer into the armory in violation of the Penal Code, are said to have smiled when the case was dismissed because the complaining witness only saw the kegs carried in and could not swear to the nature of the liquid they contained.

The smiling was comprehensible enough, but the episode really had its serious side, for it was one of the all too numerous instances when the difference between legal procedure and that by which the ordinary affairs of ordinarily intelligent people are conducted are clearly shown. And nothing does more than just such showings to create and increase public disrespect for the law—to make people feel contempt for an institution that deliberately deprives itself of the means and methods used everywhere else for arriving at the truth and allotting justice.

It is not the intention here to charge, or even to intimate, that the sitting Magistrate, from the testimony before him, could have reached any other conclusion or taken any other action than he did. The sad part of the affair is that everybody in the court and out of it knew that the conclusion reached, while technically corect—the offense alleged had not been proved—was really absurd, and that the action taken was not the action which would have been taken if the matter had been investigated under the rules of common sense, not under the rules of evidence.

In a so-called Latin country that steward would have been himself subjected to a stern inquiry as to the contents of those kegs, and had he refused to tell the natural and inevitable inference would have been drawn from the refusal. Others who knew what the kegs contained could have been easily found—and would have been, in Italy or France—and would have suffered from self-incrimination in the same way, whether they told the truth or whether they maintained silence.

The case was a trivial one, of course, viewed abstractly, but its relational aspects are important—quite sufficiently important to have demanded gravity on the part of the veterans instead of smiles. As sworn upholders of social order, they should have been grieved to the heart by anything that brought the law into ridicule—that made the law a joke for the thoughtless.

Honesty Tested Severely.

It would not be easy for many, if for anybody, to recall the return to its owner by a person to whom even a few dollars mean a good deal of a larger amount of lost money than was recorded in The Times yesterday.

Philip Loew, a waiter in the restaurant of the Hotel Traymore, found under a table he serves a pocketbook containing $6,000 in bills, besides almost three times as much in certified checks and notes. The latter were presumably of no value to anybody except the owner, but the $6,000 was a fortune greater than the great majority of human beings, even in this happy country, can do more than hope to obtain by lifelong industry and economy, and to have taken and kept it would have been almost as safe as easy.

As the story is told, Loew did not feel the temptation. One can fairly have doubts as to that; at any rate, he did not yield to it, but promptly turned his find over to his employer, and the latter as promptly restored it to its owner.

The latter—Joseph Lazarus, a Franklin Street merchant—as a reward for what he called the unusual honesty of Loew, sent him a check for $500, in a letter full of expressions of appreciation and esteem. The reward, too, was somewhat unusual as to size.

CLUBS AS REFORMATORIES.

Homes and Schools Failing, More Social Centres Are Needed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Joseph Byers, Secretary of the New Jersey State Charities Aid Association, speaking before the Glen Ridge Woman's Club on Prison Reform and Reformatories, stated that since the home, the natural reformatory, has failed, and likewise the public school, a remedy or partial solution of the problem of overcrowding the reformatories will be found in the organized clubs and classes for boys and girls in every community where there is such need.

The League for Friendly Service of Bloomfield and Glen Ridge, organized to promote the welfare of the poor, by any and all means, is feeling greatly the need of a social centre where the boys and girls of the community may spend their evenings. Going tired from their work to unattractive homes they are practically forced upon the streets and into cheap theatres and dance halls for their needed recreation. The boys and girls crowding our public reformatories and institutions of a like nature have not had a fair chance at home. Clubs properly conducted become not only a protective agency for youth, but also a molder of character and an efficient educator.

Ben Lindsey's clarion call to the world to-day is "Save the children" and their children won't need saving. With this end in view the League for Friendly Service has organized its first club. Twenty girls ranging from 15 to 20 years are its charter members. This club will be known as the Aloha Club of the League for Friendly Service, with social intercourse, mutual helpfulness, and the study of music. Through its investigating committee the club hopes to be of service to the league by reporting cases of sickness and want. But so far as it can the club will help its own members and will also be self-supporting.

The league plans to organize a boys' club, a sewing class for younger girls, and other clubs as the need arises and as the workers to conduct the classes are found. The work has been begun by and is under the direction of Mrs. Joseph D. Arnold, who has recently come to Glen Ridge from Pittsburgh, where she had charge of the Settlement Committee of the Bach Settlement House. BLOOMFIELD.

SHORT WEIGHTS IN COAL.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As the coal season is coming on, I wish to give the benefit of my experience in short weights. I have for twenty years been buying from one dealer. The heaps looked short for two or three years past, so upon the last delivery of two tons I weighed them with certified scales and in the presence of three intelligent witnesses, and found the two tons to be 722 pounds short weight—361 pounds short each ton. I immediately communicated with the "Co.," orally and by letter, but received no explanation, with a simple denial of the shortage.

I had made a perfect case of detection and reported it to the Bureau of Weights and Measures, who were very polite, but did nothing except to find excuses for the dealer, to talk about his "respectability," and to advise me to try the Corporation Attorney. I answered that "respectability" had given the people a good many jolts. I went to the Corporation Attorney's office, and there received polite entertainment, but they said they did not think there was much chance for conviction, although one of the officials said he thought there had been a steal.

Both departments referred to the recent law about Weighing Inspectors. That is a bungling affair and not wholly efficient and wholly inconvenient and vexatious. There is no protection against crime but penalty, and when a case is made out it is the business of the authorities to give the delinquent a good European lambasting, as a deterrent to others. We know the difficulty, in fact practical impossibility, for small consumers to weigh their coal, and thus the trade has immunity.

The Circular Nuisance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to protest against the practice of newsdealers inserting in the Sunday issue and other issues of The New York Times circulars of locals butchers, laundrymen, liquor dealers, and even undertakers. The evil-smelling, badly-printed emanations of ninth-rate stores litter my rugs, dirty the fingers of those who touch them, and otherwise disturb the serenity of the breakfast table. I do not know anything about the legal rights of the distributors of these bills who avail themselves of a high-class newspaper like The Times for putting out their objectionable offers. That is a matter you should be able to settle with the newsdealer or the tradesmen who issue the circulars. Speaking for myself, I have told my newsdealer that if any more circulars are inclosed in my newspapers he will cease to supply them. A. P. G.

Black Handers' New Prey.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The murder by Italians up the State marks a new development. It means that the Italian desperadoes have extended their activities of murder and robbery to the citizens of this country instead of as heretofore confining them to their own fellow-countrymen. We may expect in the near future that any one who has money must pay tribute or receive a Black Hand bomb. KITTY MONTROSE.

John Street's Condition.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why is it that John Street, between Broadway and Dutch Street, is in such a dirty condition? For the past month or more the street has been dug up, and the dirt strewn about so as greatly to impede traffic, and since the strike of the "garbagiers" the debris from the popular-priced lunchrooms has decorated the street. HOW TO BE A WISE SANTA.

Sensible Gifts for Children to be Shown at Teachers' College.

How to be a sensible Santa Claus will be explained to parents in the Educational Museum at Teachers' College, when an exhibition of ideal Christmas gifts for children opens there next Friday. The exhibit, which is under the auspices of the Kindergarten-Primary Parents' Association of the Horace Mann School and the Department of Kindergarten Education of Teachers' College, will continue until Wednesday, Dec. 20, with the exception of Thanksgiving Day.

It will be open daily from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M., except Saturday afternoons, and on Wednesday evenings, Dec. 6 and 13.

The exhibit will comprise a limited and carefully chosen collection of books, pictures, and toys, together with a model playroom, which it is expected will set a higher standard for the selection of gifts for children. Children will not be admitted to the exhibition, the intention being primarily to interest parents.

THE DOCTORS' ILLS.

They Are Due to Taciturnity and Shyness of the Public.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Prof. James Ewing's well-phrased address before the New York Academy of Medicine on Nov. 11 is of more than passing interest, because he dares to discuss the changed and changing relations between the physician and the public. In its dignified taciturnity the medical profession has allowed itself to be pushed aside in the mad race for wealth and business success. The fault is not that the public has failed to keep pace with the profession, but that the profession has in all essentials failed to keep step with public needs. First of all, the medical schools have been grinding out huge grists of half-baked doctors far in excess of any possible demand. The effect is that the income of the average physician is about equal to that of a first-class grocer's clerk, and all sorts of schemes are being resorted to to lure patients to empty offices. If many patients have gone over to the quacks, the quacks must be filling some kind of public necessity or they would soon cease to be. Nothing that is utterly useless can grow and thrive. There are all sorts of trusts and combinations in business, which fortify and protect the merchant, but doctors instead of combining show schoolboy hatred and petty jealousy of each other and often seek to prejudice each other's interests in the eyes of patients.

This is the age of specialism, and yet full many a patient does not know where a specialist for his complaint may be found. There is a certain paragraph in the New York State code of ethics, so-called, making it a misdemeanor for any physician to announce his specialty on card or sign under penalty of losing his standing. Such relics of ancestral Puritanism do not belong to this day or generation.

In Europe no first-class doctor is ashamed to make known the kind of work in which he is interested, and every sign exhibits the physician's specialty and office hours.

There is sense in all things, and it should be possible for the present high standard to be maintained in the regular profession while giving to the public the kind of treatment it demands, whether through massage or faith healing, or the use of high potential currents. Results alone count and the public cares less for method and manner than for the end product itself. DOCTOR.

FRENCH PROFESSORS WITH US.

They Are Specialists, Not Merely Lecturers on General Subjects.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It seems to me that the attention of the public ought to be called to the great work of university co-operation between France and the United States, which is taking place at the present time. No less than three French university professors are this year at work in American universities, and these professors are here, not to give the general public an opportunity to hear French spoken in lectures of a general nature, but to give instruction in widely separated subjects of university work.

In Columbia University, Prof. Lanson of the University of Paris is giving two regular courses on French literature; and Prof. Hadamard, formerly Adjunct Professor of Mathematics in the same university, and now Professor of Mathematics in the College de France, has been giving instruction in such subjects of higher mathematics as the calculus of variations. In addition, Harvard University is to have this year the benefit of the teaching of Prof. Charles Diehl of the University of Paris, a recognized authority on the Byzantine period of history, literature, and art.

The present year is not to be an exceptional one in this respect; the movement has only begun and is to be continued. By virtue of arrangements made with the University of Paris, Columbia University is to have a representative French university man every year, and Harvard every other year, and it is expected that other universities will soon follow the example set them by Harvard and Columbia. The Delancey Street Subway.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Can you inform your many readers when the Suwbay, now under construction from the Williamsburg Bridge via Delancey and Centre Streets to Duane Street, will be completed and in operation? DAILY READER.

New York, Nov. 17, 1911.

No exact reply is possible. The Municipal Building is approaching completion and the elevated railway tracks on the bridge are now being depressed to use this route. Under private management a few months would be enough to start this route running. Under public management the months may run into a year or two.—[Editor The Times.

Philadelphians' "Store Clothes."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you kindly let a dyed-in-the-wool New Yorker know why most Philadelphia people insist on wearing "stores clothes," such as one might expect to see displayed in country stores? This has always been a source of wonderment to me. J. B. McNIFF.

THE HOLE IN THE WALL.

This life is like a jail
With a wall that's hard to scale,
And it seems to me the luck has got
The fetters on us all;
But drag along your chains;
Grin and bear your pains,
For whisper, brother, somewhere
There's a hole in the wall!

They say that once you're through
That hole, the skies are blue,
And money falls instead of rain,
And no one works at all;
So drag along your chains;
Grin and bear your pains,
And don't forget it, brother—
There's a hole in the wall!

I never saw it. Still,
Some others had the will,
And found it and got out and left
Us here, poor devils all!
So never mind the chains;
Never mind the pains.
Bide your time and find it—
That hole in the wall!

Stop talking, mate. Turn to!
The Warder's eye's on you.
But keep your eyes and ears alert;
An Outside Man may call.
Then just forget your chains;
Forget your little pains,
And run, you sluggard convict,
For that hole in the wall!

COURT SANCTIONS LOAN SHARK TRICK

Appellate Division in Brooklyn Approves Device of Evading Law Here by Going to Maine.

CONDEMNED ON APPEAL HERE

But the Second Department Decision, Being Unanimous, Will Have More Weight in Future Cases.

The Appellate Division of the Second Department handed down yesterday a decision in a salary loan case which is directly at variance with that handed down in the First Department. In the case of Myrtle M. Thompson against Gimbel Brothers to garnishee the salary of a Gimbell employe, the Appellate Division in the First Department, by a divided vote, held that the three days' notice to the employer required in the law passed by the 1910 Legislature must be given at the time the assignment of salary is made, or when a power of attorney giving another the right to assign salary is made.

The First Department Justices held that the granting of a power of attorney effective in Maine and for a future assignment of salary was an ineffective subterfuge. The Second Department decision, being unanimous, has more weight than the original decision, and holds that the device condemned in the Gimbel case is successful against the salary loan notice law. The decision in the Gimbel case was hailed as a great blow to salary loan brokers, whose greatest weapon in enforcing claims has been the fear of the employe that his employer would learn that he was involved.

Myrtle M. Thompson of the Gimbel case figures in the Brooklyn case with them. The prevailing opinion of the Brooklyn Justices, written by Justice Woodward, says in part:

"In the month of February, 1910, John E. Doherty, an employe of the Erie Railroad, applied to the Chester Kirk Company of New York City for a loan of $37. Doherty was given a blank to be signed by him which appears to have been a power of attorney by which he constituted Stella Blanding his attorney to make notes, assignments of wages, and any instrument or instruments to repay the loan, the power of attorney to be executed in the State of Maine.

"On the 28th of February, 1910, Stella Blanding, acting under this power in the State of Maine, made a promissory note for $45, due on April 4. This note she sold to the N. W. Hasten Company of Portland, Me., and Doherty was given $36.85 as the proceeds. The note was not paid, and Stella Blanding made an assignment of Doherty's wages from the Erie Railroad Company in the sum of $90. This assignment was dated April 21, and on April 22 a copy of the assignment was sent to the railroad company, with a statement that if $60.50 were paid before the claim was placed in the hands of an attorney it would be withdrawn."

The decision then tells of suit being brought and judgment recovered against the railroad company and of its appeal. It continues:

"There can hardly be a doubt that at common law Doherty would have a complete right to give a power of attorney to a resident of the State of Maine to do any lawful act within that State. An action against Doherty on the ground of usury would not be open to the defense of usury either in this State or in Maine, for it was not usurious in Maine, where the contract was made, and the assignment of Doherty's wages, earned or to be earned, was made for the purpose therefore of securing a valid legal obligation owing by Doherty. It is admitted that the railroad company has paid to Doherty considerably more than the amount claimed since receiving notice of the assignment.

"A contract valid when and where it is made is valid everywhere. It is true that the learned Appellate Division in the First Department has held a contrary construction. It is not the province of the law to make it impossible for people to make foolish or improvident bargains. It may limit the extent to which it will permit its own citizens to be imposed upon in the matter of interest, but if its citizens will, either by themselves or through their agents, go outside of the State and make bargains, it is not the duty of the courts to give forced construction to language for the purpose of relieving them or those who stand in their places from liability.

"Doherty's contract, made in the State of Maine, to be performed there, was a Maine contract, and if it was lawful there it was lawful in this State, and we ought not to put any impediments in the way of its enforcement which are not required by the orderly administration of the law, simply because the original contract if made in this State would have been void because usurious.

"There was a valid assignment of Doherty's wages made within the State of Maine, the railroad company had notice of that assignment, which was the only step in the entire transaction which it had any right to enforce, as much as though the original contract had related to the purchase of potatoes."

In one portion of its decision the court remarks:

"Certainly the Erie Railroad Company is not the guardian of its employes, and it became interested and entitled to notice only when its obligations were involved."

INSURANCE SUITS DECIDED.

Those Who Got Equitable Policies on Credit Must Pay for Them.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court handed down yesterday a decision reversing the Appellate Term and sustaining Judge Finelite of the City Court in a test case affecting about 3,000 insurance suits now awaiting trial in the Municipal, City, and Supreme Courts. The decision upheld a City Court judgment in favor of the Equitable Trust Company against Charles A. Newman, which had been set aside in the Appellate Term.

The Equitable Trust Company sued as the assignee of Archibald C. Haynes on the following letter, contending that it was a promissory note:

> New York, Dec. 19, 1903.
>
> Mr. Archibald C. Haynes,
> General Agent,
> The Equitable Life Assurance Society,
> 25 Broad Street, New York.
>
> Dear Sir: I hereby acknowledge having received from Mr. George Schlesinger Policy No. 1,288,163, for $20,000 on my life, in the Equitable Life Assurance Society. You are authorized to place the said policy in force from this date, and I promise to pay you or your order the first annual premium, amounting to $634.60, as follows:
>
> Cash paid to George Schlesinger..$234.60
> April 15, 1904..........200
> Sept. 15, 1904..........200
>
> Very truly yours,
> CHARLES A. NEWMAN.

Haynes was a general agent of the life assurance society, and he had extended credit to a large number of persons who were unable to pay for their insurance or who took out policies on extensions of credit. It was urged by some of the defendants in suits brought on the letters that Haynes had promised them a rebate on the list premium, and that therefore his agreement was invalid. All these questions were considered in the suit before Judge Finelite, who held the paper a negotiable instrument as a promissory note, upheld its assignment to the Equitable Trust Company and ruled out the plea that the rebate made the transaction void.

Justice Lehman, who wrote the opinion of the Appellate Term, held that the paper sued on was a letter and not a promissory note, and ruled that its assignment was invalid. The decision also held that the rebate plea was a full defense. McLear & McLear were attorneys for the trust company.

JOHN F. CARROLL DIES AFTER YEAR'S ILLNESS

MADE FORTUNE IN STOCKS

John Francis Carroll, once deputy leader of Tammany Hall, and close friend of Richard Croker and other well-known politicians, died at 7:30 o'clock last night at the Hotel Savoy after an illness of about a year. He had been under treatment for acute liver and intestinal troubles.

Mr. Carroll was taken ill last year while staying at the Hotel Nassau at Long Beach. Four days ago while in his apartments at the Hotel Savoy he suffered a relapse and complications followed. Thursday night Dr. Charles A. Huber, his regular physician, found Mr. Carroll in a state of collapse and called in the services of Drs. La Faber and Caille, stomach specialists.

The younger sons, Edward L. and Cyril, are students at Georgetown College and they hurried to New York yesterday in response to telegrams advising them of the serious condition of their father. The funeral will take place next Monday at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

John F. Carroll was for many years one of the leaders of Tammany Hall, and an important factor in the political life of the city. His political activity covered a period when the Tammany organization grew in power and importance, and rehabilitated itself following the downfall of "Boss" Tweed. For many years he was Richard Croker's right-hand man, and more than any one else he was responsible for the nomination of Robert A. Van Wyck for Mayor. Politicians last night commented upon the fact that Mr. Carroll died on the very day that Mr. Croker reached New York on his annual visit to this country.

Mr. Carroll had given up active participation in city politics for several years, but he always took a keen interest in the affairs of the Fourteenth Street organization. His advice, too, was considered worth while, and the present-day leaders did not disdain to ask his opinion regarding important political moves. A born fighter and a man after Croker's own heart, Carroll rose from the ranks and learned the political game from the ground up. He was born in New York City in 1854, and was educated in the public schools, and later graduated from Manhattan College. Upon leaving college he became cashier of the firm of Campbell & Galway, grocers. He joined the Tammany organization in the old Sixteenth Assembly District, and announced that he wanted to find out what there was in politics.

He soon attracted the attention of Joseph J. O'Donohue, then a Park Commissioner and afterward City Chamberlain. Mr. O'Donohue found for the young man a place in the Park Department, and he left mercantile life.

Tammany went almost to pieces following the downfall of Tweed, and opportunity came for several young men, who saw a future for themselves by sticking to the machine, although it was in popular disfavor. Carroll was one of these. By making himself valuable to the leaders during the reorganization process he paved the way for success when the Tweed blight was outlived. Recorder Smythe, in 1879, took a fancy to Carroll and appointed him as attendant in the Court of General Sessions, and he was assigned to act as Clerk to the Grand Jury. Here he became familiar with the administration of criminal justice.

Among Carroll's political friends was the late Ambrose Monell, who, when he was elected civil Judge, appointed Carroll as Clerk of the Seventh District Court in 1881. He retained that place until 1886, when he resigned to become Clerk of the Court of Special Sessions at $6,000 a year. Upon the death of John Sparks, in 1892, Carroll succeeded him as Clerk of the Court of General Sessions, and Oyer and Terminer. It was a position of power and comparative affluence, for as Clerk of General Sessions he received $7,000 a year, with an additional $2,500 as Clerk of Oyer and Terminer, besides the fees.

In 1889 Sheriff James A. Flack was forced to resign the leadership of the Twentieth District which had taken the place of the old Sixteenth. Croker was then leader of Tammany, and Carroll had come under his observation. Croker chose him to succeed Flack and he justified the choice by immediately building up the district organization. The district had become doubtful, owing to divisions in the Democratic ranks. Carroll made himself popular with the younger men, broke the power of the County Democracy and cemented the forces of Tammany.

The Twentieth District was afterward cut in two to form the Twenty-second and Twenty-fourth. Carroll named the leaders of both and controlled them long after he had actively retired from politics. He gave up the leadership of his own district out of deference to the wishes of the Judges of General Sessions, but his grip upon the Tammany organization only tightened. Croker relied upon him constantly for advice.

Carroll found his real opportunity when he was selected to succeed John C. Sheehan as Chairman of the Tammany Finance Committee, which means the leadership of Tammany in all but name. Mr. Sheehan was made Chairman of the Finance Committee in 1895, after his retirement from the Board of Police Commissioners following the Lexow investigation and the election of Mayor Strong. His advancement over the heads of men who had been active in Tammany all their lives created dissatisfaction, and Croker had a hard time to quell the disturbances. Carroll had many powerful friends within the organization, and these pleaded with Croker to put him in Sheehan's place. It was not until a candidate had to be selected for Mayor, two years after Mr. Strong went into power, that it was noticed that Croker showed a decided preference for Mr. Carroll's advice. When Croker began to consider the relative merits of candidates for Mayor, Carroll presented the name of Robert A. Van Wyck. He had been Judge Van Wyck's friend for years, and the latter intrusted his intrests wholly to Carroll. He was a member of the Tammany committee of the old Twentieth Assembly District when Carroll was its leader, and through Carroll's influence he had been nominated for the City Court.

Croker was convinced by the arguments which Carroll advanced and Van Wyck was nominated. Carroll consulted daily with Croker during the campaign, and his intimacy with the "boss" increased. When in 1898 Mr. Carroll was made Chairman of the Finance Committee and Sachem of Tammany Hall he resigned as Clerk of General Sessions and his brother succeeded him. For the next half dozen years Mr. Carroll took an active part in all of the affairs connected with Tammany Hall. In January, 1902, he retired from politics for a time and accepted the Vice Presidency of the Fourteenth Street Bank, then one of Charles W. Morse's banking institutions.

Later in the same year he gravitated back to politics and fought for the leadership of the Twenty-ninth District. On March 10, 1903, he resigned as Sachem of Tammany Hall, and in September of the same year he resigned as member of the Democratic State Committee.

In 1904 Mr. Carroll took a trip to Europe, and when he returned he engaged in business in Wall Street and was seldom seen about the Fourteenth Street wigwam. It was reported about that time that he had made $2,000,000 in Wall Street within a few months. In the Fall of 1904 he again went to Europe to complain to Croker that Charles F. Murphy, who had become leader of Tammany Hall in the meantime, had criticised his political connections unjustly. Nothing was done in the matter, and Mr. Carroll announced that he would retire from politics for good. In 1906 he was active in dealing in ice stock, and two years later was a witness at the trial of Charles W. Morse.

In 1909 Mr. Carroll was made a Knight of the Order of St. Gregory the Great by the Pope. Besides being Vice President and Director in the Fourteenth Street Bank, he was Director of the Hudson Safe Deposits Company, a Director of the Wall Street Building Association, a Director of the Adirondack Trust Company of Saratoga Springs, and the Quincy Gas Company of Quincy, Ill. He was a member of the New York Athletic, the Catholic, the Arkwright, the Democratic, the Home, and other clubs.

PLAN THACKERAY CENTENARY.

Entertainment in Aid of Virginia Mountaineers on Dec. 27 and 28.

A Thackeray centenary is planned to take place on Dec. 27 and 28 at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory in Thirty-fourth Street, for the benefit of the Virginia mountaineers of the Appalachian range. These poor, uneducated whites of Irish and Scotch descent, who date their ancestry back to the seventeenth century, are in great need of practical help.

The Armory is to be made over into a Temple Garden effect. Walter Damrosch's orchestra will play, and a well-known musical society will sing old-fashioned songs.

Well known artists are to pose tableaux from "Pendennis," "The Newcomes," "Vanity Fair," and others of Thackeray's novels.

There will be a Vanity Fair, at whose booths New Year's gifts may be purchased, and a Holly Tree Inn, where refreshments may recall the "Ballad of Bouillebaisse."

The President of the association is Mrs. Algernon Sydney Sullivan, a Virginian, and the director of the centenary is a British woman, President of the Imperial Order of Daughters of the Empire, Mrs. J. Elliot Langstaff, who when in England last Summer was entertained by Lady Ritchie, Thackeray's daughter.

It is intended to have on exhibition various articles that were connected in some way with Thackeray's visit to America.

Miss Crane to Wed H. W. Taylor.

Mrs. Robert H. Whittlesey of Orange, N. J., announces the engagement of her niece, Miss Rachel Mygatt Crane, to Harold Williams Taylor of 156 East Thirty-eighth Street. Mr. Taylor is a graduate of Columbia. No date has been set for the wedding.

PRICE—CROWLEY.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Price of 223 Garfield Place, Brooklyn, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Gray Price, to Will Bowers Crowley, a member of the Syracuse bar. The wedding will probably take place this Winter.

BROUN—GERRISH.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Cox Broun of 853 Carroll Street, Brooklyn, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Madeleine Broun, to Thornton Gerrish of Brooklyn. No date has been set for the wedding.

Mrs. Fletcher Cobb's Lecture.

Under the patronage of Mrs. Gordon Knox Bell, Mrs. Amos Pinchot, Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, Mrs. Thomas Hicks, Mrs. J. Elliot Langstaff, Mrs. Camden C. Dike, Mrs. John Van Nostrand, and Mrs. Philip Sawyer, a lecture on "Modern Educational Ideals in Music" will be given on next Friday afternoon by Mrs. Fletcher Cobb of Brookline, at 257 West Eighty-sixth Street.

MASQUE OF CITIES OPENS AT THE PLAZA

Baroness von Rottenthal Dances in Tableaux, "A Dream of Venice" —Dramatic Artists at "Tea."

The opening performance of "The Masque of Cities," a spectacular entertainment under the auspices and for the benefit of the City History Club of New York, was given yesterday at the Hotel Plaza, when the elaborate programme attracted a large gathering. The main entertainment, including tableaux dansants in the afternoon and the "living paintings" and tableaux in the evening, were presented on a raised stage in the large ballroom, and at 4:30 o'clock there was a "dramatic tea" on the main floor.

The large ballroom was elaborately decorated, and at the eleven booths arranged about the room, over which presided typical citizens and fine ladies of Rome, Amsterdam, Tokio, Pekin, Nuremberg, Stockholm, Seville, Teheran, Athens, and other cities, flowers, fancy articles, candies, and cakes were on sale. The costumed participants in the carnival included Greek garland dancers, Muezzins, Town Criers, Pierrots, Midinettes, street musicians, Arabs, Spanish castanet dancers, and Italian lace weavers.

Borough President George McAneny opened the programme in the afternoon, and in a few words told the members of the club of the importance of their organization.

"In a city like ours, with its complex population, it is not easy to keep alive the interest in our own history," said Mr. McAneny, "and it is important, therefore, that there should be a body such as yours. It is a noble work which the city itself gladly recognizes, and I wish you every success."

The tableaux dansants which next claimed attention were designed by Baroness Irmgard von Rottenthal and had been carefully rehearsed by Ottokar Bartik of the Metropolitan Opera Company. The introduction of dainty dances in the tableaux was the idea of the Baroness. She danced in the tableaux "A Dream of Venice" and won much applause. The Misses Phyllis de Kay, Anna Hill, and Margarethe Montgomery also took part in the tableaux, and the Barcarolle from "Contes d'Hoffman," to which Baroness von Rottenthal danced, was sung by Miss Sutro.

The other numbers on the programme were: Kate Greenaway dance, Miss Charlotte Chalmers and Miss Helen Holmes; Edinburgh dance, Miss Douglas Bosworth; dance in Delft, Miss Margarita Ver Planck, Miss Dorothy Fenn, Miss Carol Fenn, Miss Vivian Thompson, Miss Josephine Green, and Miss Katherine Moore; dance of Athenian girls, Miss Katrina Page-Brown, Miss Eva Ingersoll Brown, Miss Gladys Robbins, Miss Mary McKee, Miss Marjorie Smylie, Miss Marion Baar, Miss Charlotte Delafield, and Miss Edith Sutro; Primavera, Miss Vera Van Buren, Mrs. Page-Smith, Miss Florence Rising, Miss Helen Johns, Miss Kathrine Crane, and Miss Vera Fueslein; la Citta dei Fiori, Miss Bertha Philips, Miss Agatha Brown, and Hedwig Hendel, with the girls from the Venetian, Athenian, and Primavera groups; Viennese dances, Baroness von Rottenthal; Espaniola, Miss Helen Harbeck; New York poster dance, Miss Katharine Rising and Dallas Corbierre; Les Montmarirois, Baroness von Rottenthal, Dudley Carleton, Harold Jenkins, Reginald Franklin, Mr. Thompson, and Mme. St. Lys.

Mrs. William Curtis Demorest, who was in charge of the "dramatic tea," wore an old gold satin gown and a bracelet of emeralds and diamonds, at one time the property of Marie Antoinette. She was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Charles Knoblauch, Mrs. Stanwood Menken, Mrs. Carl Schurz, Mrs. Ernest Thompson Seton, and Victor Harris. Several well-known artists of the dramatic and musical world, including Miss Grace Elliston, Miss Isabel Irving, Miss Molly Pierson, Miss Billie Burke, Miss Olive Wyndam, and Hedwig Reicher, poured, assisted by Franklin Jasper Walls, Edward Knoblauch, and Max Liebling.

Among the young women who assisted in the tea room were Miss Ethel Carhart, Miss Rosalie Smith, Miss Louise Vanderbilt, Miss Hilda Holmes, Miss Harriet McAlpin, Miss Gladys McAlpin, Miss Katherine Shaw, Miss Helen Cauldwell, Miss Marion raham, Miss Marion Smyth, Miss Madeleine Weir, Miss Elise Ladew, Miss Cordier, Miss Elise Wilson, Miss Hillary Thomas, Miss Laurada Chapman, Miss Du Bois, Miss Nellie MacDonald, Miss Helen Reid, and Miss Eileen Van Zile.

In the evening the tableaux dances were repeated and the "living paintings" completed the programme. The paintings represented and those who posed were: "Genevra dei Benci," Mrs. Kelley-Cole; "Portrait of a Woman," Miss Elizabeth Kunz; "Marie Luise von Tassig," Mrs. Stanwood Menken; "The Listener," Miss Phyllis de Kay; "Countess Potocka," Miss Vera Van Buren; "Mrs. Siddons," Mrs. A. Barton Hepburn; "Marie Antoinette," Miss Dorothy Forster; "Proserpina," Miss Marion Baar; figure from "The Listening Fauns," Mrs. Hugo Reisinger; "Lauretta," Miss Olive Holmes Nicholls; "La Donna Velata," Mrs. Edgerton Parsons; "Mona Lisa," Miss Grace Bliss; "Flora," Mrs. Charles Knoblauch; "Mme. Henriette de Bourbon," Mrs. Frederic Remington; "Mrs. Fitz Herbert," Miss France Gregory; "Lady Hamilton as a Bacchante," Miss Elizabeth Daly; "Delia in the Country," Miss Gertrude Hill; "Autumn," Miss Martha White; "Hope," Baroness von Rottenthal. The final picture, "New York Enthroned," was posed by Miss Weston from a masque poster designed and contributed by Charles R. Lamb.

One of the booths which attracted much attention yesterday was the Japanese tea garden, which was designed by Madame Midzuno, wife of the Japanese Consul General. She was unable to preside, as expected, however, and Mrs. R. Ito was in charge.

"The Masque of Cities" will be presented again this afternoon and evening, and an elaborate programme has been arranged for the musical tea which will be one of the features. Miss Martha Johnston, the violinist, will play, appearing in Swedish costume, and Madame Tony Koller, a soprano of the Royal Opera House, Coburg, will make her first appearance in this city. She will sing and accompany herself on the lute. Mrs. Durant Cherer has also consented to sing and Signor Caruso has promised to be present. Many well-known musicians and opera stars will assist in pouring tea.

Among those who had boxes at the performances yesterday were Mrs. Robert Abbe, Mrs. Adrian H. Joline, Mrs. enry O. Havemeyer, Mrs. Hugo Reisinger, Mrs. Frederic Van Buren, and Mrs. John F. Flagler.

After the regular programme is concluded to-night there will be dancing in the large ballroom.

The City History Club of New York, which has been a power in the development of local historical interest, was founded in the Spring of 1897, when a number of men and women under the leadership of Mrs. Robert Abbe obtained a charter. Mrs. Abbe is now Honorary President of the club, and the officers are Mrs. Emil L. Boas, President; Dr. George F. Kunz, First Vice President; Mrs. A. Barton Hepburn, Second Vice President; and Mrs. Malcolm Stuart, Treasurer.

WINTHROP AMES RETURNS.

Brings His Bride and Some New Plays for His Little Theatre.

Winthrop Ames, formerly Managing Director of The New Theatre, and Mrs. Ames were passengers on the Mauretania, arriving yesterday. Mr. Ames went abroad early in September, a single man, and while in London he married Mrs. Lucy Fuller Cabot of Boston.

Mr. Ames's trip to Europe was made in the hope of discovering some plays suitable for his little theatre that he is going to build in the Times Square district, and also to look into the construction and management of several small theatres in London, Paris, and Berlin.

He said on the steamer yesterday that he had nothing to add to the cabled reports published at the time of his departure from England. He had found some plays that he hoped would be suitable for his theatre, and some that might do for the new New Theatre, with which he will not be connected.

SOCIAL NOTES.

Mrs. Benjamin Guinness will give a dinner followed by a fancy dress party on Tuesday evening. Guests will come in from dinners by other hostesses, but the affair will be a small one.

'TRISTAN UND ISOLDE' AT METROPOLITAN

Mme. Fremstad's Marvelous Impersonation as Isolde in Wagner's Love Tragedy.

BURRIAN HOARSE, BUT SINGS

Mme. Matzenauer, the New Brangaene, and Mr. Weil, the New Kurwenal, Make Successful Appearances.

Tristan	Carl Burrian
Koenig Marke	Herbert Witherspoon
Isolde	Olive Fremstad
Kurwenal	Hermann Weil
Melot	William Hinshaw
Brangaene	Margarete Matzenauer
Ein Hirt	Albert Reiss
Der Steuermann	Julius Bayer
Stimme des Seemanns	Lambert Murphy
Conductor	Arturo Toscanini

"Tristan und Isolde" was given for the first time this season at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening. The performance made a profound impression upon the audience on account of its extraordinary eloquence and beauty, and the occasion was evidently felt by those who heard it to be a memorable one. Mme. Fremstad and Mr. Toscanini have both done marvelous things of recent years in Wagner's tragedy of love; but both surpassed themselves last evening. Never has she so eloquently, so poignantly bodied forth the sweep of emotions and passions that sway the Irish Princess in the first act, never has she been so transfigured by the ecstasy and rapture of her meeting with Tristan in the night, never risen to heights so lofty in her proclamation over his body at the close. Every note, every phrase, every gesture and movement was charged with dramatic significance, with results profoundly moving and deeply impressive.

Mr. Burrian, who has so admirably in recent years represented Tristan in the performances at the Metropolitan, was suffering from hoarseness that seriously marred his singing. It was little noticeable in the first act, but it gained upon him as the drama proceeded, and he sang with evident effort in the second act, where purity of voice and especially accuracy of intonation are most sorely needed. In the last act he made a brave attempt. A printed apology was circulated for him in the house.

There were newcomers in the cast. Mme. Matzenauer, who showed fine qualities on the opening night of the season in "Aïda," again showed them in the very different task that she had to fulfill as Brangaene. Here the fullness, richness, and power of her voice were thrillingly displayed; it blended in beautiful union with the flood of orchestral sound in her song in the watch tower in the second act. She gave an excellent impersonation; but there was something to be desired in the clearness of enunciation of the text.

Hermann Weil, the new baritone, was the Kurwenal; an actor of spirit and fine perceptions, a singer whose voice has an unusually sympathetic quality, but last evening was not all that might have been desired in point of steadiness. Lambert Murphy sang the music of the seaman in the first act in a very acceptable manner. There was also a new representative of King Marke in the person of Herbert Witherspoon, who did well with a character to which it is not easy to give dramatic interest, and another American, William Hinshaw, was the Melot.

Mr. Toscanini has not given a reading of the orchestral score more finely subtle or vehemently dramatic, or more marvelously filled with the spirit of beauty.

MISS MONICA DAILEY PLAYS.

Discloses a Graceful Touch and Good Tone in Her Pianoforte Recital.

Miss Monica Dailey added to the list of pianoforte recitals of the season last evening at Carnegie Lyceum, when she disclosed herself as possessing a pretty style, a graceful touch, and very good tone. Her programme was built to fit her talent and included numbers by Mendelssohn, Henselt, Rachmaninoff, Poldini, Leschetisky, Mozart, and Chopin.

The numbers were mostly salon pieces, and in playing them Miss Dailey committed only one serious error, when she occasionally displayed a tendency toward sentimentality.

The programme referred to her as a "pianiste." This word is the French for a pianoforte player of either sex. As Miss Dailey's name does not indicate that she is French, the designation seems inappropriate.

Tribute to Bishop MacKay-Smith.

The Rev. William Wilkinson, outdoor preacher for Trinity Parish, paid a tribute to the late Bishop Alexander MacKay-Smith of Pennsylvania yesterday at noon at Nassau and Broad Streets. Mr. Wilkinson, who is known as "the Bishop of Wall Street," told a gathering of brokers and clerks that the late Bishop had done a great work in New York when he was Archdeacon of the local Protestant Episcopal Diocese.

George Whiting Hebard.

George Whiting Hebard, Vice President of the Westinghouse Company, died yesterday in Bronxville. Mr. Hebard lived at 109 McDonough Street, Brooklyn, but he and his family had been in Bronxville for some time. Mr. Hebard was born in Barre Centre, Orleans County, N. Y., in 1845. He was educated at the Albion (N. Y.) Academy, and came to this city in 1869. He married Miss Mary F. Foster of Hempstead, L. I.

Mr. Hebard was Vice President and Trustee of the Sawyer-Man Electric Company and Director in the Bridgeport Gun Implement Company, Bryant Electric Company, Consolidated Electric Light Company, Lackawanna & Wyoming Valley Railroad Company, M. Hartley Company, Perkins Electric Switch Company, Union Metallic Cartridge Company, and Greene Consolidated Copper Company. He was a member of the Chamber of Commerce, and belonged to the Lawyers' Club of Manhattan and the Union League Club of Brooklyn. Mr. Hebard was for twenty years President of the Board of Trustees of the Tompkins Avenue Congregational Church. He leaves a widow and two sons.

DR. ALBERT A. AMES DEAD.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 17.—Dr. Albert Alonzo Ames, prominent as a Democratic politician in this State and a former Mayor of this city, died last night while asleep. Dr. Ames was born in Garden Prairie, Boone County, Ill., Jan. 18, 1842. His parents moved to this city when the doctor was 10 years old, and after his graduation in medicine he practiced with his father. He, with others, raised Company B, Ninth Minnesota Volunteers, and went to the South with his regiment at the outbreak of the civil war and served through the conflict. In 1866 he was elected to the Minnesota Legislature.

Dr. Ames was first elected Mayor of this city in 1876. In September of the same year he was Democratic candidate for Governor. A. R. McGill, his Republican opponent, was declared elected by a very small margin. Dr. Ames contested the election. When McGill took the oath of office Dr. Ames took the same oath in a municipal court. The doctor soon tired with the contest and retired.

Dr. Ames, during one of his terms as Mayor, was indicted in connection with the famous Minneapolis "grafting" cases, but was freed. For some time he was in the Legislature.

Dr. Eugene Wasdin.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 17.—Dr. Eugene Wasdin, a widely known surgeon in the United States Marine Hospital Service, who operated on President McKinley when he was shot in Buffalo, died to-day in a sanitarium at Gladwynne, a suburb. He was 53 years old. At the time President McKinley was shot, Dr. Wasdin was stationed in the Marine Hospital Service at Buffalo.

FIGHT OF MINOR LEAGUES.

New Classification for Three Organizations May Be Defeated.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Nov. 17.—The National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues to-day chose Milwaukee as the convention city for 1912. The convention adopted the following clause for insertion in the new player's contract:

"Any player of any club in organized baseball shall be prohibited from using the uniform of any club without the consent of the club and at the expiration of each season he shall turn in his uniform before he receives his final pay."

The conflict of territorial jurisdiction was referred to the National Board of Arbitration to negotiate with the National Commission.

A resolution was adopted asking for Federal prohibition of lotteries, pool selling and other gambling devices that are operated on baseball games, and the attention of Attorneys General of the States will be called to the matter.

The proposition of Cal. Ewing of San Francisco to place the Pacific Coast League, the Eastern League, and the American Association in a special AA classification was rescued from defeat by skillful parliamentary manoeuvring. It was made a special order for to-morrow morning's session. The three leagues in question have been fighting for this classification for seven years. The amendment to the constitution reported by the sub-committee placed the three leagues in a classification by themselves, giving them the right to draft from all leagues below them. The Western and Southern Leagues, from which at present only the majors can draft, mustered enough votes to prevent the three-fourths vote necessary for adoption.

'KNOCKOUT' BROWN SEVERELY BEATEN

"One Round" Hogan Gives the New York Boy the Worst Whipping of His Career.

"One Round" Hogan, the California lightweight, gave "Knockout" Brown of New York City the worst beating of his career in their ten-round bout at the Madison Athletic Club at Sulzer's Harlem River Casino last night, closing Brown's right eye in one of the early rounds. Hogan continued to bombard Brown's face with right-hand punches, and the east sider was a pitiable sight when he left the ring. Besides completely closing the eye, Hogan raised a lump on Brown's face that extended from the temple almost to the jaw bone. It was exactly what happened to Carl Morris at Madison Square Garden last Summer, when Jim Flynn chopped him to pieces.

When Brown left the ring at the close of the bout both sides of his face were badly bruised. Hogan bore no more marks than if he had climbed out of bed after a peaceful sleep. He had to take some terrific wallops from the little east sider, but he took them all without apparent punishment. Considering the handicap in sight and the injury which must have pained at each successive blow, Brown fought a most creditable fight. But it was a losing fight all the way from the third round to the finish.

Hogan fought superbly all the way. His plan of action was to keep on the defensive all the time anl let Brown do the rushing. Brown's method was just as Hogan planned, and it decided the fight.

Cool and deliberate in the open fighting, Hogan met rush after rush of the east sider with powerful right punches. His judgment of distance was superb, and few of these wallops were wasted. In the infighting Brown did his best work. At long range he was practically helpless against the Californian, so he began to pound Hogan's stomach in his rushes and in the clinches blow after blow went true to the mark, but caused no apparent damage. Hogan also showed himself strong at infighting and ripped his right repeatedly to Brown's stomach or head in the clinches. Many of these blows shook up Brown, but he, too, was strong enough to take them all.

Hogan entered the ring at 10:15, and Brown followed a minute later. Both had been preceded by mascots, who put in a bid for the same corner. Tobey, the little mascot of Brown, had lost out in the fight for the chair, but after Brown had taken the opposite corner a coin was tossed. Brown's mascot called the turn and won, whereupon the pair changed corners. Brown was looked after by Dan Morgan, his manager; Sam Wollock, Kid Williams, and Adam Brown. Hogan's seconds were Jimmy De Forest, Jimmy Plunkett, and George Beattie. It was announced that Hogan had failed to tip the beam at 135 pounds. When they weighed in during the afternoon Brown tipped the scales at 132½ pounds, while partly dressed.

Willie Beecher and Pal Moore were introduced as challengers for bouts with the winner.

Practically all the fighting in the second round was done in the clinches. Brown kept tearing in and forcing the fighting, but did no effective landing on his rushes. In the clinches he employed his left repeatedly in short uppercuts to Hogan's chin, and the Californian was working the same game with his right. Brown was more effective and gained the honors for the round.

Hogan's right was very active in the third round and gained the round for the Californian. Hogan started strong, and twice rushed the east side boy to the ropes, forcing him to clinch in order to shut off body punches. Hogan drove Brown to the ropes, sent his head back with stiff punches, and forced the east sider to back away.

In the fourth round one of Hogan's terrific punches raised such a lump on Brown's right eye that it was almost completely closed. No such lump has been raised on any fighter here in a year, excepting on Carl Morris. The injury undoubtedly affected Brown's work, as he went around the ring uncertain in his actions. Brown was still strong, however, and tried to force matters, but he was plainly handicapped. It was Hogan's round.

In spite of the injured eye, which was then entirely closed, Brown showed up to better advantage in the fifth round. He tore after Hogan and landed several hard lefts to the Californian's stomach. Hogan also got in some damaging right swings. Hogan, still unmarked, was fighting a cool, deliberate battle and meeting Brown's rushes well. The round, which was marked by terrific action all the way, was about even.

In the sixth round Hogan met rush after rush by Brown with his right, and the punches made a noise that could be heard far from the ring. Brown was game, but Hogan's coolness showed him to advantage. He was plainly intent on closing Brown's left eye, and punch after punch was directed at that member. Hogan made no effort to force the fighting, being content to let Brown rush in and take his medicine. At one time Hogan complained that Brown was butting his head. It was Hogan's round.

In the seventh Hogan fought the same deliberate style. He remained back, allowing Brown to rush in, and he met the rushes with his right. Brown was still strong and tried for Hogan's stomach in the clinches. He landed some stinging punches on the Californian, but they did not even stop or stagger the boy from the Coast. Again Hogan complained of butting. It was Hogan's round.

The eighth session was a repetition of the preceeding rounds. Brown rushed and rushed, but he paid the penalty. Brown's great strength was always in evidence, as was his willingness to get in and mix, but against the strife of battle that Hogan was following strength and willingness gave way to science. The round belonged to Hogan.

In the ninth round Brown went out for his final chance to get over a knockout. He tried hard from bell to bell, forcing the fighting all the way, but he had no better fortune than in the earlier rounds. He drove several stinging punches to Hogan's stomach and head, but he was still paying for his pains in rushing. Hogan was meeting him with short rights. Brown did better than in the eighth, but not enough to get an even break.

The tenth round was the most furious one of the fight, both being intent on making a hurricane finish. Shortly after the round began Hogan drove Brown partly through the ropes, and a half minute later K. O. sent the Californian to the ropes with a shower of rights and lefts. Brown was putting up a remarkable fight, considering his condition, and handed out as much punishment as he received in this round.

Forbes Outpoints Young Ketchell.

Harry Forbes, a former bantamweight champion and as clever a boxer as the ring has produced in many years, had a hard time in winning by a slight margin in his bout last night at the Mount Vernon Athletic Club with Young Ketchell. The bout was one of the fastest and best contested at the new club, and there was not a minute that lacked excitement.

WINNERS WITH THE CUE.

In last night's game of the amateur handicap three-cushion-carrom billiard tournament at the Washington Heights Billiard Academy, 181st Street and St. Nicholas Avenue, Mr. Ware defeated Mr. Clark by the score of 20 to 11. Both contestants were playing at the scratch mark of 20 points, and the game required thirty-nine innings. Ware made a high run of 4 and Clark's best efforts netted him 3.

Knowles Benefit Nets $2,875.50.

The benefit performance which was tendered Fred M. Knowles, former Secretary of the Giants, last Sunday night netted Mr. Knowles $2,875.50, according to the official report of the Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, Joe Humphreys. The performance at Wallack's Theatre netted $950 and the donations, including $500 from Manager John J. McGraw, amounted to $1,025. The auction sale of autograph baseballs and Frank Baker's home-run bat amounted to $310 and the programme sale $140. The expenses of the benefit amounted to $450. The balance was $2,875.50. The Giants will donate $250 to the fund, and Wall Street friends of Mr. Knowles are raising a contribution of $250, both of which will soon be forwarded to Mr. Knowles at Denver.

NEW SWIMMING RECORD.

C. Tifft Wins Y. M. C. A. 22-Yard Race at West Side in 0:09 4-5.

C. Tifft of the West Side Young Men's Christian Association, holder of the branch record of 0:10½ for the twenty-two-yard swim, which he established two years ago, bettered the old mark last night in the third bi-monthly swimming contests by covering the course in 0:09 4-5.

Several attempts have been made during the past two years in the various swimming competitions to better the old marks, but it was not until last night, after a spirited swim, that it fell to his lot to establish a new figure. H. Knecht, who finished second, was largely responsible for the new figure, as he forced Tifft to extend himself from the start, and in the record-breaking event was only defeated for the honors by a slight margin.

The finishes in the other five events on the programme were all close and resulted in good sport. In the fancy diving competition the record holder and J. Hexamer tied for the honors with a score of 83 points each. On the dive-off, Hexamer had to give way to his opponent and take second honors. The summary:

65-Yard Backstroke Swim, Handicap.—Won by O. Link, (0:05;) C. Tifft, (scratch,) second; W. Weber, (0:04,) third. Time—0:41 2-5.

55-Yard Swim, Novice.—Won by G. Ennis; H. Knecht, second; J. Hanscom, third. Time—0:34 4-5.

22-Yard Swim, Scratch.—Won by C. Tifft; H. Knecht, second; S. Lothian, third. Time—0:09 4-5.

110-Yard Swim, Handicap.—Won by C. Rasch, (0:25;) G. Ennis, (0:15,) second; S. Lothian, (0:05,) third. Time—1:25.

176-Yard Swim, Relay, Scratch.—Won by team composed of Hanscom, Rasch, Lothian, and Link, team composed of Hexamer, Ennis, Knecht, and Weber, second. Time—1:51 1-5.

Fancy Diving Contest.—C. Tifft and J. Hexamer tied for first place, 83 points each; Tifft won dive-off; M. Straus, third, 70 points.

BOXERS AND WRESTLERS.

The card arranged for the Sharkey A. C. to-night is a strong one. In the star bout Bert Keyes, the local lightweight, will box Johnny Moran. They will battle ten rounds. This will be Keyes's last fight before he tackles K. O. Brown at New Haven. Johnny Mooney, a local boy, will face Young Watkins of Jersey in the semi-final for six rounds. There will be four other bouts and a battle royal.

Josef Smejkal, the champion wrestler of Bohemia, who has been matched to meet Zbyszko, the Pole, will appear on the mat to-night at the Clermont Avenue Rink, Vanderbilt and Clermont Avenues, near Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn. The foreigner is billed to wrestle three of the best local mat artists obtainable. Emile Steurs, brother of Alphonse Steurs, the Belgian wrestler; Jack McGrath, the Irish giant of Worcester, or Jim Galvin, the Irish champion of Brooklyn, and probably Bernhard Hansen of the Norwegian Athletic Club, will be the men selected to oppose him.

Kid Herman, one of the best little featherweights developed here in some time, is confident that he will whip Young Riley in the feature bout of ten rounds at the Fairmont A. C. to-night. Two other contests at the same distance will be staged. They will be between Young Carlton and Jimmy Paul, and Walter Carlton and Kid Sweeney. L. Lawlor and Dave Ring clash in a six-rounder and Johnny Warren and Young Doll start the night's entertainment in one of four rounds.

One of the best programmes that the Long Acre Athletic Club has staged for a Saturday night event will be held at the club this evening. Twelve bouts of future greats, two six-round events, and a final, will fill a good night's entertainment.

The Gowanus A. C. of South Brooklyn for to-night have carded three ten-round bouts. The wind-up brings together Johnny Carroll, one of South Brooklyn's best welters, and Charley Lawrence of New York. In the semi-final Frankie Callahan, Brooklyn's clever little bantam who is rapidly forging to the front, meets Al Ginger, another clever boy, and as a curtain raiser Phil Carmine takes on Young Collins. For Nov. 25 the club announces Willie Fitzgerald and "Fighting Jack" Lundy for the welterweight title of Brooklyn.

Walter Coffey, the California middleweight, is in hard training for his ten-round contest with Montana Dan Sullivan, which takes place at the Fairmont A. C. next Tuesday night. Coffey is confident of winning and points with pride to his record made during his short stay here.

There should be plenty of good boxing at the Clermont Avenue Rink, Brooklyn, to-night, when the Royale Athletic Club holds its weekly popular price show. Two ten-round bouts, a six, and two fours, are on the bill. In the ten-round events Billy Lewis of Newark will meet Young Joe Gans of South Brooklyn, and in the other Kid Ross of the Lorimer Athletic Club will try conclusions with Knockout Jack O'Donnell.

Billy Buzz-Saw at work again

Quite a "Cut-up," was Billy, before he graduated into a Public Shoe Analyst. To-day he is the Dr. Wiley of his profession.

Tore its gizzard out, so to speak, and found it sound, as it ought to be.

Tore said gizzard out of a Regal Shoe, too,—just to be impartial.

Found that sound, as it always is.

But the contrast,—you inquire.

—Same grade of Upper Leather—
—Same grade of Outsole Leather——Same grade of Insole Leather—
—Same grade of Workmanship—

Then what was Billy B's object in ripping open such evidently good Shoes?

Oh, just to prove that a Regal $4.85 Shoe has the same identical Style, Material, Workmanship, in it, as other equally good Shoes purchased in other entirely reliable stores at $7.00 or more. (See Sworn Statement in Window).

—Just to prove that Regal Shoe Factories (through huge volume on this grade of Shoe) can buy the Sole Leather and Upper Leather in it at 25% less than same grade could be bought in the usual smaller quantities, by other high-class manufacturers who are able to produce such quality of Shoes.

—Just to demonstrate to Consumers the practical advantage, to them, of the new Regal Shoe Policy which manufactures Regal Shoes at precisely 5% above actual cost, no matter how low that cost may be.

ACROSS CONTINENT ON GLIDDEN TOUR

The future of the Glidden Tour is enveloped in a maze of doubt and uncertainty, and some radical departure from the existing method of endurance contest is certain to come in the near future. Whether future contests will take the form of team competition or contests between individual cars is a question that is causing a great deal of discussion at the present time. While the contest season is rapidly drawing to close and there will be little to indicate the trend of the sport until after the last fall of snow, the nature of next year's Glidden Tour competition is a matter of considerable interest to automobile manufacturers.

Several suggestions have been made regarding a change in the competition. In every case the elimination of speed and the rigid adherence to the iron-bound controls is advocated, and in many quarters a contest framed under the rules that governed the old-time cycle century runs has found considerable favor, with the route stretched from ocean to ocean, making the event a real touring affair. Charles J. Glidden, the donor of the trophy that bears his name, is an ardent advocate of a radical change, and that a transcontinental trip, stripped of the race and control features, would not only make the tour a thoroughly enjoyable one, but furnish an opportunity to judge of the reliability of the cars.

Each kind of contest has its supporters, and it is certain that the matter will be considered in the deliberations by the sport governing bodies during the Winter. In this respect, A. G. Batchelder, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the American Automobile Association, said yesterday that "it is inevitable that the A. A. A. National Reliability Tour sooner or later will be from coast to coast." Mr. Batchelder believes the change will be beneficial not only from a motoring standpoint, but also an invaluable aid to the campaign for better highways, especially in the West. In discussing the proposed change yesterday Mr. Glidden said:

"When the trophy was offered it was intended to promote touring, but this seems to have been lost sight of, and the event has almost assumed the proportions of a road-speed contest. I am entirely in accord with any project that will bring the tour back to the original intention of the deed of gift. I believe the time has arrived when a man wants his family to accompany him on his tours, and any plan looking to this end would receive the support of the motoring public.

"A transcontinental tour, with racing and controls eliminated, would prove a big success, and I firmly believe that 200 or 300 cars would form a cavalcade that would be at once impressive and a striking illustration of the actual wishes of the automobile owners. The team arrangement this year worked well, and is a step in the right direction, but until some plan is devised whereby a man can see the sights of his own country with his family the tour will not measure up to the objects of the original plans of the donor of the trophy."

"It is inevitable that the A. A. A. National Reliability tour, sooner or later, will be from coast to coast," said A. G. Batchelder, Chairman of the A. A. A. Executive Committee yesterday, "but there is a general feeling that this could not be accomplished in 1912. In fact, the Pacific Coast is not ready for the event next year, and P. J. Walker, President of the California State Automobile Association, who acted as referee of the recent National tour for the Glidden and Anderson trophies, did not hesitate to say that the Pacific Slope wanted the Atlantic to the Pacific reliability in 1915, the year of the big fair in San Francisco.

"Highway improvement in the far West is just getting into its most effective strides, and there isn't a State but what has in one form or another an active good roads association, in the organization of which motorists have taken a prominent part. In the Constitution of every automobile club there is reference to good roads, and every club has a Good Roads Committee. In like manner the State bodies composed of these clubs have Statewide committees of a similar nature.

"The man who uses the road practically every day in the year is likely to be a more ardent supporter of highway improvement than is the man whose use of the road is less frequent, and who perhaps is willing to travel at a slower pace. Uutimately, by a big majority, all road users will possess motor-driven vehicles, and hence any distinction between motorists and horsemen is temporary.

"Of course, any action in regard to the 1912 tour could hardly take place until after the annual election of the A. A. A., scheduled for Dec. 5, and the resultant appointment of National boards for the ensuing year. One route suggested has been from the Twin Cities of Minnesota to New Orleans by way of Chicago and Atlanta. Other routes will undoubtedly be put forward, and the 1912 committee will have a considerable number from which to make a choice. These tours unquestionably stimulate road building, particularly so when participated in by amateur owners, as was the case in large degree in the recent successful journey from New York to Jacksonville."

BERGDOLL TO DRIVE.

Amateur to Replace Burman in Benz Car in Grand Prize.

Manager Jesse Frohlich of the Benz team officially announced yesterday that "Bob" Burman, the "Speed King," would not be one of the big three with Hemery and Hearne to drive the Benz cars in the Grand Prize at Savannah. It has been rumored for several days that there was a hitch over Burman driving because of differences arising over the make of tires to be used in the race.

The Benz Company of Mannheim, Germany, wished that a certain make should be used on all three cars. Burman, on the other hand, was using other makes. He endeavored in every possible way, as did the Benz Company, to find some way in which to drive a "Benz" in the race, but after repeated cables an amicable agreement to cancel the contract for the race was reached by Manager Frohlich and Manager Moross for Burman.

It was not until yesterday that Manager Frohlich was able to supplant Burman by securing Erwin Bergdoll of Philadelphia, winner of the recent Fairmount Park Cup race. This amateur driver will pilot his own Benz racer, which won laurels for its driver at the Quaker City meet. Both driver and car left by express for Savannah Friday.

Manual Shooters Defeat Morris.

The Manual Training High School rifle team easily defeated the Morris High School eight, on the latter's range yesterday afternoon, in the Public School Athletic League's rifle tournament, by the score of 275 to 263. Lucas, Hatton, Irvine, and Berg, all of the Manual Training team, made perfect scores of thirty-five points. The scores:

YALE AND PRINCETON EVENLY MATCHED

SMALL SCORE IS EXPECTED

32,000 Persons Will See Game on Yale Field—Rain or Snow Predicted—Parking Places for Autos.

It is a good many years since Princeton sent as good a football team against Yale as Capt. Hart's eleven which plays the Elis this afternoon at Yale field. Coach MacGregor calls them the "eleven fighting boys," and they will trot on to Yale field this afternoon imbued with scrappiness and optimism, which gives them a better chance for victory than Old Nassau has had in a long time. With men who lay wagers, Yale is a favorite. In fact, on the face of the record of football matches between the two institutions, that Yale has won twenty victories and Princeton only seven, the Blue is usually favored.

In characteristic fashion, Yale is expected by the followers of the Blue to blossom out to-day into one of the best football machines that Yale has had in recent years. The team's performance against Brown is mainly the basis for this feeling, for although Brown was a much weaker team than last year, Yale displayed a snap and dash, a knowledge of open football, and a stiff defense, which gave great promise. Variations of the Minnesota shift which Harry Williams taught to Tom Shevlin and Tom Shevlin carried to New Haven are looked for. The forward pass and the onside kick, negotiated by Quarter Back Howe and his speedy ends, Bomeisler and Avery, promise to make this contest a noteworthy exemplification of the reformed open game.

Princeton rooters know all about this versatile Yale attack, and yet they will rally around the team to-day with the largest bunch of rooters that ever followed the team to New Haven. Eddie Hart's eleven is a remarkable defensive machine. It threw back Harvard and it stopped Dartmouth, so it must be pretty good. They say at Princeton, "We may not win, but by jinks, we won't be so certain of that until the game is over."

Tigers Win Some Tough Scraps.

The Tiger has been through some stiffer scraps this season than the Bulldog, and came through the toughest ones with flying colors. The victory over Harvard was nothing to regard lightly because a first-class eleven was defeated on that day. The Dartmouth victory wasn't so much to crow about, but it must be remembered that the Yale game was only a week away and it would not be strategetic policy to display the best features of the team's offense. Princeton hasn't shown much in the way of an attack this year yet, but with the fine collection of players that are collected there this year, it mustn't be believed that the coaches have entirely ignored something effective in the way of a running game in the numerous sessions behind closed gates.

With such an expert as De Witt kicking for Princeton and with Camp and Howe as Yale punters, the ball will be in the air much of the time. De Witt can boot the ball over forty yards at any time and give it a spiral twist which makes it hard to handle. Camp gets away long punts, but doesn't place them as well as Howe. The Yale Captain is a clever kicker of field goals, much better than De Witt, Pendleton or Baker. Yale also has a high-class place kicker in Pete Francis, while Spalding can kick whenever he is called upon.

Both teams have good ends. Yale has no one as good as Kilpatrick was last year. Bomeisler is heavy and fast, but susceptable to injuries. Avery has improved wonderfully lately and has the makings of a good end rush. Sam White has already proved himself a star, and the other Tiger end, Dunlap, may be depended upon to play a great game. In fact, both teams are fortunate in having fast ends, and thus far, they have all been speedy in covering kicks, an important factor in the present game.

Hart and Paul About Even.

At the tackle berths the honors are even. Capt. Hart has been playing a great game at left tackle all season. He gets down the field as fast as an end and is worth two men on the defense. Hart will be against Paul, who is a veteran, and as good a man as there is in the Blue line. Hart played a truly wonderful game against Harvard, repeatedly throwing back Wendell, who is a harder line smasher than Yale has. Hart promises to wind up his football career in a blaze of glory.

Phillips is the other Princeton tackle and he opposes Scully, who shows a bit better in this comparison than the Tiger, although Phillips will be a hard customer to keep quiet. Wilson and Duff compare favorably with Francis and McDevitt, the Yale guards, and the Yale men will have the hardest task of their careers against the two powerful Tigers. Both teams have exceptionally good centres. Ketcham has proved himself a wonder in tearing through and getting men behind the line. Bluethenthal has been almost as effective, and the tussle between these two will be a corker.

It is at quarter back where Yale has a big advantage. Capt. Howe, not only for his actual playing ability, but for his generalship and ability to drive his men at top speed, is a far better man than Pendleton, who is new to the quarter-back position. Howe shows excellent judgment in running off his plays. He varies and mixes up the repertoire of plays in such a way that it keeps the other team guessing all the time. He is very apt at the forward pass and onside kick and an excellent punter and drop kicker. Howe is resourceful and a quick thinker. He will get the most out of his men, that's certain.

Pendleton a Disappointment.

Pendleton's football career has been something of a disappointment because he was heralded as such a wonder last year. Such ends as Kilpatrick watched him so closely when he played half back that he never had a chance to get started. He has a good back field around him this year and may be able to do something in running plays. In a broken field he is fast and a great dodger, but he has not been able to show much of this kind of work at any time this year. Yale's back field, Camp, Spalding, and Dunn, is a bit heavier, but not any faster than the Tiger trio—De Witt, Baker, and Vaughn. The Yale backs have shown no better at advancing the ball, because this feature of Yale's game has been developed faster than Princeton's. Behind the shift, Camp has shown great ground-gaining ability. Dunn as a line smasher isn't any better than Vaughn, and the Tiger is perhaps a better man on the defense

With a defense as well perfected as Princeton's and Yale's has been, not much line smashing is looked for. It is believed that secret practice has developed some variation of shift-end play that the Tigers haven't shown yet. Surely they can't expect to do much with Yale on the straight football tactics they showed against Harvard. The Tigers, too, have been backward in the use of the forward pass and onside kick. The plays are so uncertain that the coaches at Jungletown have avoided them thus far. They mean big substantial gains when the plays work right, and it is very likely that Princeton will spring them in some form to-day. Yale is sure to use them. The Tiger may be expected to have a better defense than attack and will probably try to hold Yale back in the hope of taking quick advantage of an unlooked-for opportunity to score.

Tigers Quick in Getting Fumbles.

Another thing that Princeton has been proficient in this season is following a "loose" ball. The ends, White and Dunlap and Hart and Bluethenthal, have all recovered fumbles this year at critical stages of the game. Yale has shown a tendency to fumble, and unless this weakness is eradicated to-day the Tiger is sure to profit. The Yale ends and some of the linemen have followed the ball keenly after fumbles, and a runaway ball is sure to be the occasion of the liveliest of scrambles.

After all, there isn't very much to choose between the elevens. The element of luck and uncertainty is great and is sure to figure in the result. It's the last game of Princeton's season and the Tiger can battle on to the point of recklessness to gain its end. Yale has the Harvard game ahead. It looks like the best football battle of the year.

The attendance will probably reach 32,000, which means that the Yale stands will be filled to the limit. Tickets for the game are scarce. The rush for New Haven began last night. Trainloads of students from Jungletown arrived in town last night, some to wait for this morning, while others went through to the scene of war. Princeton hasn't beaten Yale since 1903, and the Tigers think it is about time for a victory.

The automobile procession to Connecticut started last night and will continue this morning. The Yale people have acquired the big open lot opposite Yale Field and automobiles may be parked there, which does away with the feature of hiring sentinels to watch your motor during the game.

The Princeton team passed through the city yesterday on its way to Bridgeport, where it spent the night at the Stratfield Hotel, and will not go to New Haven until noon to-day. Pending the building of the new Taft Hotel in New Haven, the crowds did not swarm to New Haven, as in former years.

There will be plenty of regular and special trains to take the crowds to New Haven this morning. The regular trains start at 8:03, 9:15, 10, 10:05, 11, and 12. The specials start at 7:58, 9, 9:12, 9:30, 9:50, 9:58, 10:04, 10:15, 10:30, and 10:55.

The game will begin at 2 o'clock and the officials will be: Referee—W. S. Langford, Trinity; Umpire—Carl S. Williams, Pennsylvania; Field Judge—N. W. Snow, Michigan; Head Linesman—J. H. Costello, Cornell.

RAIN OR SNOW TO-DAY

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 17.—Sleeping to-night within easy access of the gridiron on which they will clash to-morrow the splendidly conditioned Yale and Princeton elevens await the referee's whistle.

The Tigers, delaying at Old Nassau for a Thursday scrimmaging, something of an innovation for elevens of the ranking of the "Big Four" on the week of the final games, did not reach Connecticut in time to come to this city and practice on Yale Field to-day. They reached their quarters at Bridgeport this evening and will be quartered at the Hotel Stratfield there till to-morrow noon.

Resting from scrimmaging since Wednesday afternoon and passing the week of their game with Princeton with only a total of half an hour's scrimmages, the Yale team visited the university field for a limbering up practice.

A prediction of snow or rain from a weather observer alone stands between the football teams and their thousands of followers and a perfect day to-morrow. To-day the sun rose brilliant and bright, but went into obscurity by noon. At 11 o'clock to-night it began to rain heavily.

Yale coaches are confident of success. They point out that Princeton has not shown scoring power and they are skeptical about the Tigers possessing it. While refraining from personal quotations in detail one Yale coach to-night set the score to-morrow at 9 to 3, another at 6 to 0, in Yale's favor. Several of the Yale coaches are of the opinion that no touchdowns will be scored by either team, and they pin their faith on a Yale victory on the clever toe of Capt. Howe and a couple of field goals by him.

Talk of eleventh-hour changes brought only echoes of denials by the Yale coaches as having no basis in fact. Two positions, right tackle and full back, have been in doubt this week, but the coaches have made a final decision to stand pat on the line-up, and for the sake of concerted team play, as they believe, have ordered the same team that proved so effective against Brown last Saturday, excepting that Spalding, who was unable to play then because of an injury, will be restored to right half back.

A game almost record breaking in the number of punts and drop kicks that will be tried seems logical. Yale presents exceptional capital for these enterprises in the distance punting of Camp, the drop kicking of Capt. Howe, and the place goal skill of Francis.

Yale has perfected the line split plays fully as well as any team in the East, but does not feel confident of their success. Spalding is a stellar performer in advancing the ball in this method of attack and his grinding, twisting runs, just outside of tackle, catapulted into the open by the hammer-like tackle shift formations, may puzzle the Tigers for a time, but it is doubtful if they prove effective long enough to yield half the length of the field or a touchdown.

Dunn's line smashing will probably be in evidence when Yale reaches the Tiger 15-yard line and needs heavy power plays for small gains.

Onside kicks are banked upon heavily by both Yale and Princeton. Yale will uncover a few forward passes, but will resort to this method only rarely. Capt. Howe's manipulation of the onside kick is one of Yale's trump cards. Capt. Howe's forward passing to Bomeister has not been shown in public. Like the forward passing to Kilpatrick last year, it has been reserved for the final games.

A new rule will go into effect to-morrow in the prohibition of smoking in the Yale stands. They are of wood and dry as tinder. Last year during the Harvard game they caught fire three times, and the largest blaze was extinguished only with great difficulty. A large number of extinguishers will be on hand to-morrow to be used in case the no-smoking rule is violated.

About 3,500 automobiles will be parked here for the Yale-Princeton game, it is estimated.

The New Haven Automobile Club has pointed the way with signs, and the string of autos will be so continuous that it will be a merry game of following the leader. It is likely that there will be a flow of autos down the Naugatuck Valley from Waterbury. The Berkshire people and those from Northern New York will come over the hills from that direction. Then, of course, there will be a steady stream from New York by way of Bridgeport. These roads are in pretty good condition, although there has been some road repairing near Port Chester.

The traffic regulations in New Haven forbid the use of Chapel Street by autoists. This asphalt line of progress toward the setting sun has all it can do with its lines of trolley cars, and its sidewalks full of pedestrians. Automobilists must go out George Street or Whaley Avenue. Of these Whaley Avenue is to be preferred. Those going out George Street may think they are on the shortest route, but it may prove the longest. Where George Street crosses the Derby Road, which leads to the field from Chapel Street, there will be lines of trolleys and foot travelers and an automobilist is likely to be held up for considerable time. By going out Whaley Avenue toward West Rock fewer obstructions will be met.

Yale Grads Defeat Scrubs.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 17.—An innovation which will be made a permanent affair was launched to-day after the Yale 'Varsity football practice. The graduate coaches tackled the scrubs in a ten-minute playing period, defeating them 18 to 0, and demonstrating that, as long as their endurance lasts, the veterans are the same stars as when they were undergraduates. Spectacular plays were made by Ted Coy, Steve Philbin, Jack Field, and "Dummy" Logan. Three touchdowns were scored by the graduates. Coy, on a kick formation, got away a forward pass to Brooks, who caught cleanly, pulled himself loose, and dashed forty yards for a touchdown. Coy's punting drove the scrubs back, and finally one of his spirals was muffed, and Field, picking up the ball, ran thirty yards for the second touchdown. Steve Philbin was in his former dashing form, but was not called upon for a run until late in the game, when he circled an end and, breaking free, covered half the length of the field for a touchdown. The alumni line-up: Logan, left end; Read, left guard; Arnold, right guard; Brooks, right end; Philbin, left half back; Kistler, full back; Brides, left tackle; Morris, centre; Talbot, right tackle, Field, quarter back, and Coy, hight half back.

Dean Will Not Play in Navy Game.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 17.—The West Point squad is practically free of cripples again, and all the regular men got into the signal practice to-day. Devore is in shape once more and in to-morrow's game with Colgate will return to his place at right tackle, and Finolds gets into the game at left guard. Huston has played every game this season at right guard and to-morrow he will be supplanted by Walmsley. It can be definitely stated now that Dean will not play in the Navy game. He has been suffering from rheumatism for some weeks and is in the hospital. Hodgson will, without doubt, be the man to do the tackling for the Army at Franklin Field. He has been receiving much individual coaching and has developed considerably during the last few weeks. Dean's loss will be felt, but with Hodgson and MacDonald to do the punting the Army is not badly off.

The Riverview team from Poughkeepsie to-day played the Army third eleven. The Riverview boys played a hard game, but they fumbled badly. Army won, 11 to 0.

Tome to Play Swarthmore Prep.

Special to The New York Times.

PORT DEPOSIT, Md., Nov. 17.—To-morrow the Tome football team will play its last game of the season with Swarthmore Prep. at Swarthmore. The Prep. team has been doing good consistent playing all season, and, although they will be outweighed by Tome, they are very fast and will put up a good fight. Coach Mayser has kept his men in excellent condition all season and no one will be missing from the regular line-up. Tome has won victories over Pennington, Western High School of Washington, Atlantic City High School, and Perkiomen, while she met defeat at the hands of Lawrenceville and Hill Schools. Manager McClelland has received a communication from the Bingham Military Institute, Asheville, N. C., challenging Tome to play a post-season game for the Southern Preparatory School championship, and such a game may be arranged to be played in Baltimore some time within the next two weeks.

Wesleyan Ready for N. Y. U.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Nov. 17.—Wesleyan is in splendid condition for her game against New York University at Ohio Field to-morrow and Coach Larry Vorhis and his men expect to close the season with a victory for the cardinal and black. The loss of the Trinity and Williams games has aroused the fighting spirit of the team and the men are determined to make the game a victory. It is safe to say that the team shows considerably more aggressiveness than it did two weeks ago against Trinity. Parkinson's removal from guard to full back has aided this. Diamond, who has gone in at end, is showing up well, though light. Wesleyan will line up as follows: Eustis, right end; McCarthy, right tackle; Durling, right guard; Murphy, centre; Gillias, left guard; Bernhardt, left tackle; Diamond, left end; Bacon, quarter back; Andrews, right half back; Francis, left half back; Parkinson, full back.

Indian Eleven at Syracuse.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Accompanied by a small band of rooters, the Carlisle Indian football team arrived here to-night for its game to-morrow with the Syracuse University eleven. The Redskin conquerors of Pennsylvania, Harvard, and seven other elevens this season, are confident of adding another scalp to their belt. Syracuse was never in better form, and is equally confident. A monster throng will witness the struggle. To-night the Indians were the guests of the Mystique Krewe, and Capt. Burd was made a member of the Onondaga Paleface organization.

JAMES R. KEENE TO QUIT THE TURF

AMERICAN SPORTSMAN ILL

Only Castleton Stud Here and English Farm Remain of Famous Racing Establishment.

With the coming sale of the eight horses that have raced for James R. Keene in England during the past season the entire racing stable of the Vice Chairman of The Jockey Club will be wiped out. The horses on this side of the Atlantic have all been dispersed, and with the exception of his Castleton Stud in Kentucky and his breeding establishment abroad he will not be known to the turf. The reason assigned for the sale of the horses in training in England is the poor health of Mr. Keene. The sale will be held at Newmarket the first week in December.

During the past season the English string won a total of $25,830. Not more than one of his ordinary horses won during the best days of the sport on this side of the Atlantic.

Outram, b. c., 2, by Delhi-Gingham; won two races and $4,000.

Cataract, b. c., 2, by Ben Brush-Running Stream; won one race and $8,435.

Runnymede, ch. c., 3, by Voter-Running Stream; won four races and $10,520.

Blarneystone, ch. c., 2, by Hippodrome-Maid of Erin; won two races and $1,775.

The passing of the James R. Keene stable means the dispersal of one of the most famous racing establishments that ever raced over the American turf. From 1905 until 1909 his stable each season headed the list of winning owners by a large margin, while his Castleton Stud, in addition to furnishing him with practically all of his horses in training, sent many another famous horse to the races.

It was in 1907 that the Keene stable reached the very top of its success, when the total winnings reached the princely sum of $400,806. All of the other years ran well into the six figures and with the solitary exception of 1909, when purses had been greatly reduced, he had a wide margin over all the other racing establishments. In 1909 his total for the year was $112,586, and last year his stable was topped by his total won by the stable of S. C. Hildreth.

To look over the list of winners of the famous stakes of the American turf affords an excellent idea of the marvelous success of the stable. Five times his colors were first in the running of the Futurity, beginning with the memorable victory of Domino in 1893, and for three successive years he scored with Collin, Maskette, and Sweep, while Novelty, the winner of the last running of the stake, was bred at Castleton.

Five times the Brooklyn Handicap went to a Keene horse, when Hornpipe, Conroy, the first three-year-old to win the race, Delhi, Superman, and Celt were all victors. On down through the various other fixtures it would be possible to tell of the triumphs of the stable that was ever one of the most popular that ever raced in this or any other country.

James R. Keene has ever been a sportsman and a particularly shrewd horseman. He spared neither trouble nor expense in gathering together his wonderful breeding establishment, and his horses were invariably in the hands of the very best trainers available, while the same rule was applied to the selection of his riders. His most successful trainer was James Rowe, who now has charge of the Brookdale Farm of Harry Payne Whitney. It was Rowe who fitted the horses for the long-continued score at the head of the winning column. Others of his trainers were William Lakeland, himself a veteran of wide experience; Frank Brown, and Albert Cooper and Tom Green, two negro trainers of experience, also trained the horses.

Jockeys that earned no small measure of fame riding the Keene horses were Henry Spencer, Walter Miller, Fred Taral, Willie Shaw, and James Butwell, while there were many others who before and since have made reputations that began under the perfectly trained champions that were bred at Castleton.

While it is a decided blow to the turf on both sides of the Atlantic to have such a sportsman as James R. Keene withdraw from the sport, it is hardly thought that his retirement from racing is in any way permanent. He is still breeding horses, and it would not be at all surprising to see the white and blue spots back to all their old glory. They are silks that will never be forgotten in America, and there never was a stable more popular from clubhouse inclosure to the limits of the field stand.

TWO JOCKEYS HURT IN RACE.

Allen and Williams Thrown in Steeplechase at Jamestown.

JAMESTOWN, Va., Nov. 17.—Jockey Allen, riding Black Bridge in the steeplechase at Jamestown to-day, was seriously injured when his horse fell at the seventh jump. Ringmaster fell in the same race, throwing Jockey Williams, who was slightly hurt. Jockey Allen lay for some time before medical aid could be procured. It was first reported that he had been killed.

School Teams in Scoreless Game.

The Berkeley School team and Hamilton Institute eleven struggled through a scoreless game yesterday at Van Cortlandt Park, with both sides fighting hard from start to finish. The play of both teams was exceedingly good, and on several occasions when scoring was evident, it was checked by the defensive play of the opposing side. Hamilton was forced to play an entirely defensive game, and its goal line was seriously threatened when time was called.

Pingry School, 5; Kingsley, 0.

Pingry School won a close victory over Kingsley School in a football game yesterday afternoon on the latter's field at Essex Fells, New Jersey, by the score of 5 to 0.

Wesleyan vs. N. Y. U. Here.

The Wesleyan University football team will complete its schedule to-day when it plays the eleven of the New York University on Ohio Field. The Wesleyan warriors have played a hard, clean, game all season, and lost contests to Trinity and Williams by their inability to kick goals from touchdown when they meant victory. The local team has played Williams and lost by an 8 to 6 score and played Trinity a no-score game. After the game the Wesleyan alumni will entertain the team at a smoker.

MacKenzie School Wins Close Game.

Lacrosse on Trial at Columbia.

Lacrosse will be given a real chance to demonstrate itself once more at Columbia University. After months of effort on the part of the supporters of the game to have it reinstated on Morningside Heights, Graduate Manager Harry A. Fisher has consented to an interclass game which will be played next Wednesday afternoon on South Field. At this time Fisher will be on hand to look over the material reporting, and if he considers that it is such as will warrant the reorganization of a 'Varsity team then the sport will again be installed at Columbia.

HORSE SHOW OPENS TO-DAY.

Brilliant Decorative Effects for Annual Exhibition.

With the call of "Boots and Saddles" the curtain will rise on the twenty-seventh annual exhibition of the National Horse Show Asociation at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and when the first class to be judged prances over the fresh tanbark to the fanfare of a military band, the last show that will be held in the Garden will be in full swing. Late yesterday the last electric light bulb was put in place and the final touch that completed the pergola left nothing to be desired from a decorative standpoint.

All of the foreign officers whose blue and gold will add much to the brilliancy of the show have reached New York, and most of them will be seen in action this afternoon and evening in the open jump competition.

This being the last show that will be held in the Garden the management decided that it should excel all previous exhibitions in beauty, just as it will in magnitude, and the decorations are most elaborate. A cream-colored canopy covers the entire ceiling, hiding the big steel girders that support the roof, and over the arena are suspended thirty-four chandeliers containing more than 3,000 Tungsten lights. Twenty-eight chandeliers of 86 lights each are placed over the outer edge of the arena, while above the centre hang six great clusters of lights, containing 130 lights each. Long ropes of smilax and hundreds of branches of evergreens are twined around the chandeliers, and hang in festoons from the ceiling.

The front of the boxes around the entire circumference of the arena are arranged to give the effect of a white balustrade on a stone base, the background being a dark red. The same white balustrade stretches between the pillars along the front of the balcony, and around each of the columns there is a small semi-circular platform which is is also bound by the balustrade.

The pillars are concealed from the front by slender evergreen trees, and between them are stretched wide arches outlined with electric lights. At the top of the columns is an artistic arrangement of white lattice work, in which are twined long vines of smilax. The lower edge of the balcony is concealed beneath heavy draperies. At frequent intervals white posts have been erected at the intersection of the boxes, and each is crowned with a mammoth tulip, in the centre of which is a large Tungsten light, the leaves of the flower softening its rays.

At the Madison Avenue entrance heavy wooden beams and much slender vine-covered trellis work is arranged to give the effect of a pergola, so the impression will be that of stepping from the lobby into a beautiful Italian garden. The Fourth Avenue entrance is treated in the same way.

2:30 P. M.—Judging 9 ponies in harness, Class 89.
2:45 P. M—Judging 27 saddle horses, (novice,) Class 97.
3:20 P. M.—Judging 17 roadsters, (novice,) Class 42.
4:15 P. M.—Judging 57 hunters or jumpers, (first section,) Class 143.
6 P. M.—Recess.
9:30 P. M.—Judging 57 hunters or jumpers, (second section,) Class 143.

HARVARD AND DARTMOUTH.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 17.—In its last signal drill before to-morrow's game against Dartmouth another shift was made in the make-up of the Harvard 'Varsity team this afternoon. At the eleventh hour the coaches decided to put Huntington back at centre and to place Blackall at full back in Huntington's place. Huntington played centre the early part of the season and then was taken to the back field, where he could still do his splendid defensive playing, and where it was expected that he would prove very powerful in the team's attack. His going back to centre, however, was not because of any deficiency shown in the back field, but because, for the Dartmouth game at least, Harvard needs an experienced centre to do the passing back for kicks.

Blackall is the best kicker Harvard has besides Felton, and he did the best work of any of the hard punters in the Princeton game two weeks ago. Blackall also is about as good on attack as Huntington, and he is also a good defensive half back. Campbell and Wendell both will start the game in the back field, and the combination is about the best that could be selected.

The Dartmouth team arrived in Boston to-night in good trim. The Hanover eleven will be slightly the heavier to-morrow. The weather predictions are for a rainy day to-morrow, and as Soldiers Field is in none too good shape this will sadly interfere with the sort of football the teams have been expected to play. Dartmouth is confident that it will win, while the Harvard men are equally so. The line-up will be:

Harvard.	Positions.	Dartmouth.
Leslie	Left guard	Whitmore
Huntington	Centre	Gibson
Fisher	Right guard	Bennett
Storer	Right tackle	Englehorn
O'Brien	Right end	Dana.
Gardner	Quarter back	Llewellyn
Campbell	Left half back	Morey
Wendell	Right half back	Dudley
Blackall	Full back	Snow

New Yorkers Buy $2,500 Racer.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—At the stock yards sale of light harness horses yesterday Fred De Forest, three years old, from the De Forest Stock Farm, Terre Haute, Ind., brought $2,500, the highest price of the day. He was sold to New York parties, who will send him to the Murphy Stable at Poughkeepsie for the 1912 campaign.

City College Seniors Win.

The senior basket ball team of City College easily trimmed the juniors in the second game of the interclass series by the score of 18 to 9, the juniors being outplayed at every stage of the game.

"FOOTBALL: The Intercollegiate Game"

"It is the most remarkable and complete work upon any branch of sport that I have ever seen. The accounts of the great games of the past are painstaking, stirring, vivid and complete. An unusually distinctive and interesting feature of this book is the exhaustive history presented of the development of the game, step by step, from earliest times down to the present day."

A. A. U. DELEGATES ARRIVE.

Everett C. Brown, the Retiring President, Pleased with Kirby's Candidacy.

The twenty-fourth annual convention of the Amateur Athletic Union will be held on Monday at the Waldorf-Astoria, and many delegates from the different associations are now arriving.

Everett C. Brown, the President of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States, as well as President of the Central Association of the Amateur Athletic Union and former President of the Chicago Athletic Association, arrived in New York yesterday. He had several conferences with the Amateur Atlehtic Union officials in this city, and, after going over the reports, announced that he was well pleased over the showing made. Mr. Brown is very enthusiastic over the outlook for the coming year, and believes it will be an important one in amateur athletics owing to America again being represented in the Olympic games in Stockholm in 1912.

In retiring from the head of the Amateur Athletic Union, Mr. Brown is very enthusiastic over the fact that the Presidents of the several associations have induced Gustavus T. Kirby to accept the nomination for President of the Amateur Athletic Union for the ensuing year. Mr. Brown thinks that Mr. Kirby, owing to the number of years he has been interested in the Amateur Athletic Union and athletics generally, would make an ideal President.

Stocks Show Increased Strength, with Good Gains in Steel and Other Active Issues.

TRADING A LITTLE LARGER

Street's View of Mr. Roosevelt's Statement a Factor in the Day's Movements—Large Cash Loss.

Much strength was displayed in the stock market yesterday. The net gains in several of the most prominent stocks exceeded two points, this being notably true of United States Steel, which supplied one-third of the day's somewhat enlarged trading with a resultant net advance of 2½ points. The technical factors in the market which facilitated this forward movement included, so it appeared yesterday, a short interest of some proportions which had been built up during the declining prices of the preceding four or five days, and which supplemented such of the previous short interest as had remained outstanding despite the sharp upturn of the preceding fortnight. The existance of this short interest gave the greater effect to yesterday's buying, and accentuated its influence on prices. Whatever view may be taken of the real importance of the bearing upon the probable course of political events, particularly in respect to their relation to business interests, of the statement on the trust question made by Mr. Roosevelt, it would be idle to pass this over in any summary of the influences which were operative in yesterday's stock market. Market sentiment was undoubtedly favorably affected by the position which Mr. Roosevelt took in respect to the suit against the Steel Corporation, and it was typical of the momentary attitude of the financial district that attention should have been paid to a report that the Government's suit against the Steel Corporation would be withdrawn. That report, though speedily recognized as most highly improbable, may have had some effect upon the day's buying, part at least of which was prompted by a none too careful analysis of the grounds upon which the day's market sentiment was built up. In a broader view of the matter, however, yesterday's advance may be regarded as a result of a renewal of the influence of the increased confidence in the outlook which lately found reflection in a complete change in the market's aspect from the depression which culminated about three weeks ago. The fact is that for various reasons an entirely different attitude has been adopted toward the market in recent weeks than that which was so generally shown during the long period of declining prices. Hopeful developments in respect to the so-called trust question played an important part in this change in sentiment, which fact helps to explain the extent of the improvement in prices brought about by the influences at work yesterday. The revived expectation of a Union Pacific distribution was also a factor which was particularly influential, of course, in the case of Union Pacific itself, which was among the stocks whose net gain exceeded 2 points. An advance of 5 points in General Chemical was the direct result of the declaration of an extra dividend of 5 per cent. This incident helped to add to the day's cheerful tone on the Stock Exchange.

One of the factors underlying the change for the better which recent weeks have brought in the security market has been the indication that the volume of trade, at least in some directions, was increasing while in others firmer conditions were gradually establishing themselves. Yesterday's usual summaries of trade told of further strengthening of business sentiment as a result of gradual increase in activity, while the recent cold weather has also had its normal effect in stimulating seasonable retail trade. The bank clearings for the week have been considerably larger than for the corresponding week of last year, and not very much below the corresponding week in 1909. The day's currency estimates suggested a loss in the neighborhood of $6,000,000 in the cash holdings of the banks. Further gold was taken yesterday for shipment to Canada and for export to Argentina, and although the day's additions to the previous day's gold takings were not large they added something to the estimated cash loss of the week. Interest rates have not been affected by these gold exports.

CONDITIONS OF TRADE.

Commenting on general business conditions, Dun's Review says:

The gains made in recent weeks, even if moderate in volume, have served to strengthen business sentiment, which, as the year draws to a close, is noticeably taking a more cheerful view of the situation. While it is recognized that business is still in a great transition period, and transition means change and uncertainty, yet such progress has been made in necessary readjustment as to impart a better feeling. This is especially noticeable in the West, which for some time this year has seemed to be more depressed than the East, which is closer to the sensitive financial markets. A larger volume of business is being carried on, and there is now further buying for the future. In dry goods there is further large trading in printcloths, while in cotton and cotton goods generally there is a fair movement, with indications of increased orders for forward delivery. The seasonable weather and the approach of the holidays are imparting activity to retail trade. New England shoe factories are quite active and there is a good demand for leather.

Railroad earnings in the first week of November gained 2.3 per cent.

Merchants confronted with the problem of narrower profits are adjusting their business to methods of higher efficiency and are solicitous about overproduction. Imports at New York are increasing, with a total of $20,413,256 during the latest week, against $19,784,364 last year. Exports were $14,736,205, showing a gain of more than $2,000,000 over the two preceding years, but $5,657,051 less than the imports.

Bradstreet's says:

Lower temperatures, with snow or rain, the first touch of real Winter weather, in fact, have been a distinct help to retail trade in seasonable wear, clothing, fur goods, heavy dry goods, shoes, and underwear benefiting, and there has also been a perceptible stimulus given to jobbing re-order trade to fill depleted stocks. Prompt shipment is a requisite to the placing of business, and distant future trade is still lagging.

All parts of the country have benefited, the Northern sections particularly so, and some improvement is even noted in Southern demand, though low-priced cotton has been a bar there to fullest activity. Holiday trade is also more favorably spoken of than at any previous date this season. Collections are not much better, but note a slight improvement at some Eastern and Western centres, though remaining unqualifiedly slow at the South.

The effect upon the agricultural interests of the country of the cold wave has not been very marked, though some wheat is still in the fields unthrashed in the Northwest and much cotton is still unpicked at the South, but the lower temperatures should help the curing of corn. Taken as a whole, the quality of the gathered crops grades lower than a year ago, but current farm prices are better than at this date in 1910.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Few traders on the Consolidated Stock Exchange had looked for so extensive and sustained an advance in prices as took place in the early dealings. While a fair-sized floor contingent had gone home long of the market on Thursday, their expectations had generally favored merely a moderate improvement. Severe punishment was meted out to the short interest, the advance forcing hurried covering in several sections of the list. Commission houses handled a large business in odd lots. The market was broad and active throughout, with sales totaling 114,580 shares, distributed among a list of fifty-eight different stocks.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Cotton Exchange membership of M. H. Rothschild has been sold to Philip McFadden for $14,800, an advance of $50 from last previous sale.

Hawkes, Tewksbury & Co. of Boston have issued a table of New Bedford and Fall River mill corporation stocks, giving capitalization, dividend records, classes of goods manufactured, numbers of spindles and looms, and capitalization per spindle.

The New York Central lines are understood to be negotiating for the sale of $15,000,000 4½ per cent. equipment trust notes to provide for part of the cost of $20,000,000 of new locomotives and cars recently ordered.

The Chesapeake & Ohio is reported to have abandoned negotiations for the purchase of the Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

London and Paris Markets Steady—Canadian Pacific High in Berlin.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Money was in abundant supply and discount rates were easy to-day.

The stock market was fairly steady, but sluggish. Home rails were irregular and mostly lower, and Chinese securities declined. Copper shares, especially Rio Tintos, improved on the diminished visible stocks. Diamond shares closed firm.

American securities opened steady and a fraction higher. Later, the market became firm, under the lead of Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, and United States Steel. Trading was quiet, but prices advanced throughout the day, and the closing was firm.

Money, 1½@1¾ per cent.; rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 3½ per cent.; for three months' bills, 3⅝ per cent.

Gold premium at Madrid, 8.35; at Lisbon, 10.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were steady.

Private rate of discount, 3½ per cent.

BERLIN, Nov. 17.—Prices were firmer on the Boerse to-day. Canadian Pacific was active and closed higher.

Money 3 per cent.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Harvester Stock Idle.

The fact that only a ten-share lot of International Harvester stock was traded in yesterday, despite the attention given to the so-called "trust question," was pointed to as one of the interesting facts of the day's market. International Harvester has lately shown a considerable extent of activity, and its fluctuations have more or less closely followed the changes in the general discussion of the trust question, as well as the developments bearing directly on the Harvester Company's own affairs. At the moment, as the Street understands the company's position, it is attempting to reach a decision whether to give in to the Government's requirements in respect to a reorganization or submit to a suit under the Sherman law. As compared with the ten shares of Harvester Trust stock traded in yesterday, there were no fewer than 250,000 shares of the common stock of the Steel Trust, which made a net gain in the course of the day of 2½ points.

In Steel Corporation's Defense.

One of the points made by Judge Gary in defending the Steel Corporation against the charge of being a combination in restraint of trade has been that its competitors have made no complaint against it. When the Government suit was filed, a number of independent manufacturers came forward with a good word for the biggest producer, and, in fact, the corporation's relations with the independents have offered a marked contrast to the attitude of independent tobacco and oil men toward the two companies which are being dissolved. Further emphasis to the good-will existing toward the Steel Corporation in the iron and steel industry is found in the latest bulletin of the American Iron and Steel Association, which is the organ of the industry as a whole. This publication contains a long statistical article showing the proportionate output of the corporation and the independents in the various lines of products, illustrating the growth of the independents at the expense of the big concern's hold on the industry. Practically the same facts are contained in the report of the Bureau of Corporations on the Steel Trust, which preceded the action of the Attorney General.

Bank Exchanges Gain.

The improvement in general business throughout the country which has been indicated in statistics of bank clearings in recent weeks has continued, according to latest statistics filed by Dun's Review and issued yesterday. The aggregate exchanges for the week in all the leading cities in the United States were $3,135,433,497, which represents a gain over the same week last year of 4.4 per cent., though it is a loss compared with 1909 of 1.3. The outside cities, however, show a gain over 1909 of 3.7 per cent., which is a better test of general business conditions than the figures for the country as a whole, which are largely colored by fluctuation in stock market activity in this centre.

Pleased With Cotton Revision.

Cotton brokers, for once, seem to have found no excuse for complaint over the differences fixed for the varying grades of cotton at Thursday's meeting of the Revision Committee. Opinions seemed to be unanimous yesterday that the new figures were as fair to all parties as such figures in their nature can be. There is no function of the Cotton Exchange, probably, which has been the subject of so much bickering as the periodically fixed premiums and discounts allowed on cotton delivered on Exchange contracts, according as it is above or below the standard grade.

The Brokers' Friend.

A striking change has come about in Wall Street's attitude toward Col. Roosevelt. For the first time in years his name was received with applause when it was mentioned yesterday. Brokers say it is not they, but the ex-President, who has changed, but wise men recalled a favorite utterance of Col. Roosevelt's, when he was in the White House, to the effect that he was really a conservative who, by granting a part of what the radicals demanded, was preventing the growth of socialism.

Vandalia's Dividend.

President Joseph Wood of the Vandalia Railroad, most of whose stock is owned by the Pennsylvania, has sent stockholders an official explanation of the recent passing of the dividend. He reports that in the last annual statement it was shown that it was necessary to draw upon the surplus for a part of the dividend. Notwithstanding this, the Board thought the business of this year would enable the company to declare the regular rate. As the year advanced it was seen that the decreased earnings would not justify this, and in May the rate was reduced to one per cent. quarterly, with the hope that it could be continued. There has been a constant decrease in gross earnings, and this with the inability to reduce expenses accordingly, and at the same time maintain the property, has so reduced net earnings that the dividend could not be continued, except by further drafts on the surplus. The inability to make greater reductions in expenses, says Mr. Wood, is largely due to two causes, over neither of which the officers had control. These are, first, an increase of more than $40,000 in the payrolls, brought about by the establishment of rates of pay to railroad employes by National and State mediation and arbitration boards, and second, an increase of more than $135,000 in expenses of operation, resulting from compliance with the regulations of National and State agencies. Had the advance in class rates proposed last year been authorized, says Mr. Wood, the increased revenue to the company would have about equaled the increased payments for labor.

COTTON EXPORTS HEAVIER.

Nearly 200,000 Bales More This October Than Last, but of Lower Value

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Exports of cotton in October totaled 1,416,000 bales, against 1,240,000 bales for that month last year, but the total value of the staple, owing to the lower price prevailing this year, was only $72,457,000, against $92,551,000 last year.

An opposite condition is reflected in the exports of corn. The 2,908,000 bushels shipped last October had a value of $2,225,000, against $1,835,000 for 3,187,000 bushels exported last year.

There was little change either in the amount or value of wheat sent abroad, but exports of flour were valued at $5,611,000 this year, against $4,702,000 for last October.

METAL MARKET REPORTS.

At the Metal Exchange yesterday trading was quiet, with the tone steady. Copper was a shade higher in the bid for nearby deliveries. Tin was up ¼c. in the asking price. Other commodities were unchanged.

The closing bid and asked prices follow:

	Friday. Bid.	Asked.	Thursday. Bid.	Asked.
Standard copper—
Spot	12.30	12.45	12.25	12.45
November	12.30	12.50	12.25	12.45
December	12.30	12.50	12.30	12.45
January	12.30	12.50	12.30	12.50
Lead	4.35	4.40	4.35	4.40
Spelter	6.40	6.60	6.40	6.60
Tin	43.32½	44.00	43.25	43.75

Pig tin, futures	188	5	0	187	10	0

The market ended steady. Spanish pig lead was easy at a recession of 1s. 3d. to £15 16s. 3d. Cleveland warrants were up 1½d. at 47s. 6d. Spelter was unchanged at £26 15s.

STOCKS OUT OF TOWN

First Preferred Up Three Points on Expectation of Retirement.

Baltimore thought the tape verified the reports that Seaboard Company first preferred would be retired at par soon. The stock was in active demand, and sold up to 98½, adding three points to its previous advance. Seaboard Company second preferred was also active, and 2¼ higher, at 63. Seaboard adjustment 5s were strong, but, after gaining ¼, lost the advance.

Arbitrage houses were credited with a considerable amount of purchasing in the Philadelphia market Friday, while the list was broadened by an increased interest in the copper shares, following the strength of Amalgamated, which rose more than two points. In this group the features were Amalgamated, Calumet and Arizona, Wolverine, and Osceola, all of which advanced, but activity was noted in North Butte, Lake, Mass, Isle Royale, and others. Steel led the industrials, which inclined toward irregularity. Steel sold up to 65, an advance of 2⅞ points for the day, while United Shoe Machinery and United Fruit displayed strength at small gains in prices. United Fruit rights were traded in heavily at around 10½. General firmness was shown in response to the rise in the Wall Street market.

Chicago stocks in most instances showed only fractional changes in price. An exception was Quaker Oats common, which opened more than a point off, and lost an additional point, to 195. A fractional loss was scored in Commonwealth Edison. Other price changes in the majority of issues were upward, advances being fractional. It is learned that the bondholders' reorganization plan did not meet with the full approval of the Directors of the United Box Board Company, and that certain changes will have to be made before the plan is acceptable. The objectionable features are not stated, although Directors and members of the Bondholders' Committee concede that the desired changes can and will be made. The committee representing the Directors of the company and the committee of the bondholders will hold meetings at once for the purpose of making the changes necessary.

Although the arbitrage group of securities continued to display noteworthy strength on the Philadelphia Exchange, the purely local list did not respond with any degree of enthusiasm to the further recovery in Reading, Lehigh Valley, and United States Steel. Of the latter stock no less than 16,775 shares sold during the session at a net rise at the close of 2⅝ points. To be sure, small fractional advances occurred in a number of issues, including Cambria Steel, Philadelphia Company, General Asphalt, the tractions, and United Gas Improvement, but in all these stocks the volume of dealings was much restricted. In the bond department a block of $21,000 Lehigh Navigation improvement 4s came out at 99¾, and there was also considerable dealing in American Gas and Electric 5s and Bergner & Engle 6s. Just before the close Cambria Steel came to life and was lifted to 43⅞, but the rise was slight in comparison to the buoyancy of United States Steel.

Yesterday's transactions on the various out-of-town Exchanges, as reported to THE NEW YORK TIMES, were as follows:

TAKING UP SEABOARD STOCK.

A preliminary step in a movement to dissolve the Seaboard Company, organized in 1905 to supply funds for the reorganization of the Seaboard Air Line Railway, has been taken by the sale of $6,785,000 Seaboard Air Line adjustment 5 per cent. bonds, which were held in its treasury. The bonds were sold to a syndicate of bankers at 81.

The Seaboard Company was incorporated for the specific purpose of acquiring and holding stocks and other securities of the Seaboard Air Line and to furnish funds needed for improvements to the road. The company has accomplished this object and there no longer exists any reason for its continuance. Its assets will accordingly be distributed to the holders of its shares and its affairs wound up. The company was organized with a view to its being dissolved when its need was no longer evident and its breaking up will be a simple matter.

The Seaboard Company has no debt of any description. It has outstanding $6,360,600 of first preferred stock, $15,998,000 of second preferred, and $28,543,300 of common. In the company's treasury there are $21,324,000 of Seaboard Air Line 4 per cent. preferred stock, $29,576,000 railway common, and the $6,785,000 of adjustment bonds which are to be taken over by the syndicate, besides $900,000 of 5 per cent. demand notes of the railway. From the proceeds of the sale of the adjustment bonds, payment of the notes and money on hand it is proposed to retire the first preferred stock at par.

Holders of Seaboard Company second preferred will then receive the Seaboard Air Line preferred stock, on the basis of 133 1-3 shares for each 100 shares of the holding company's stock. Holders of the Seaboard Company's common will receive any surplus of assets in cash or securities, except the preferred shares, remaining. This will mean about 104 shares of Seaboard Air Line common for each 100 shares of the holding company's common stock.

In anticipation of its retirement at par, the Seaboard Company's first preferred stock has advanced from 87, where it sold a few months ago, to 99, gaining three points Friday. The shares are dealt in on the Baltimore Exchange.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Trading in Better Volume, with Prices Tending Generally Higher on Curb.

COPPERS FRACTIONALLY UP

Giroux and British Columbia Exceptions to the General Advance—Active Trading in United Cigar Stores.

Curb stocks were active yesterday and price movements generally upward. Both American Tobacco and United Cigar Stores closed even with the opening levels after minor fluctuations, the latter reporting transactions of 470 shares. Among the Coppers were a number of fractional gains, although Giroux, which reported transactions of 4,000 shares sold off from 4½ to 4¼ and closed at 4⅜. Braden rose from 5¼ to 5⅝ and closed at 5⅝ on sales of 1,300 shares. Greene-Cananea and Inspiration each closed ⅛ above the opening. British Columbia, after selling from 4 up to 4⅛, closed at 3⅞. Ray Central rose 1-16, to 2⅛. Trading in the bond list was well diversified and active.

COMMODITY MARKETS.

WHEAT.—Erratic fluctuations were the rule during yesterday's session. Temporary depression was witnessed at the outset, the result of disappointing cables from Liverpool, which was thought to indicate but little nervousness over the Argentine situation. Private cables, however, viewed conditions in South America as less favorable, with many reports of a heavy rainstorm doing considerable damage. Such information, in conjunction with a sharp falling off in the Northwestern movement in this country, inspired considerable short covering. Congestion was noticeable in the December option at the West, with that delivery showing pronounced strength. Large speculative shorts were credited with covering, and the closing recession was thought to indicate that the urgent demand had been filled, temporarily at least. Sentiment was bearish in the main, it being believed that the technical position has been weakened as a result of the past four days of firmness, but withal there is little aggressiveness, or in any event little progress is made toward establishing much lower levels. Some evidence was discerned of settlement in the cash wheat situation and a little improvement was noted in the export inquiry, but the latter demand continues to be confined to low-grade Manitobas, of which about ten loads were sold overnight. Late cables received by a prominent local concern stating that weather conditions were more favorable in Argentina had some influence, as it is generally admitted that with exceptionally fine prospects for that crop there is plenty of room for deterioration and still leave a record-breaking exportable surplus. Statistical news had little influence. World's wheat exports for the week are expected to be small, probably less than 8,500,000 bushels, which will compare with nearly 11,000,000 last week and 15,000,000 last year. Bradstreet's exports for the week were $3,500,000 bushels, against 3,750,000 last year, and since Jan. 1 totaled 62,000,000, against 42,000,000 bushels last year. The Modern Miller reported that the recent cold snap caused but little damage to new Winter wheat, although rain is still needed to finish seeding in Texas. Cash No. 2 red, quoted locally at 98½c. free on board afloat for export; No. 2 hard, $1.05½; No. 1 Northern Spring, $1.18¾; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.10.

CORN.—The firmness at the start, the result of unsettled weather in the Central West, was not maintained. The volume of speculative offerings on the advance was heavy, resulting in slight net losses for the day. It is apparent that country offerings, despite many claims to the contrary, are about commensurate with the demand. Light stocks, however, and fears of a recurrence of stormy weather retarding movement, check bear aggressiveness. Sentiment continues bullish in the main, due to the short feed crops, but at present levels there is an inclination to act cautiously, especially as the bulk of the crop is still in first hands. There were no sales for export reported from New York. Cash No. 2 new corn quoted 70½c. free on board afloat for export.

OATS.—In sympathy with the steadiness in other grain, prices ruled generally at slight advances. The cash situation is a sustaining feature, and large interests appear to be scaling on the long side, so that offerings are in larger volume on the advances. Cash standards quoted at 54c.; No. 2 white, 54½c.; No. 3 white, 54c.

PROVISIONS.—Irregularity was in evidence during the session. It is apparent, however, that hog receipts are being well absorbed and the steadiness of the market recently, despite bearishness of large interests and desire on the part of packers to secure lower priced hogs has occasioned surprise. Cash trade is very fair, with speculation, however, light.

COTTONSEED OIL.

A slight easing in crude values tended to offset the firmness noticeable at times in the lard market. Trading was unimportant until near the finals, when some operators professed to regard significantly the selling of the November option by interests which were expected to take delivery. At the same time liberal buying of the distant positions, presumably for the West, restricted bear aggressiveness. Tenders were heavier than for some time, amounting to 2,100 barrels, and so far this month aggregate approximately 14,000 barrels. Large cotton crop estimates continue without appreciable influence, but sentiment does not appear to favor higher oil prices at this time. Crude quoted at 4.40 to 4.54.

COTTON.

Prosaic trading continues, and there is little importance being attached to operations from day to day. The session was quite similar to the preceding days of this week, there being brief spells of alternate weakness and strength, and then a decided lull in trading, but net results of each day are insignificant. In the meantime the Southern spot situation is without change, and while some prominent operators are impressed with the market's resistance, especially in face of the large crop estimates, there is little inclination to take to the buying side. In this respect Theodore H. Price points out that, assuming the crop to be 16,000,000 bales and consumption as estimated by Ellison 13,300,000, the surplus would only represent about two months' consumption, which, if held by 2,000,000 cotton producers, would represent less than 1½ bales each. On the other hand, buying by spinners indicates but little desire to anticipate requirements very far in advance, with the general belief that foreigners are displaying more confidence in the price level than the domestic trade. Some interests believe that there will be no important change until the planting season is passed, at which time the present crop, the consumption, and next season's acreage and start will be more than inferential.

Liverpool cables yesterday were slightly disappointing. There were reports of prominent spot interests selling abroad. Advices were again to hand of the Indian crop being estimated at 500,000 bales less than last year, when it was 4,900,000 bales. Good weather conditions continue in the American South, and crop estimates are bearish, some extravagant, ranging from 14,500,000 to 17,000,000 bales. The Mercantile Cotton Crop Reporting Corporation had estimates averaging 14,538,000 bales. There were some private advices from Boston brokers claiming that the Southern spot basis was easier, with prices shaded ¼c a pound as compared with the high of the week. No general weakness was claimed, but it was thought that it was suggestive of an increment in offerings on the slight advances. Week-end statistics were more favorable to holders, emphasizing the unwillingness on the part of the South to sell, and also the increased distribution at lower prices.

The visible of American cotton now totals 3,525,000 bales, or 425,000 above last year; increasing 174,000 for the week following an increase of 257,000 last week, and comparing with 255,000 gain last year. The spinners' takings were 452,000 bales, against 385,000 last week and 354,000 a year ago. Into sight was 626,000 bales, and since Sept. 1 totals 5,932,000, against 5,276,000 last year and 5,410,000 in 1909.

BOTH SIDES SUM UP IN CUMMINS CASE

Counsel for Defense Attempts to Refute Bradley Martin's Story of a Trust Fund.

MOSS ATTACKS CUMMINS

Both sides summed up yesterday in the case of William J. Cummins, controlling factor in the defunct Carnegie Trust Company, on trial for the larceny of $140,000, and on Monday the case will go to the jury after it has been charged by Justice Davis. The trial began on Oct. 17, so that it has been more than a month in progress.

Max D. Steuer, counsel for the defendant, confined his address almost entirely to the specific charge in the indictment, that Cummins stole the proceeds of two notes made by some of his associates and discounted at the Nineteenth Ward Bank. The checks drawn by the Nineteenth Ward Bank for these loans were to the order of the Carnegie Trust Company, but were indorsed over to Cummins and deposited in his individual account.

Bradley Martin, Jr., who was President of the Nineteenth Ward Bank, testified that the money was to go into a trust fund to be held by the Carnegie Trust Company for the payment of loans of Warner M. Van Norden in order to keep off the market stock of the Twelfth and Nineteenth Ward Banks that had been put up as collateral. Mr. Cummins testified that there was no trust agreement, but that the money was to be used by him in acquiring stock of the Carnegie Trust Company, as well as the other banks, to be held in a pool formed by himself, Joseph B. Reichman, Martin J. Condon, and Charles A. Moore, Jr. This was what was done with it according to his testimony. In the course of his argument Mr. Steuer said:

"Let us see if Bradley Martin really did regard this money as a trust fund at the time when he claims it existed as such. Five months after the money was loaned he wrote a letter to the Banking Department in which he spoke of criticism made by the department of the notes on which the money was loaned because they were unsecured. If these notes had been secured by a trust fund they would have been well within the law. Yet despite his claim that they were so secured he writes to the Banking Department that he has notified the makers of the notes that they must be reduced."

Assistant District Attorney Moss went further afield in his argument and denounced the financial operations of Mr. Cummins from first to last. This he did on the ground that the crime charged was that he took the money without evil intent and appropriated it to his own use. It was admitted that he took it, but to determine his intent, Mr. Moss said, the jury must consider the difficulties he was in and the operations which caused them. As Cummins and Reichmann contradicted Bradley Martin, Jr., and other witnesses, it was necessary to consider the credibility of the defendant. Referring to the fact that Bradley Martin had signed stock certificates for Cummins, which it was attempted to show meant that he knew all about the transactions of the stock pool, Mr. Moss said:

"Was it any wonder that he deceived the gullible Martin, that infantile bank President? Cummins dominated this group of would-be bankers, and what a spectacle they have made here on both sides of the case! But Martin was the one little man, when the pinch came, who induced his father-in-law to put up $500,000 to protect the depositors. We will admit that he was foolish, but at least he was a man with a sense of honor.

"'Uncle Bill' seems to have had the faculty of leading people around and making them think what he wanted them to. Why shouldn't he lead them when he could go to the larger banks of this city and get money by planking down guarantee after guarantee until he had $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 of them outstanding? It was no hard thing for him to mold Bradley Martin. A man who could squeeze any juice out of such a dry lemon as the Carnegie Trust Company could handle his small associates."

Mr. Moss said it was Cummins and not Andrew Carnegie who got the best of the famous loan of $2,100,000. He compared the transaction to the case of a ship about to sail on which a lien had been filed. The owner got enough money to pay the lien by rolling out on the wharf barrels of Scotch whisky as security.

"But during the night," said Mr. Moss, "a long boat put out from the ship and crept under the wharf. Men with augurs bored through into the barrels and drew off the whisky. All that was left was the barrels. That's what Carnegie got. That's where the wise Scotchman was done up."

GENERAL MOTORS REPORT.

On account of the change in the fiscal year of the General Motors Company to end July 31 so as to conform more nearly to the manufacturing season, the report just issued to stockholders covers only the ten months ended July 31. For this period the net profits were $4,066,51. The deduction of accrued interest on the 6 per cent. first lien notes left a balance of $3,316,251.

After the payment of the preferred dividend of April 1 and the reservation of four months proportion of the Oct. 1 preferred dividend there remained $2,474,175 undivided profits for the ten months.

There was $2,000,000 applied to reduction of inventories Oct. 1, 1910, and $399,084 applied to adjustment of claims arising out of transactions prior to Oct. 1, which left the profit and loss surplus at $1,240,175 on July 31.

The report explains that the $4,447.146 net profits for the ten months are after the deduction of $725,227 for depreciation, in addition to ordinary expenses required to maintain plants. President Thomas Neal in his general remarks to stockholders says:

> During the year much has been done to improve the quality of the materials, the standard of workmanship, and the design of our motor cars. With this end in view, the company appointed a Director of Production and began to create a general staff of mechanical engineers, gasoline engine engineers, designers, production experts, and other experts not attached to any particular factory, but whose advice and services would always be available to advise with and assist the necessarily more limited staff of each individual factory.
>
> The outlook for the current year is excellent. Purchasers are showing their appreciation of the design and workmanship of the cars, and our companies at present are receiving orders faster than their factories can produce cars, though every effort is being made to meet the demand.

The report explains that the General Motors Export Company and the General Motors Truck Company have been organized to handle, respectively, the company's export and truck business.

SCHWAB BACK FROM CHINA.

Satisfied with His Mission—Served in Suit Against U. S. Steel.

Charles M. Schwab, President of the Bethlehem Steel Company, returning yesterday on the Mauretania from China, was asked what he thought of Mr. Roosevelt's article on trusts.

"I believe, as I did at the organization of the United States Steel Corporation, that business done in the way it is done is the logical development in any country," he said. "As I said before the Stanley committee, the Steel Corporation was organized to reap the benefit of many resulting economies and not artificially to restrict production or raise prices."

Mr. Schwab said he left New York for Peking on Sept. 9 and traveled over the Trans-Siberian Railroad each way to save time. To say that his arrival, and incidentally the Steel Trust, was the cause of the revolution in China was absurd and ridiculous, he said.

"The political situation is such that it would be imprudent," he went on, "for me to say what I might. My mission was very successful."

Mr. Schwab showed a clipping from a Peking newspaper in which it was rumored that he had obtained an exclusive agreement with the Chinese Minister of the Navy for the construction of all war vessels required for the next few years and for their armament. The editor of the paper seemed to doubt the truth of the rumor. Mr. Schwab said he was satisfied with the result of his mission to China.

He added that the new Republican party in China was most favorably inclined toward the United States and anxious to improve its commercial relations with this country. The new college built in Peking with the returned indemnity fund was doing great work in Peking toward this end and its students realized that they would finish their education in one of the American universities.

When Mr. Schwab reached his home, 33 West Seventy-third Street, he found the subpoena and other papers in the Government's dissolution suit against the United States Steel Corporation, which had been awaiting him since Monday. Personal service is not necessary in this suit, and that is why the papers from Trenton were left at Mr. Schwab's house.

YOAKUM SHIFTS FROM GOULD LINES

FRISCO THROUGH TO GULF

Louisville Acquires an Interest in the Frisco's New Orleans & Mobile Road—Texas Pacific Deal Off.

A shift by B. F. Yoakum in the partnership arrangement for the New Orleans territory from George J. Gould of the Missouri Pacific system to Henry Walters, as head of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, and of the Atlantic Coast Line, which controls the Louisville, was inferred yesterday from the announcement that the Louisville & Nashville had joined with the St. Louis & San Francisco in the ownership of the New Orleans, Mobile & Chicago, and that this new arrangement would give to the Frisco the line into New Orleans which it had been proposed to obtain by the Frisco's traffic arrangement with the Missouri Pacific and Texas Pacific, which the latter road did not ratify.

> The Louisville & Nashville Railroad has become interested in the ownership of the New Orleans, Mobile & Chicago Railroad with the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad. This means a great deal to that whole section of country south of the Ohio River.
>
> It is contemplated that the New Orleans, Mobile & Chicago will be extended from some point north of Mobile to a connection with the Louisville & Nashville at some point between New Orleans and Mobile, which will make the New Orleans, Mobile & Chicago the short line between Chicago and both Mobile and New Orleans.
>
> In addition to the contemplated extension of the New Orleans, Mobile & Chicago into New Orleans, that line, under the new deal, will be extended to a connection with the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis at some point at or near Jackson, Tenn., or Lexington, Ky., with traffic or trackage arrangement to Paducah, Ky., on the Ohio River, where it will connect with the new bridge to be constructed over the Ohio River by the Louisville & Nashville, Chicago & Eastern Illinois, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, and the Big Four.
>
> The new plan gives to the Frisco a line from Memphis to New Orleans forty-nine miles shorter than from Memphis to New Orleans over the Missouri Pacific lines west of the river, contract for use of which the Missouri Pacific and Texas & Pacific have not carried out. A saving of forty-nine train miles on each train saves expense.
>
> The New Orleans, Mobile & Chicago was acquired by the Frisco about the middle of last month. It is a road slightly more than 400 miles in length, and gave the Frisco a direct line from Kansas City and Memphis to Mobile. The Louisville & Nashville has a direct line from Mobile to New Orleans, so that the Frisco's need of a shorter connection from Memphis to New Orleans will be provided through a line east of the Mississippi instead of along the west bank, as contemplated under the Iron Mountain agreement.

An official of the St. Louis & San Francisco says that the New Orleans, Mobile & Chicago already has a tonnage of from 8,000 to 10,000 cars a year, which will be turned over to the controlling road at once.

BIG CHEMICAL DIVIDEND.

Raise from 1½ Per Cent. to 5 Per Cent. in This Quarter.

The quarterly dividend declared on the General Chemical Company's common stock yesterday was 5 per cent., comparing with previous regular quarterly declarations this year of 1½ per cent. Last year there was paid, besides the regular cash dividend, an extra 10 per cent. dividend in stock. This 10 per cent. of new stock issued last year participates in yesterday's increased declaration.

After the announcement of the 5 per cent. dividend there was a sharp rise in General Chemical stock on the Exchange. The common shares advanced from 127 to 132. The dividend is payable Feb. 1 to stockholders of record Dec. 30.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The disturbance over Kansas Thursday is now central over the great lakes, attended by rain and snow and high, shifting winds.

Snows are also reported from the Upper Mississippi Valley and the Northwest, and rains rains from the Ohio and Lower Mississippi Valley.

Temperature has risen considerably in the lake region, the Ohio Valley, and the Atlantic and East Gulf States, and has fallen decidedly in the Mississippi Valley.

Temperature will fall Saturday night in the Atlantic States. In other parts of the country changes will be unimportant.

Winds along the New England and Middle Atlantic Coast will be brisk and high south, shifting to west; South Atlantic Coast, moderate south, shifting to northwest.

Steamships departing Saturday for European ports will have high south to west winds, overcast weather, and rain to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND SUNDAY.

Eastern New York—Rain south, rain, probably changing to snow, in north portions Saturday, colder Saturday; Sunday fair, except snow flurrits in extreme north portion; high south to west winds.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Rain followed by clearing Saturday, cold re Saturday night; Sunday fair; brisk and high south, shifting to west winds.

Southern New England—Rain Saturday, colder Saturday night; Sunday fair; high south to west winds.

Northern New England—Rain or snow and warmer Saturday; Sunday fair; brisk and high south shifting to west winds.

3 A. M.	38	28	4 P. M.	43	40
6 A. M.	37	28	6 P. M.	40	40
9 A. M.	39	30	9 P. M.	38	42
12 M.	41	35	12 P. M.	37	42

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 34; for the corresponding date last year it was 40; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 43.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 29; at 8 P. M. it was 41. Maximum temperature, 42 degrees at 3:10 P. M.; minimum, 27 degrees at 1 A. M. Humidity, 56 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 46 per cent. at 8 P. M.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

E. A. Peacock Buys $500,000 Midtown Loft for Investment—William Waldorf Astor Increases His Thirty-third Street Holdings—Another Harlem Theatre—Flushing Estate Sells Under Assessed Value.

There was a decidedly active tone to the realty market yesterday. Several excellent deals were made in different parts of the city, and the Bronx market showed further evidences of the well-sustained activity which has characterized it for some time.

One of the important transactions was the purchase of an old dwelling in East Thirty-third Street by William Waldorf Astor, adjoining two other houses owned by him.

The midtown loft zone furnished one of the biggest out-and-out sales that has taken place in some time, representing about $500,000. It involved the twelve-story loft at 137 to 139 West Twenty-fifth Street, occupying a plot 67 by 98.9 feet, which was sold by James F. Libby for the Theodore Starrett Company to E. A. Peacock of Pittsburgh, Penn. The interesting thing about the deal is that Mr. Peacock pays cash with the exception of a small plot of Pittsburgh property taken by the sellers.

In this latest acquisition of a large plot of New York realty, Mr. Peacock shows his continued confidence in Manhattan real estate, as it was just a year ago that he purchased, also through Mr. Libbey, the Hotel Broztell in Twenty-seventh Street, between Madison and Fifth Avenues, for about $600,000 cash.

The Twenty-fifth Street loft was recently finished, and is entirely rented except two lofts.

William Waldorf Astor Buys on Thirty-third Street.

William Waldorf Astor has increased his holdings on East Thirty-third Street by the purchase of No. 17. The property, which consists of an old-fashioned four-story and basement dwelling, on a lot 25 by 100, was sold by Mrs. Anna Benjamin. Mooyer & Marston negotiated the deal. The buyer holds title to the adjoining parcels, Nos. 15 and 19, covered by similar buildings.

Sale in West 38th Street.

The four-story brownstone residence at 29 West Thirty-eighth Street has been sold by N. Brigham Hall and William D. Bloodgood for John Howard Wright. This is the first sale of the property in over twenty years. The plot is 21 by 98.9 feet.

Theatre for West Harlem.

William H. McKnight has purchased from Golde & Cohen a vacant plot, 125 by 100, on the north side of 115th Street, 153 feet east of St. Nicholas Avenue, and an abutting parcel fronting 32 feet on 116th Street.

Through Edward Margolies the entire plot has been leased for a term of twenty-one years to the Laurel Amusement Company.

A theatre with a seating capacity of about 1,000 will be erected on the site by the buyer and his associates for occupancy in September, 1912.

Negotiations for Seventh Av. Corner.

Negotiations are pending it was learned yesterday for the purchase, evidently for an apartment house operation, of the three buildings on the northwest corner of Seventh Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street, known as 842 and 844 Seventh Avenue. The plot is 50.5 by 100, and is owned by Col. F. M. Lawrence, President of the Union Club. The corner building is a five-story structure known as the Carteret, and the house adjoining is the home of the Caledonian Club. The eleven-story Idaho apartment adjoins the property on the avenue.

A. T. Stewart Heirs Sell.

Helen C. White and other members of that family who are heirs of the A. T. Stewart estate have sold through William A. White & Sons, 136 Bleecker Street, an old four-story building on lot 25 by 100, adjoining the corner of West Broadway.

This is the third sale of property in this street made by the same brokers this month. The buyer is an investor.

Washington Place Deal.

The three four-story buildings 115, 117, and 119 West Washington Place, on a plot 75 by 97, have been sold to a builder by Daniel Rosenbaum.

An Upper Broadway Transaction.

A corporation represented by David Stewart has purchased the southeast corner of Broadway and Fairview Avenue, with frontages of 75 feet on Broadway, 73.4 feet on Fairview Avenue by 100 feet.

The parcel which was sold by Mrs. Catherine C. Middleton is located at the mouth of the tunnel or underground street the city is building to connect Broadway with the 191st Street Subway station, under St. Nicholas Avenue, so as to reduce the intervening grade. It is the intention of the buyers to erect an apartment with stores fronting on the tunnel.

The Private Dwelling Market.

George W. Ely has sold to Mrs. Matilda Rich 32 West Eighty-eighth Street, a four-story dwelling on lot 23 by 100.11, between Central Park West and Columbus Avenue.

Emanuel Klein has sold for Herman Bauman 425 East 122d Street, a three-story dwelling, on lot 16.8 by 100.11.

Operators Buy Bronx Lots.

The plot, which measures 247 by 100, contains about ten lots. John W. Hoatling negotiated the transaction.

W. S. Smith has sold through Kurz & Uran 438 East 158th Street, a one-family dwelling on a lot 25 by 98.6.

S. H. Frankenheim has sold for A. Kern to M. Stein a five-story double flat with stores at 511 East 179th Street, on plot 25 by 100 feet.

Flushing Property at Auction Below Assessment.

Eight parcels of property in Flushing were sold yesterday at auction by David L. Van Nostrand at the Town Hall at a partition sale of the estate of Bernard Carraher. The property which is assessed for $68,000, was sold for $57,500.

The largest plot of the list, a tract of eight acres, was bought by George Pople for $37,500. It is located on Bayside Avenue, near two trolley lines, and the prine is considered a bargain.

As a marked illustration of the alleged excessive rates of assessed valuation in Flushing a cottage at 24 Washington Street was sold to Eugene Fallon for $3,600. It is assessed for $5,800.

Prudential Buys More Newark Land.

One of the largest and most important real estate transactions made in Newark, N. J., for some time has just been closed by the Prudential Insurance Company, which by acquiring three valuable parcels from the Federal Trust Company now obtains ownership of the entire block bounded by Broad, Academy, Halsey, and Bank Streets, with the exception of the plot on which the Essex County National Bank is now erecting its building.

The property purchased is: 739, 745, and 747 Broad Street, and 10 and 12 Academy Street. The dimensions of the property on Broad Street are: 739, 20.8 by 117; 745 and 747, 28.10 by 125 feet. The property on Academy Street has a frontage of 44 by 71 by 36 feet rear.

There are two or three leases given by the Federal Trust Coompany, having five years to run, and this will prevent any proposed building operation by the Prudential until their expiration. Officials of the company said that nothing definite has been decided regarding the new building, but the matter has been frequently discussed, and it is generally believed that when the Prudential acquires absolute control a large insurance structure will be erected. The block is in the choicest section of Newark's business district.

Long Island.

William B. Woodward has purchased a plot, 60 by 100, in Laurelton on Hamilton Street, near Laurelton Boulevard, and has taken out a building permit for the erection of a $6,500 house, which is to be of stucco construction on hollow tile.

The Queens Land and Title Coompany has sold at Massapequa to C. W. H. Beyer Lots 2,986 to 2,990, Section "D," for $1,575; to M. R. Grey Lots 706 and 708, Section "A," for $1,500; to R. L. Callaghan, Lots 2,364 and 2,366, Section "D," for $1,470; to George Hudock Lots 2,315 and 2,316, Section "D," for $880; to Edwin Wilson Lots 807 and 808, Section "D," for $1,280.

Brooklyn.

Tutino & Cerny sold for John Carlson to a client for immediate occupancy the one-family twelve-room cottage on a plot, 40 by 100, known as 952 Seventy-fourth Street.

E. Sharum has sold to a client 98 Warren Street, a five-story tenement, on a plot 27.9 by 99.10.

New Jersey.

Big Bronx Sale To-day.

Joseph P. Day will sell to-day on the premises a large number of lots in the Bronx, comprising the Joseph J. Gleason estate. The property consists of 500 lots and nine two-family concrete houses on Westchester, Gleason, Watson, Ludlow, Story, Commonwealth, Underhill, and adjoining avenues and streets in the Bronx. This locality will be benefited by all the proposed transit facilities for the section, and all the streets and avenues will undoubtedly be put through in a short time. West of this property the American Real Estate Company is developing the old Watson estate.

West Side Apartments.

Plans have been filed for a ten-story apartment house on the northeast corner of Amsterdam Avenue and 119th Street for the Carnegie Construction Company, of which Charles Newmark is President. It will have a frontage of 80.11 on the avenue by 150 feet on the street, and will have accommodations for 119 families. The architects, Schwartz & Gross, estimate the cost at $450,000.

Plans have also been filed for a six-story apartment on the south side of 123d Street, between St. Nicholas and Manhattan Avenues, for the Hancock Construction Company, at a cost of $160,000. It will have a frontage of 100.3 feet and a depth of 90.11 feet, with accommodations for seventy-seven families. Sommerfeld & Steckler, architects, estimate the cost at $160,000.

Leases.

The George Backer Construction Company has leased two lofts in its new building nearing completion on the northeast corner of Madison Avenue and Thirty-second Street, to Wightman & Co., now of 79 Fifth Avenue. This completes the leasing of eight lofts in the twelve-story structure.

Edward M. Lewi has leased for Brody, Alder & Koch 3,000 square feet at 12 West Seventeenth Street; for the Flemish Realty Company 5,500 square feet at 13 and 15 East Twenty-second Street; for the New State Company to the Smart Underwear Company 2,500 square feet at 136 to 140 West Twenty-first Street, and for the Hermitage Company 2,500 square feet at 29 West Fifteenth Street.

Notes.

Gronenberg & Leuchtag are the architects for the new six-story apartment house now under construction by the Irving Judis Company on a plot, 125 by 100 feet, on 157th Street, 200 feet east of Broadway. The operation involves about $175,000.

COUNTRY—FOR SALE OR TO LET.

THE BEST FARM AND HOME LOCATIONS

are in the Southeast United States along the lines of the So. Ry., M. & O. R. R., and G., S. & F. Ry.

Land $10 an Acre and up can be obtained in numerous desirable locations, supporting GOOD CHURCHES, SCHOOLS, STORES, and IMPROVED HIGHWAYS.

Alfalfa Grows Abundantly in nearly all parts of the Southeast. Many acres are producing 4 to 6 tons per season, the crop selling locally from $14 to $22 per ton.

Live Stock and Dairying pay big returns and either is conducted at smaller cost than in any other section of the country. Luxuriant pasturage and forage crops the whole year around are the reasons for this. BEEF and PORK are PRODUCED at 3 TO 4 CENTS per pound.

Apples, Fruit, Vegetables and Cotton are to-day some of the best paying crops of the South. The Va., Carolinas, Tenn., and Ga. apples are fast coming into universal demand and bringing prices that net growers large profits. All these results are obtained on land costing less per acre than the returns of one six-year-old apple tree.

Climate Unsurpassed. Every day in the year one can work in his field. These long seasons allow raising two and three crops from the same soil each year.

Special Literature regarding agricultural, mineral, and geographical conditions, including free subscription to the "Southern Field," will be sent free. Write M. V. RICHARDS, L. & I. Agt., Southern Ry., Room 219, Washington, D. C.

SUMMONSES.

To the above-named defendant:

You are hereby summoned to answer the complaint in this action, and to serve a copy of your answer on the plaintiff's attorney, within ten days after the service of this summons, exclusive of the day of service, and in case of your failure to appear or answer, judgment will be taken against you by default for the relief demanded in the complaint.

Dated New York, October 19, 1911.

To the defendant, Max Kulies, trading as Kulies & Co.:

The foregoing summons is served upon you by publication, pursuant to an order of the Hon. Thomas F. Donnelly, one of the Justices of the City Court of the City of New York, dated the 15th day of November, 1911, and filed with the complaint in the office of the Clerk of the City Court of the City of New York, at No. 32 Chambers Street, Borough of Manhattan, New York City.

Dated November 17, 1911.

LEGAL NOTICES.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT, Southern District of New York.—GEORGE A. BEATON, Complainant, against SEABOARD PORTLAND CEMENT COMPANY and ATLANTIC CEMENT & CLINKER COMPANY, Defendants.—FIDELITY TRUST COMPANY, Cross-complainant, against SEABOARD PORTLAND CEMENT COMPANY and others, Cross-defendants.

To the creditors and all other persons or parties interested in Seaboard Portland Cement Company:

Take notice, that by an order made in the above entitled clause and filed in said court on October 30th, 1911, all creditors or other parties or persons interested in the property or estate of the Seaboard Portland Cement Company having claims against said Seaboard Portland Cement Company are required to file their said claims with Bradford Butler, Esq., Special Master, in said cause, at his offices, 141 Broadway, New York City, on or before November 29th, 1911; and

Take notice, that all creditors or other persons in interest in default of filing their claims as above provided for, will be forever barred from participation in the assets of the defendant Seaboard Portland Cement Company to be distributed.

Dated New York, October 30th, 1911.

MORRIS & PLANTE, Attorneys for Receiver, 135 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, New York City, N. Y.

Dolls Clothed in Silks Are Held Not "Toys"—Lower Duty on Malines.

Because wax dolls were dressed in silks the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday held that they are not to be classified as "dolls" under the present Tariff act, but are "manufactures in chief value of silk," with a tax of 50 per cent ad valorem. The contention for a rate of 35 per cent. under the paragraph for dolls is rejected by the customs tribunal.

It was brought out at the hearing that after a short time the dressed dolls are taken out of windows and either sold to other dealers or offered for sale. As imported they are intended for display use. Judge Howell says in his decision for the board that the articles are not the toy dolls of commerce, and in view of their fancy dresses fall within the silk schedule. The protest is overruled and the Collector affirmed. The importers include the Scruggs, Vandervoort, Barney Dry Goods Company and others.

The board handed down decisions sustaining the claims of importers in cases affecting the classification of goods known as malines or nettings made on the Lever or Gothrough machines. They were returned for duty at the rate of 70 per cent. on the value, and were alleged to be dutiable at only 60 per cent. The latter claim is upheld and the Collector reversed.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

JACOB TAYLOR.—Judge Hough has granted a discharge to Jacob Taylor, livery stable, at 203 West Seventy-seventh Street, who filed a petition on March 4, with liabilities of $6,871.

JOSEPH LEVENSTIEM.—Judge Holt has appointed William Henkel, Jr., receiver for Joseph Levenstiem, grocer, at 3,419 Third Avenue. The assets are estimated at $700 in stock and fixtures.

FORTWENGLERS.—Judge Hough has appointed Clifford G. Ludvigh receiver for Fortwenglers, restaurant, at 47 and 49 Beaver Street, and authorized him to continue the business for ten days.

PINCUS RONGINSKY.—Judge Hough has denied a discharge to Pincus Ronginsky, builder of 154 Henry Street. A petition was filed against him on Jan. 25, 1907, when his liabilities were $557,713 and assets $100.

GREAT EASTERN TRADE SCHOOL.—Sheriff Shea has received an execution against the Great Eastern Trade School at 44 East Thirty-second Street, for $377, in favor of R. Warren Lawrence, and the place has been closed.

JOSEPH FELDMAN, salesman, at 1,133 Broadway, has filed a petition, with liabilities of $14,944 and no assets. The debts were principally contracted in Chicago in 1906 and 1907 and in this city in the last three years. There are 104 creditors.

DISNEY HATS.—Judge Hough has dismissed the two petitions filed on Oct. 25 against Disney Hats, (a corporation,) dealer in hats at 1,486 Broadway and 196 Third Avenue, on application of Jesse Epstein, who stated that creditors had accepted a settlement at 35 cents on the dollar cash.

O. K. BROOM WORKS.—Judge Hough has dismissed the petition filed on Sept. 7, 1910, against Max Ringel and Julius Scheck, doing business as the O. K. Broom Works, at 1, 7, 9, 15, and 17 Lewis Street, on a settlement at 25 cents on the dollar, payable 10 cents cash and 15 cents note at four months.

KRASNOFF BROTHERS & CO.—A meeting of creditors of Krasnoff Brothers & Co., jobbers in notions at 54 Lispenard Street and 91 Avenue A, was held yesterday at the Astor House, and was attended by about seventy-five creditors, and many others were represented by attorneys. There are 350 creditors in all. In the New York stores they carried 4,000 different kinds of goods, and it was difficult to estimate the value of the stock. An approximate statement shows liabilities of $92,700 and net actual assets of $23,000. Accounts to the amount of $47,000 have been pledged to their bankers for advances of $23,000, and the equity in the accounts may be $12,000. Morris B. Arnold, the receiver, was chosen Chairman of the meeting, and he said that from his investigation the unsecured liabilities would amount to at least $75,000, making total liabilities $98,000.

SIR WM. H. WHITE GETS FRITZ MEDAL

MEYER ON THE NAVY

He Tells of Plans to Bring the Various Branches of the Service Closer Together.

Sir William H. White, former Chief Constructor of the British Navy, the designer of the Mauretania, received last night the John Fritz Medal for notable achievement in naval architecture.

The venerable American steel pioneer, in whose honor the medal was founded in 1902, was present, and when Sir William turned to him and said that he would always be "Uncle John" to the engineers of the English-speaking world, Mr. Fritz was overcome with emotion. He is 90 years of age and feeble, and when "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played had to be lifted to his feet by friends.

The occasion of the presentation of the medal, which is one of the highest honors that can come to an engineer, was the nineteenth annual dinner of the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, held in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria last night. Sir William is the seventh man to receive the medal in the nine years since it was founded. The others in the order of his award were Lord Kelvin, George Westinghouse, Alexander Graham Bell, Thomas Alva Edison, Charles T. Porter, and Alfred Noble.

The dinner was the largest in the history of the society. Those present included Secretary of the Navy Meyer, Rear Admiral E. H. C. Leutze, U. S. N.; George Westinghouse, Onward Bates, Rear Admiral Washington Lee Capps, U. S. N.; Rear Admiral Hutch I. Cone, U. S. N.; Baron von Preuschen, the Austrian Naval Attaché in Washington; E. S. Cramp, Simon Lake, Naval Constructors Stocker and McBride of the navy, Lewis Nixon, Commander Vassilieff, the Russian Naval Attaché; Stevenson Taylor, Commander Betzman, the German Naval Attaché; Commander Bartodano of the Argentine Navy, William Barclay Parsons, Col. William C. Church, and C. W. Hunt.

Stevenson Taylor, President of the society, was the toastmaster. He prefaced his introduction of Secretary Meyer with a brief reference to the remarks made by President Hepburn of the Chamber of Commerce at the dinner of the Chamber at the Waldorf on Thursday night. On that occasion Mr. Hepburn, referring to the condition of the American merchant marine, said that in his opinion it would be a good thing to repeal the law of 1792, which forbids American registry to foreign-built vessels.

"Mr. Hepburn called that act the 'acme of protection,'" said Mr. Taylor. "That sentiment is unpatriotic and I wish to resent it."

To Knit Service Together.

Secretary Meyer, who was the first speaker, told of the progress in the American Navy, and the first part of his speech showed what the navy has done for the country besides fighting in the building up of great industries. Mr. Meyer said a board had been appointed to consider the best way of amalgamating with the line the various branches of the service, except the medical and religious, pointing out that the time was one of specialists and that a good naval fighter to-day must also be a good engineer. The idea of the proposed amalgamation will make all officers, except those named, officers of the line and every officer will be a specialist in at least one branch of the profession.

"The underlying principles," he said, "have been that all the combatant elements aboard ship should belong to the same corps, the line, and, further, that all the technical personnel that co-operates to produce the finished ship should also belong to one corps.

"The first of these principles requires the amalgamation of the pay corps with the line. The surgeons and chaplains are non-combatants, and under Red Cross conventions would continue to occupy such status.

"The second of these principles requires the amalgamation of the construction corps with the line. All technical work, except ship design and the supervision of hull construction and accessories, is new line work, such as that in connection with engineering, ordnance, electricity, and torpedoes.

"It is not intended to vary in any respect the present method of specializing or performing technical work in the navy, but simply to unite all specialists into one corps."

Onward Bates of the John Fritz Medal Board of Award followed Secretary Meyer. He presented the medal to Sir William on behalf of the board.

"On Aug. 12, 1902," said Mr. Bates, "our venerated friend, who honors us with his presence to-night, was 80 years old, and on that occasion his friends decided to commemorate that anniversary and his own great achievements with the creation of the John Fritz Medal. A corporation was formed of sixteen members, four from each of the great engineering societies of this country. That board has awarded the medal for 1911 to Sir William Henry White for notable work in naval architecture, and to-night his name is added to those of Lord Kelvin, George Westinghouse, Alexander Graham Bell, Thomas Alva Edison, Charles T. Porter, and Alfred Noble."

Praise for "Uncle John."

"How can I express my thanks,'" said Sir William in accepting the medal," for such distinction as this. By the action of the Board of Award of the John Fritz Medal my name is added to a roll of honor, the first name on which is that of my old friend, the late Lord Kelvin, and this board of eminent American engineers has given me this medal. How can I ever thank you. Think in your hearts how you would feel were you in my place and what you would say if you could.

"This medal is founded to perpetuate the memory of a great engineer, a great and splendid gentleman, a man of such eminent ability and winning personality that we all want to call him our own. To you, Mr. Fritz, my old friend, I can only say that to all English-speaking engineers you will always be 'Uncle John.' To you, Mr. Fritz, weighted down with years, let me say that the memory of your friendship will abide with me as long as I live. We shall not forget 'Uncle John.'"

A pin would have been heard had it been dropped while Sir William was paying his tribute of love and respect to the nestor of American engineers. There was not a dry eye in the whole audience, and when Sir William said, "We will not forget 'Uncle John,'" Mr. Fritz put his handkerchief to his face to hide his emotion.

"As long as I live," he said in conclusion, "the memory of this night will remain with me, and I must always be your debtor."

The evening closed with a reception to Mr. Fritz, during which the engineers present pressed forward to grasp his hand.

Daniel H. Cox Succeeds to the Naval Architects' Secretaryship.

The nineteenth annual meeting of the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, held in the Engineering Building at 32 West Fortieth Street, adjourned yesterday afternoon. The final programme consisted of seven papers on naval and marine engineering subjects by members of the society, the authors of the papers being Naval Constructors William McEntee and T. G. Roberts, Capt. C. A. McAllister of the Revenue Cutter Service, Gregory C. Davison, W. L. R. Emmet, H. McL. Harding, and W. T. Donnelly.

At the morning session of the society the resignation of Naval Constructor William J. Baxter, U. S. N., as Secretary and Treasurer was offered and accepted. Capt. Baxter has been in ill-health a long time, and was unable to give his personal attention to the office. Capt. Baxter is one of the best-known constructors in the navy, and is the officer who was chief of the construction corps that built the battleship Connecticut and the dreadnought Florida at the New York Navy Yard.

Daniel H. Cox was elected Secretary and Treasurer to succeed Capt. Baxter. Among the new members of the council elected are Rear Admiral Richard M. Watt, Chief Constructor, U. S. N.; Cecil H. Peabody, Professor of Naval Architecture in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Homer L. Ferguson, Superintendent of Construction of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, and Commander A. B. Niblack, U. S. N.

SPENCER WAS OFTEN VIOLENT

Friends of Miss Blackstone's Slayer Say He Threatened Several Persons.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 17.—Bertram G. Spencer, on trial for the murder of Miss Martha D. Blackstone, showed nervousness at to-day's session, but he appeared to have better control over himself than on previous days. When a witness testified that Spencer had spoken of the kindness of his mother the defendant covered his face with his hands and sobbed for a moment. The defense is trying to show that Spencer was insane when he shot Miss Blackstone.

Relatives of Spencer and persons who had worked with him were the principal witnesses. They related tales of Spencer's seemingly ungovernable temper and of threats he had made to do bodily harm to several persons. The defendant's sister said Spencer once became angry at his wife's grandfather and threatened to throw him into the Connecticut River, but was restrained by others. The grandfather corroborated this testimony.

Mrs. Bessie Walters of Springfield testified that while Spencer boarded at her house he was hard to get along with, was often melancholy, and had a wild look. One morning she heard him call her. She went to his room and found him trying to make his roommate, Willard L. Wyman, get out of bed. She said he was trying to take Wyman by the throat. She told him to stop, and he drew back, saying: "It was fortunate you came in just then, or I would have killed that man."

Horace M. Clement, who worked with Spencer at a local store, said that one day when he called Spencer's attention to a mistake he had made Spencer reached for a hatchet, but did not pick it up. Cross-examined, the witness said that ordinarily Spencer seemed "fairly normal."

Spencer once drew a revolver and threatened to shoot him, according to Robert E. Miles of Florence. The trouble arose when they were working on a railroad and Spencer tried to take Miles's place as fireman on a locomotive. The engineer quieted Spencer. Miles said he knew Spencer was a good shot and had seen him shoot woodchucks from the train.

The defendant's conduct while in jail was described by William McCart of Holyoke, who said he was on duty at the jail in September and October and guarded Spencer each night. He said Spencer had frequent headaches and asked for wet towels to put on his head.

The prisoner often would ask McCart if any one was speaking when no one had said anything. Spencer showed a peculiar hatred for one of the guards, and would become excited and scream when this guard came near the cell. He was often gloomy and melancholy.

After some hesitation McCart explained that he "had been sent down there for thirty days" and that part of his work as a prisoner was to look after Spencer.

NEW GAMBLING HOUSE RAIDED

"Clerk" Arrested and Police Say He Is Herman Rosenthal.

Inspector Hayes, Sergeant Ray and four detectives made a raid yesterday afternoon on an alleged gambling house at 104 West Forty-fifth Street that had been in operation only three days. The gambling paraphernalia seized was new. The man arrested for running the place said he was Harry Bernstein, a clerk, but the police say he is Herman Rosenthal, a member of the Hesper Club.

While the raid was in progress crowds of people choked the street. The detectives, armed with sledges and crowbars came in an automobile. Their entrance to the basement was barred by a heavy iron door. They chopped away the woodwork and drew the bolt. They next encountered a steel lattice door which they demolished in a few minutes.

On the first floor the police found seven men around a roulette wheel. They were permitted to go, but the wheel was seized, with poker tables and several packs of cards.

NAT C. GOODWIN SETTLES.

Actor and Former Wife, Edna Goodrich, Agree on Allotment of Property.

Nat C. Goodwin and Edna Goodrich, recently Mrs. Goodwin, have come to a financial settlement over the allotment of property, without having to go to the courts. The agreement was reached about a week ago, and the settlement was made in the office of Herman L. Roth, attorney for Miss Goodrich. Moses H. Grossman represented Mr. Goodwin.

When Mr. Goodwin and Miss Goodrich were married a deed of trust was executed by Mr. Goodwin making his wife an equal partner in his income for life from real estate valued at $660,000 and personal property worth $190,000. By the present agreement this deed was abrogated and a financial settlement made. Neither of the lawyers would tell the amount of the settlement

FROWNS ON DANCE AND CARDS

Methodist Bishop Says the Former Made Beattie a Murderer.

SALISBURY, Md., Nov. 17.—Dancing, especially the "round" sort, card playing, and other "worldly amusements," were subjects of animated debate at this morning's session of the Virginia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. President E. H. Rowe of the Southern Seminary, Buena Vista, offered a resolution against dancing, saying that he wished to discourage the desire of some of the young women who attended the seminary for that form of amusement.

Other speakers declared that the conference should not confine its disapproval to dancing, but should go on record against other "worldly amusements." A substitute resolution was finally adopted, calling attention to the church's ruling on these questions. Bishop Kilgo pointed to the Beattie case as an example of the evils to which dancing led.

SEABOARD GETS PAGE LINE.

GREENSBORO, N. C., Nov. 17.—All holdings of the Aberdeen & Asheboro Railway Company have been sold to the Seaboard Air Line. The deal was consummated at Biscoe to-day, but the consideration was not made known. The road extends from Aberdeen to Asheboro, from Pinehurst to Carthage, from Candor to Allerbe, from Biscoe to Mount Gilead, and is known as the Page road.

CLEAN STREETS NOW WITH TRIPLE FORCE

Edwards Has More Men Than He Needs and Dismisses Some Strikebreakers.

CITY CLUB PRAISES MAYOR

The first move toward readjusting his new force of street cleaners was made by Street Cleaning Commissioner Edwards yesterday when he dismissed 221 of the less valuable of his strikebreakers.

The men dismissed, according to reports from District Superintendents, showed little or no inclination to become proficient in the business of hoisting ash cans to carts, and handled a minimum number of loads a day, although they were working three men to a cart.

This morning Commissioner Edwards will reduce the number of men on each cart from three to two, and expects by Wednesday to have his force working one man to a cart, as was the case before the strike.

Commissioner Edwards had a total of 1,830 carts on the streets yesterday, which was above the normal number under ordinary conditions. They were operated by 3,321 strikebreakers and 1,000 civil service men, a force nearly three times as large as the force of regular drivers who went out on strike. The number of loads hauled in Manhattan and the Bronx was 4,012, 800 loads below the normal number hauled each day before the strike.

The men in the streets worked without molestation, and it was decided to reduce materially the number of policemen on strike duty. One man, a strikebreaker from Baltimore, fell from the second to the first story through an elevator shaft in Stable K in West Seventy-seventh Street. Joseph Edwards, the victim of the accident, had been observed walking in his sleep on several previous nights, and it was supposed that he walked into the elevator shaft while in a sleep trance early yesterday morning. He was taken to the Flower Hospital suffering from a fractured skull.

Mayor Gaynor gave out without comment a copy of a letter received by him from the City Club. On the copy handed to reporters an office stamp bore the word "Answered," but the Mayor's answer was withheld.

In the letter, which was an indorsement of the Mayor's action, President Charles H. Strong of the City Club said:

> At the first meeting of the Trustees of the City Club since the strike of the men in the Street Cleaning Department, held Wednesday night of this week, I was, by unanimous vote, authorized to extend to you the cordial approval of the City Club for maintaining that the ashes and garbage must be removed at night. As was said by Ambassador Bryce at the dinner of the Chamber of Commerce, New York is the first among American cities to adopt improved methods of departmental administration. It would be curious indeed if you and Commissioner Edwards should be blamed for your insistence in this respect. I have no doubt that if the men had continued to do the work required by the Commissioner any just grievances would have been redressed, just as Commissioner Waldo on his own initiative is recognizing the justice of certain modifications of the rules of his department concerning the duties of policemen on stationary posts during the Winter season.
>
> Very respectfully yours,
> CHARLES H. STRONG, President.

The letter was carried to the headquarters of the strikers in West Forty-ninth Street while they were engaged in drawing up a statement of their position to present to Commissioner Edwards as the reason for their walkout.

"I can say positively," declared Secretary Prescott of the Drivers' Union, after reading the letter to about 200 strikers, "that this strike was not a deliberate thing planned in advance and ordered as a matter of cool judgment. If Mayor Gaynor had done what the City Club officials say here he 'no doubt would have done had we stayed at work' there never would have been any strike.

"If he had even offered to investigate or had told us he would consider the matter or wanted time to take it up, we would have remained at work. But he brought his fist down with a bang, ordered us out of his office practically, and simply told us to quit if he didn't like our jobs, and he'd hire others who did. It was an extreme tone he assumed.

"No leader could have kept the men at work after the Mayor's words reached them. They were distracted by the lack of sleep from the night work, and extremely irritated through the long effort to gain a hearing for their grievances. They struck directly and entirely under the sting of the Mayor's harsh words before they had time to cool down and thoroughly digest the situation."

Bernard O'Connor, an employe of the commissary department of Stable B in West Fifty-second Street, was stabbed in the left side while purchasing food supplies near the corner of Tenth Avenue and Fifty-third Street last night. Policeman Walsh, who rushed to O'Connor's assistance, was hit in the head by a brick, while another struck him on the left foot with force enough to break two small bones. O'Connor went to the Flower Hospital and the policeman to his home.

In a pitched battle between three patrolmen from the West Forty-seventh Street Station and strikers in front of Stable B, at 614 West Fifty-second Street, last night, Policeman Ira Reader was struck on the head with a brick hurled by one of the strike sympathizers and badly cut. The policemen finally routed the mob.

One of the sympathizers, who persisted in annoying the strikebreakers after they had been hurried into the stable, was arrested. He said he was John Ward of 447 West Forty-eighth Street.

JORDAN READS A LIMERICK.

Leland Stanford Head Poetizes on the California Suffrage Victory.

David Starr Jordan of Leland Stanford University was an unexpected speaker at the Woman's Political Union's big campaign supper and experience meeting at Pabst's, 256 West 125th Street, last evening.

"I bring you greetings from 400,000 women, your sisters and mine," said Mr. Jordan. "They are all registered to vote for the local option election in December."

Mr. Jordan said that he left California for Japan in the middle of the woman's campaign for the vote and only made speeches in two counties, and those were lost. He had promised the women a limerick for their campaign, but the proper rhymes would not materialize until he had left the country. He sent it then to the California women and gave it to the New York women last night. Here it is:

There once was a lady of note
Who vowed she'd do nothing but vote,
  So by night and by day
  She kept on her way,
And at last got the enemy's goat.

The speeches were made in the Grecian Garden at Pabst's, but the 300 people who gathered for the dinner made it necessary to hold it in the main body of the restaurant, which was draped with the union's banners.

Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, who presided, said that the women were celebrating one victory, the defeat of Democratic Assembly nominee George B. Carew in the Twentieth Assembly District, Brooklyn, and one magnificent defeat, Louis A. Cuvillier's victory, in spite of the brave fight the women made against him in the Thirtieth Assembly District.

Quits Trinity Church, Pittsburgh, After Twenty Years to be an Evangelist.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 17.—Quitting the richest parish in Pittsburgh after twenty years, the Rev. Dr. Alfred W. Arundel, rector of Trinity Church, and one of the prominent Episcopal divines of America, will henceforth preach the doctrines of Christian Socialism.

There has been no break between the parish and Dr. Arundel, but he says he feels that he cannot serve two masters and that he can better reconcile himself to the lecture platform than to a rich pulpit.

"I will always remain an Episcopalian," he said. "I am a Christian Socialist and believe in the democracy of the Kingdom of God, the Fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man practically applied, industrial democratization of industry giving every man an equal opportunity, and a co-operative commonwealth. This is what the Gospel means."

A year ago Dr. Arundel enunciated his Socialistic beliefs in a series of sermons for laboring men. Since that time his views have become known broadcast, and he is now considering an offer to become a Socialist evangelist. It is probable that a few more months may find Dr. Arundel a New York pastor. He will go to New York next month to confer with leaders in the movement.

The church Trustees met last night and final overtures were made to Dr. Arundel to reconsider his resignation, but Dr. Arundel decided to go. His church includes many old Pittsburgh families and some of the wealthier folk of Western Pennsylvania.

RARE SHAKESPEARES TO YALE

A. S. Cochran's Gift Is from Huth Collection—Volumes Worth $200,000.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—It is announced that forty-two lots of Shakespearean folios and quartos have been withdrawn from the Huth Library auction sale, having been privately purchased by Alexander Smith Cochran of New York, who will present them to the Elizabethan Club at Yale University.

The gift comprises four folios and thirty-eight rare quartos of plays and poems by Shakespeare. While the price paid for these works has not been made public, their total value is estimated as near $200,000.

Hunters Find Missing Man's Body.

Special to The New York Times.

FISHKILL LANDING, N. Y., Nov. 17.—The finding of the body of George Horton, 52 years old, of Garrison, in the woods by hunters clears the mystery of his disappearance. Last March Horton left his home intending to go to Newburg to sell some property. He did not return and it was feared he met foul play. He was found near Oregon, Putnam County. Near the body was an empty bottle of carbolic acid.

Haynes Falls House Burns.

CATSKILL, N. Y., Nov. 17.—The Haynes Falls House, on the mountain top at the head of Palenville Cove, was destroyed to-night by fire. It was the first Summer hotel in the Haynes Falls region, having been erected by the late Charles Haynes, and was owned by Campbell & Davies of New York City. It accommodated 200 guests, but only caretakers were in the building at the time. The loss is estimated at $60,000.

BRYCE WOULD WRITE OUR HISTORY WITH HIS

Essential Unity of English and Americans Dominant Note of Ambassador's Speech Here.

UNITED, WE LEAD THE WORLD

Except for Music and Art and Why We Have No Great Composers Is Something He Can't Explain.

All through an address delivered last night by the British Ambassador, James Bryce, before the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, and two brief addresses which followed ran the idea, dominant at times, of the essential unity of the English and the American peoples. The hope was several times expressed, not only by the British Ambassador, but by the Rev. Dr. J. M. Farrar and the Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, who, respectively, moved and seconded a rising vote of thanks to Ambassador Bryce for his patriotic and scholarly address, that the two peoples, of a common origin and both enjoying a free government, should grow closer and closer together as their civilizations advanced.

This thought was outstanding in the last sentence of the Ambassador's speech. After outlining the achievements of the English and the Americans, though rarely referred to as a separate people, Ambassador Bryce closed with the earnest hope that when the history of a common race, living on both sides of the Atlantic, is written some centuries in the future it shall be written of a people drawn closer together than they are at present or have been in the past.

The audience burst into prolonged applause over this sentiment, which a moment later suggested to the Rev. Dr. Boynton to say amid more applause that the people of this country hoped and believed that when the Senate returned to Washington and "got its second wind" it would ratify the arbitration treaty with Great Britain.

Dr. Boynton quoted Max O'Rell as saying several years ago that America had a population of 80,000,000 people, "most of them Colonels." He hoped, he said, that such was not the case now, and that the time was not far distant when this country and Great Britain, their swords already turned into plowshares, should need far fewer Colonels than now. Both this sentiment and that of the success of the arbitration treaty were applauded, not only by the audience, but equally as heartily by the British Ambassador.

Ambassador Bryce's subject, "Great Britain and the United States: What They Have Together Done for Progress," naturally linked the two English-speaking peoples together for discussion. The speaker declared that the English and the Americans of the present not only had the same parentage, but had largely preserved, though developing under somewhat different conditions, the same mental and moral characteristics.

With much delicacy, which the audience, from its well-placed applause, evidently discerned and appreciated, Ambassador Bryce spoke of the great Englishmen—poets, historians, naturalists, philosophers, and scientists—as if by common consent they belonged as much to America as to England. He also warmly commended America for its individual contribution to the pre-eminence of the Anglo-Saxon races, saying that this country had outstripped all others in its inventions.

He said, however, that while the Anglo-Saxon had held his own with the world in history, philosophy, and science, had outstripped the world in poetry, certain branches of science, and the art of doing things, he had fallen behind several European civilizations in art and in music. England, he said, had produced but one artist of the first rank. This was Turner. But the English-speaking races were poor musicians. No great composer has been an Englishman, and he had often wondered why this was the case.

"I have asked many musicians, also," he said, "but none could tell me, and I don't suppose it will ever be positively known why our people have no great composers such as rise from the Italian, German, and Slavonic races."

This country and Great Britain were the leaders of the world, however, in free government, his country and this being the great models for the two forms of free government. He admitted that the examples set by Great Britain and America in government were often not very successfully followed, but ascribed this to the character and temperament of the people making the experiment.

Mr. Bryce concluded by saying that he feared two dangers from Governments such as ours and Great Britain's. One was that the Government would crush out the individual, and the other, the pendulum swinging too far the other way, that the Government, because popular, would become too lax.

The Coward Shoe

33 Out of Every 100 School Boys are Flat-footed!

This is the recent statement of a prominent Public School Official, and doubtless an even greater proportion of arch weakness would be discovered among school girls.

Among physiologists, it is generally admitted that "flat-foot" is a frequent cause of spinal trouble, as a broken arch throws the body in strained positions.

Orthopedists agree that proper mechanical support is the only effective remedy for falling arch and "flat-foot." Leading surgeons endorse the COWARD ARCH SUPPORT SHOE as the one which is anatomically correct and helpful.

This shoe, made on the Coward Orthopedic Last, allows the foot to meet the ground in a natural manner. The extension heel and arch support, steady the ankle, raise the sagging muscles, and encourage correct walk and carriage.

The effect on the ankles of wearing shoes that DO NOT support the arch.

Coward Arch Support Shoe and Coward Extension Heel, have been made by James S. Coward, in his Custom Department, for over 30 years.
